

From: Guido Wesdorp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Guido Wesdorp
Netherlands

Note: Guido Wesdorp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Abigail Fenton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Abigail Fenton
United Kingdom

Note: Abigail Fenton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Court
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Court
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Court sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Filip Murar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Filip Murar
United Kingdom

Note: Filip Murar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Pitchford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Pitchford
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Pitchford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Poultney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Poultney
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Poultney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debbie Forsyth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debbie Forsyth
United Kingdom

Note: Debbie Forsyth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anders Ivner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anders Ivner
Sweden

Note: Anders Ivner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pierce Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pierce Brennan
Ireland

Note: Pierce Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M smeir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M smeir
United Kingdom

Note: M smeir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: quentin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

quentin
Spain

—

Note: quentin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Docter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Docter
Netherlands

Note: Docter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tom hopkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tom hopkins
United Kingdom

Note: tom hopkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fin Mull
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fin Mull
Ireland

Note: Fin Mull sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian White
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian White
United Kingdom

Note: Ian White sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Svedberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Svedberg
Sweden

—

Note: Simon Svedberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michaelfoy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michaelfoy
United Kingdom

Note: Michaelfoy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gella
France

—

Note: Gella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ricardo Perdigão
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ricardo Perdigão
Portugal

Note: Ricardo Perdigão sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: KATE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Kate Sarsfield
Ireland

—

Note: Kate Sarsfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth
Germany

Note: Ruth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shaun
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shaun
United Kingdom

Note: Shaun sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G.reynolds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G.reynolds
United Kingdom

Note: G.reynolds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Menari
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Menari
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Menari sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: d.clelow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

d clelow
United Kingdom

Note: d clelow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matjaz Vencelj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matjaz Vencelj
Slovenia

Note: Matjaz Vencelj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Bartley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Bartley
United Kingdom

Note: James Bartley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E. Jinstrand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E. Jinstrand
Sweden

Note: E. Jinstrand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph
United Kingdom

Note: Joseph sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie
United Kingdom

Note: Marie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lizzie Gent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lizzie Gent
United Kingdom

Note: Lizzie Gent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

-M

Germany

—

Note: M sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger willis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger willis
United Kingdom

Note: Roger willis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Franz Hörandtner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Franz Hörandtner
Austria

—

Note: Franz Hörandtner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caterina Bonora
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caterina Bonora
Italy

—

Note: Caterina Bonora sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Skipper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Skipper
England

Note: Robert Skipper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kelvin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kelvin
Jordan

—

Note: kelvin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leom Woodal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leom Woodal
United Kingdom

Note: Leom Woodal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ray
United Kingdom

Note: Ray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrienn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrienn
Hungary

Note: Adrienn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david_mant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david mant
United Kingdom

Note: david mant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ven. Olande Ananda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ven. Olande Ananda
Sri Lanka

Note: Ven. Olande Ananda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melinda Dinh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melinda Dinh
Sweden

Note: Melinda Dinh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Stiggelbout
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Stiggelbout
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Stiggelbout sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nousseir Aissa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nousseir Aissa
Germany

Note: Nousseir Aissa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: N Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

N Young
United Kingdom

Note: N Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pamela gaunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pamela gaunt
United Kingdom

Note: pamela gaunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mads Andreasen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mads Andreasen
Denmark

Note: Mads Andreasen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William Freyermuth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William Freyermuth
Finland

Note: William Freyermuth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georg Stumpf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georg Stumpf
Germany

Note: Georg Stumpf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Caisbrook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Caisbrook
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Caisbrook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carolyn cooper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carolyn cooper
United Kingdom

Note: carolyn cooper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dessens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dessens
Netherlands

Note: Dessens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linnea Tyseng Nicander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linnea Tyseng Nicander
Sweden

Note: Linnea Tyseng Nicander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Sparrow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Sparrow
United Kingdom

Note: David Sparrow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Christie
Republic of Ireland

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Taliesin Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Taliesin Morgan
United Kingdom

Note: Taliesin Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Len Wilkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Len Wilkinson
Spain

—

Note: Len Wilkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jri
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jri
Finland

—

Note: jri sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Davies
UK

—

Note: Caroline Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeanine Powell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeanine Powell
United Kingdom

Note: Jeanine Powell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francesca Bridgewater
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francesca Bridgewater
UK

—

Note: Francesca Bridgewater sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joyce rooke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joyce rooke
United Kingdom

Note: Joyce rooke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: owen adams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

owen adams
United Kingdom

Note: owen adams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: RONAN TOLAND
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

RONAN TOLAND
United Kingdom

Note: RONAN TOLAND sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Wade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Wade
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Wade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fons De Wolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:40:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fons De Wolf
Belgium

Note: Fons De Wolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lellysmum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lellysmum
United Kingdom

Note: lellysmum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: silvia lis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

silvia lis
Spain

Note: silvia lis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Guy Hacha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Guy Hacha
Spain

Note: Guy Hacha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kaj Genberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kaj Genberg
Finland

Note: Kaj Genberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr N. Wiles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr N. Wiles
United Kingdom

Note: Mr N. Wiles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:45

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow ‘fast lanes’ for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a ‘slow lane’. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo
United Kingdom

Note: Jo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annika Skogh Kristiansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annika Skogh Kristiansson
Sweden

—

Note: Annika Skogh Kristiansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sam
United Kingdom

Note: sam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beverley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beverley
United Kingdom

Note: Beverley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arja Terävä
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arja Terävä
Sweden

Note: Arja Terävä sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Valerie Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: George Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Ribbons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Ribbons
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Ribbons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joao Frade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joao Frade
Portugal

Note: Joao Frade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcin
Poland

—

Note: Marcin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick haywood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick haywood
United Kingdom

Note: Nick haywood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andreas Nikani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andreas Nikani
Sweden

—

Note: Andreas Nikani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: André Fortes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

André Fortes
Portugal

Note: André Fortes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorma Heinonen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorma Heinonen
Finland

Note: Jorma Heinonen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: derek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

derek
United Kingdom

Note: derek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gina Stannard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gina Stannard
Australia

Note: Gina Stannard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hristo Ivanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hristo Ivanov
Bulgaria

Note: Hristo Ivanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chorier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chorier
France

—

Note: chorier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fadia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fadia
Spain

—

Note: Fadia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andre Lambelin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andre Lambelin
United Kingdom

Note: Andre Lambelin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan
Finland

—

Note: Susan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S.Hart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S Hart
United Kingdom

Note: S Hart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter smit
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter smit
Belgium

Note: peter smit sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sheila`
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sheila`
United Kingdom

Note: sheila` sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark McGovern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark McGovern
United Kingdom

Note: Mark McGovern sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Kirkwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Kirkwood
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Kirkwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ivan Pellegirn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ivan Pellegirn
Belgium

Note: Ivan Pellegirn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard söderlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard söderlund
Sweden

Note: Richard söderlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dirk Goegebeur
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dirk Goegebeur
Belgium

Note: Dirk Goegebeur sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna Nind
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna Nind
United Kingdom

Note: Joanna Nind sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rudy Van den Berg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rudy Van den Berg
Netherlands

Note: Rudy Van den Berg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iván Marrero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iván Marrero
Spain

Note: Iván Marrero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alick Nee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alick Nee
United Kingdom

Note: Alick Nee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lis
United Kingdom

Note: Lis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco Villani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco Villani
United Kingdom

Note: Marco Villani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conor
Ireland

—

Note: Conor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: colin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

colin
United Kingdom

Note: colin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: wentholt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maarten Wentholt
Netherlands

Note: wentholt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippe Eeckman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippe Eeckman
Belgium

Note: Philippe Eeckman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

As already clearly indicated below:

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugo
Netherlands

Note: Hugo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Blee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Blee
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Blee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jahson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:34

To whom this may concern,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

From: Annelies Schouten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annelies Schouten
Netherlands

Note: Annelies Schouten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nikolai
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nikolai
Belgium

Note: Nikolai sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emmi Konttinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emmi Konttinen
Finland

—

Note: Emmi Konttinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: barbara tavares
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

barbara tavares
France

—

Note: barbara tavares sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Fälber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Fälber
Germany

Note: Oliver Fälber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Berger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Berger
Greece

Note: Berger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antony Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antony Potter
United Kingdom

Note: Antony Potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Ogg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Ogg
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Ogg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Corish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Corish
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Corish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Randall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Randall
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Randall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Atkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Atkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Atkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Tippins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Tippins
United Kingdom

Note: John Tippins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yaro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yaro
Netherlands

Note: Yaro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Björn Persson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Björn Persson
Sweden

Note: Björn Persson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Marks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Marks
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Marks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander
Germany

Note: Alexander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandre Alves da Silva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandre Alves da Silva
Portugal

Note: Alexandre Alves da Silva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morgana Van-Rooyen
United Kingdom

Note: Morgana Van-Rooyen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aristotelis Potamianos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aristotelis Potamianos
Netherlands

Note: Aristotelis Potamianos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Presland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Presland
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Presland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

Or email me directly at: oliverpresland1@gmail.com. I don't mind dealing with arseholes like you.

From: Jennie Kneale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennie Kneale
United Kingdom

Note: Jennie Kneale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin O'Meara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin O'Meara
Ireland

From: Killian Sheridan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Killian Sheridan
Ireland

—

Note: Killian Sheridan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eliane Coquoz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eliane Coquoz
France

Note: Eliane Coquoz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Hanulova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Hanulova
Germany

Note: Maria Hanulova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylvia Craib
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylvia Craib
United Kingdom

Note: Sylvia Craib sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simona Svetec
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simona Svetec
Slovenia

Note: Simona Svetec sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Marrion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Marrion
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Marrion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Foley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Foley
Ireland

—

Note: Frank Foley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph Ferrie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph Ferrie
Portugal

Note: Joseph Ferrie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conrad ellis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conrad ellis
Italy

Note: Conrad ellis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noeleen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noeleen
Ireland

—

Note: Noeleen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sahra Brentel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sahra Brentel
Sweden

Note: Sahra Brentel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Paquete
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Paquete
Portugal

Note: Miguel Paquete sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tessa Elliott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tessa Elliott
United Kingdom

Note: Tessa Elliott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Gilchrist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Gilchrist
United Kingdom

Note: John Gilchrist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Russ Calder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Russ Calder
United Kingdom

Note: Russ Calder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samra
United Kingdom

Note: Samra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate
United Kingdom

Note: Kate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Cashman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Cashman
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Cashman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Barker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Yours sincerely

Jonathan Barker
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Barker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jujhar Singh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jujhar Singh
United Kingdom

Note: Jujhar Singh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANDREA BALDUCCI CASTE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ANDREA BALDUCCI CASTE
United Kingdom

Note: ANDREA BALDUCCI CASTE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raheem Ahmed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raheem Ahmed
United Kingdom

Note: Raheem Ahmed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian
United States of America

Note: Ian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Celine Cart-Lamy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Celine Cart-Lamy
France

—

Note: Celine Cart-Lamy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick OByrne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick OByrne
France

—

Note: Patrick OByrne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Eskola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Eskola
Finland

Note: Ana Eskola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Moruzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Moruzi
Romania

Note: Adrian Moruzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lordbyron Gonzalez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lordbyron Gonzalez
Sweden

—

Note: Lordbyron Gonzalez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lionel Debroux
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lionel Debroux
France

Note: Lionel Debroux sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pitot Eve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pitot Eve
France

—

Note: Pitot Eve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: elizabeth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

elizabeth
United Kingdom

Note: elizabeth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannah
Sweden

Note: Hannah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niall Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

I HAND WROTE THIS!

And I do mean it. There'll be millions of these and I work in web design. So I actually know and understand what we are talking about, in all likelihood better than the people legislating for it.

And the lobbyists proposals are baaaaad news.

Very bad.

It's all fine as is now on paper, but what happens when a new competitor appears. Let them grow or throttle them?

In addition to denial of service attacks, we would potentially see crippling 'over run of service' attacks, meaning the legislation would open up more opportunities for cyber crime we are ill prepared to protect against.

And the list goes on. It's my job and career, I'll be watching.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niall Smith
niallsmi@gmail.com
Ireland

Note: Niall Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Whittaker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Whittaker
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Whittaker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alan bowyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alan bowyer
United Kingdom

Note: alan bowyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Baker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Baker
Armenia

Note: Mary Baker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: katryn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

katryn
United Kingdom

Note: katryn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Piercy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Piercy
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Piercy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Pfeifer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Pfeifer
United States of America

Note: Michael Pfeifer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonio Bergonzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonio Bergonzi
United Kingdom

Note: Antonio Bergonzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Cameron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Cameron
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Cameron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Merle Hensel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Merle Hensel
United Kingdom

Note: Merle Hensel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Wilczek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Wilczek
Sweden

Note: Alexander Wilczek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Willem Jan Withagen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Willem Jan Withagen
Netherlands

Note: Willem Jan Withagen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Gavin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Gavin
United Kingdom

Note: D Gavin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juan Diego Marrero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juan Diego Marrero
Spain

—

Note: Juan Diego Marrero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alga
Italy

Note: Alga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugh Leonard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugh Leonard
United Kingdom

Note: Hugh Leonard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
Ireland

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Langford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Langford
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Langford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Get your hands off, the free and open internet is for everyone.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda Newbery
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda Newbery
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda Newbery sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jari Uimonen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jari Uimonen
Finland

Note: Jari Uimonen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Marquis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Marquis
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Marquis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elly Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elly Davis
The Netherlands

Note: Elly Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E. Daniels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E. Daniels
Netherlands

Note: E. Daniels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stefan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stefan
Romania

Note: stefan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather Bacon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather Bacon
United Kingdom

Note: Heather Bacon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Hungary

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Semple
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Semple
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Semple sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johannes Purovaara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johannes Purovaara
Finland

—

Note: Johannes Purovaara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leena Lemberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leena Lemberg
Finland

Note: Leena Lemberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Britt Linderoth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Britt Linderoth
Sweden

Note: Britt Linderoth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Driftwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Driftwood
Australia

Note: Thomas Driftwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terence Frisby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terence Frisby
United Kingdom

Note: Terence Frisby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sami Gröning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sami Gröning
Finland

Note: Sami Gröning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colm Farren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colm Farren
Ireland

Note: Colm Farren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie
United Kingdom

Note: Valerie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosa Pradana Palomar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosa Pradana Palomar
Spain

Note: Rosa Pradana Palomar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daleth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daleth
Australia

Note: Daleth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Craig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Craig
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Craig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kathy walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kathy walsh
United Kingdom

Note: kathy walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aleksandra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aleksandra
Estonia

Note: Aleksandra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: René Richter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

René Richter
Germany

Note: René Richter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathi
Germany

Note: Kathi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Neish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Neish
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Neish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eoin Mullan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eoin Mullan
United Kingdom

Note: Eoin Mullan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john mc nally
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john mc nally
Ireland

—

Note: john mc nally sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vieri del Bianco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vieri del Bianco
Italy

Note: Vieri del Bianco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.c-lambert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j.c-lambert
Belgium

Note: j.c-lambert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jaap van Manen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jaap van Manen
Netherlands

Note: Jaap van Manen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerry Mackley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerry Mackley
United Kingdom

Note: Kerry Mackley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sebastian Denes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sebastian Denes
Romania

—

Note: Sebastian Denes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pete Wedderburn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pete Wedderburn
Ireland

—

Note: Pete Wedderburn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joshua Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joshua Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Joshua Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jane garnett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jane garnett
United Kingdom

Note: jane garnett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Watts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Watts
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Watts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gillian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gillian
United Kingdom

Note: gillian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Ash-Buechner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Ash-Buechner
Germany

Note: Christine Ash-Buechner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingmar Mürksepp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingmar Mürksepp
Estonia

Note: Ingmar Mürksepp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carey Fluker Hunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Yours
Carey Fluker
U.K.

—

Note: Carey Fluker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniela Ramadani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniela Ramadani
Italy

Note: Daniela Ramadani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Although the following text has been provided for me, it elegantly expresses my personal feelings on the importance of maintaining an internet free of unfair restrictions or control.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Very sincerely

Colin Edwards
UK citizen

—

Note: Colin Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Duncan Lunan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Duncan Lunan
United Kingdom

Note: Duncan Lunan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ger
Ireland

—

Note: ger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nedyalka Chakalova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nedyalka Chakalova
Bulgaria

Note: Nedyalka Chakalova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Kelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Kelly
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Kelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sipos Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sipos Paul
Romania

Note: Sipos Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Cummings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Cummings
Belgium

Note: Ian Cummings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Defiant Idealist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Defiant Idealist
United Kingdom

Note: Defiant Idealist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
Ireland

—

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen veale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen veale
Ireland

—

Note: Helen veale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saja Perpar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saja Perpar
Slovenia

Note: Saja Perpar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Coventry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Coventry
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Coventry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Harrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Harrison
United Kingdom

Note: James Harrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mariska Overheul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mariska Overheul
Netherlands

Note: Mariska Overheul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Denke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Denke
Sweden

—

Note: Peter Denke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominic Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominic Moore
United Kingdom

Note: Dominic Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Duffield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Duffield
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Duffield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Gregory
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Gregory
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Gregory sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Friss Csaba
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Friss Csaba
Romania

From: Ruth Moss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Moss
United Kingdom

Note: Ruth Moss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maira Robertson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maira Robertson
United Kingdom

Note: Maira Robertson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martyn Hallett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martyn Hallett
United Kingdom

Note: Martyn Hallett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Chadwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Chadwick
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Chadwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara
Spain

—

Note: Sara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: routin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

routin
France

—

Note: routin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siobhan O'Brien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siobhan O'Brien
Ireland

—

Note: Siobhan O'Brien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Tchorzewski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Tchorzewski
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Tchorzewski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matty Mitford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matty Mitford
Netherlands

Note: Matty Mitford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Derk Boerma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Derk Boerma
Netherlands

Note: Jan Derk Boerma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Godfried
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Godfried
Belgium

Note: Godfried sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ray Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ray Ryan
Ireland

Note: Ray Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Braak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:49

Dear Legislators,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity and equality.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the rich, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Braak
Germany

—

Note: DB sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--I quite agree that there should be some control as much harm can be attributed to the internet too - child abuse and the spread of terrorist views - however, much good has come from empowering people to comment on environmental and political issues and sites like Avaaz should be protected.

Ann Williams
United Kingdom

—

Note: Ann Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maire Haughey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maire Haughey
United Kingdom

Note: Maire Haughey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Hinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Hinson
United Kingdom

Note: Frank Hinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugo Callens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugo Callens
Belgium

Note: I sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Mason
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Mason
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Mason sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darren Borrows
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darren Borrows
United Kingdom

Note: Darren Borrows sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rochat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rochat
Netherlands

Note: Rochat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Edwards
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Mackenzie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Mackenzie
United Kingdom

Note: John Mackenzie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eileen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eileen
United Kingdom

Note: Eileen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron Asjes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ron Asjes
Netherlands

Note: Ron Asjes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mia Strandh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mia Strandh
Sweden

Note: Mia Strandh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Davide La Guidara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Davide La Guidara
United Kingdom

Note: Davide La Guidara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wende
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wende
Germany

Note: Wende sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eliese Ritchie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eliese Ritchie
United Kingdom

Note: Eliese Ritchie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: m.scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

m.scott
Netherlands

Note: m.scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennie McLean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennie McLean
United Kingdom

Note: Jennie McLean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Albert Arts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Albert Arts
Netherlands

Note: Albert Arts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helena K
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helena K
United Kingdom

Note: Helena K sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicola
United Kingdom

Note: Nicola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: René M. Micallef
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

René M. Micallef
Italy

Note: René M. Micallef sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Playfair
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Playfair
United Kingdom

Note: M Playfair sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Norie Cashman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Norie Cashman
Ireland

—

Note: Norie Cashman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Greg Fewer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Greg Fewer
Ireland

Note: Greg Fewer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Graham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Graham
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Graham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kari Vaskivuori
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kari Vaskivuori
Finland

—

Note: Kari Vaskivuori sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ewan Lockerbie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ewan Lockerbie
United Kingdom

Note: Ewan Lockerbie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: I karney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:30:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

I karney
United Kingdom

Note: I karney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Heckett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Heckett
United Kingdom

Note: Jo Heckett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Winfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Winfield
United Kingdom

Note: Frank Winfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ed
United Kingdom

Note: Ed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Shackleton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Shackleton
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Shackleton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Nelson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Nelson
United Kingdom

Note: John Nelson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Black
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Black
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Black sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mick O'Reilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mick O'Reilly
Ireland

—

Note: Mick O'Reilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Finch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Finch
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Finch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob
Sweden

—

Note: Jacob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Lane
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annika Nyberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annika Nyberg
Sweden

—

Note: Annika Nyberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuela Gonzalez Freitas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuela Gonzalez Freitas
Portugal

Note: Manuela Gonzalez Freitas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Kindrat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Kindrat
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Kindrat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Cullen-Crouch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Cullen-Crouch
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Cullen-Crouch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pauline Tyndale-Biscoe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pauline Tyndale-Biscoe
Spain

—

Note: Pauline Tyndale-Biscoe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gonçalo Fonseca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gonçalo Fonseca
Portugal

Note: Gonçalo Fonseca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Paterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Paterson
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Paterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Enda Collins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Enda Collins
Ireland

Note: Enda Collins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron McHugh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ron McHugh
United Kingdom

Note: Ron McHugh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lori Menzies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lori Menzies
United Kingdom

Note: Lori Menzies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Rotheram
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Rotheram
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Rotheram sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Wise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Wise
United Kingdom

Note: Tim Wise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: THOMAS ESKENAZI
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

THOMAS ESKENAZI
France

—

Note: THOMAS ESKENAZI sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorge Vidal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorge Vidal
Spain

Note: Jorge Vidal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sotiris.papadeas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sotiris papadeas
Greece

—

Note: sotiris papadeas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denes Kovacs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denes Kovacs
Hungary

Note: Denes Kovacs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernadette Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernadette Morgan
United Kingdom

Note: Bernadette Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael E. Chaloner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael E. Chaloner
United Kingdom

Note: Michael E. Chaloner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Maddern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Maddern
Belgium

Note: Richard Maddern sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maristella Prusac
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maristella Prusac
Sweden

Note: Maristella Prusac sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: charles hatton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

charles hatton
United Kingdom

Note: charles hatton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann-Louise Vadman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann-Louise Vadman
Sweden

Note: Ann-Louise Vadman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zusanne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zusanne
Sweden

Note: Zusanne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrina Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katrina Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Katrina Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlet Chan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlet Chan
United Kingdom

Note: Charlet Chan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rosemarie lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rosemarie lee
United Kingdom

Note: rosemarie lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Gewecke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Gewecke
Germany

Note: Valerie Gewecke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vanessa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vanessa
United Kingdom

Note: Vanessa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Roullier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Roullier
Netherlands

Note: Anne Roullier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Higgins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:33

Dear Sirs,

I write regarding the creation of BEREC net neutrality guidelines.

Without functionally unlimited resources, prioritising some traffic into "fast lanes" reduces the resources available to other traffic, creating de facto "slow lanes" which is inherently discriminatory. Allowing this filtering of traffic to occur based on bidding will stifle any message not promoted by major businesses, and thus reduce diversity and de facto freedom of the press.

Conversely, preventing service providers from prioritising content (through preferential treatment, "zero-rating", class-based traffic management, or other methods of gatekeeping) fosters diversity, competition, and innovation by requiring content providers to focus on quality of product rather than depth of pockets to gain audiences.

Regulators in the United States, Brazil, and India, have already adopted strong net neutrality rules. Europe must similarly protect an open and democratic Internet. I request that you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis: <https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Higgins
United Kingdom

Note: David Higgins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vera Iates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vera Iates
United Kingdom

Note: Vera Iates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: maria joão luz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

maria joão luz
Portugal

Note: maria joão luz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Jauke Jonker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Jauke Jonker
Netherlands

Note: Simon Jauke Jonker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eirini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eirini
Cyprus

Note: Eirini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Austin Chambers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Austin Chambers
United Kingdom

Note: Austin Chambers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Bouwman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Bouwman
Netherlands

Note: Anne Bouwman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil
United Kingdom

Note: Phil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gary Kemp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gary Kemp
Portugal

Note: Gary Kemp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Vella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonne Vella
Malta

Note: Yvonne Vella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Buchanan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Buchanan
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Buchanan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Hardman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Helen Hardman]
England]

—

Note: Helen Hardman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John E. E. Fleming
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John E E Fleming
United Kingdom

Note: John E E Fleming sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maricela Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maricela Daniel
Spain

Note: Maricela Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola Littlewood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicola Littlewood
United Kingdom

Note: Nicola Littlewood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
Greece

—

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gillian Dunn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gillian Dunn
United Kingdom

Note: Gillian Dunn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie eichler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie eichler
United Kingdom

Note: Marie eichler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: N Gibbins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

N Gibbins
United Kingdom

Note: N Gibbins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: d_arnes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

d arnes
United Kingdom

Note: d arnes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andra Marasteanu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andra Marasteanu
Romania

Note: Andra Marasteanu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Nicola James
United Kingdom

Note: Nicola James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jerry Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jerry Davies
United Kingdom

Note: Jerry Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Traquair
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

It is reprehensible, grossly undemocratic and totally against the tenets and principles of the EU

--

Robert Traquair
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Traquair sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marilyn James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marilyn James
United Kingdom

Note: Marilyn James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen
United Kingdom

Note: Helen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Neve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Colin_neve]
[UK]

—

Note: [Colin Neve] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: william irvine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

william irvine
United Kingdom

Note: william irvine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Egbert van Milgen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Egbert van Milgen
Netherlands

Note: Egbert van Milgen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Miley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Miley
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Miley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peraxel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peraxel
Sweden

Note: Peraxel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Axel Westerlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Axel Westerlund
Finland

Note: Axel Westerlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Pardey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Pardey
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Pardey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lara
United Kingdom

Note: Lara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ewa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ewa
Germany

Note: Ewa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Othen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Othen
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Othen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin.
United Kingdom

Note: Martin. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris lomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris lomas
United Kingdom

Note: chris lomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan posen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan posen
Spain

—

Note: Dan posen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dukie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dukie
United Kingdom

Note: Dukie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ferdinand Verheus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ferdinand Verheus
Netherlands

Note: Ferdinand Verheus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Hermanns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Hermanns
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Hermanns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Cordingley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey Cordingley
England

Note: Geoffrey Cordingley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuel Milhinhos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuel Milhinhos
Portugal

Note: Manuel Milhinhos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Newman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Newman
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Newman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marta Michalak-Gomez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marta Michalak-Gomez
United Kingdom

Note: Marta Michalak-Gomez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dev
United Kingdom

Note: Dev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Fisher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Fisher
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Fisher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: An
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

An
Netherlands

Note: An sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bethany Lester
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bethany Lester
United Kingdom

Note: Bethany Lester sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BERNARD jp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BERNARD jp
France

—

Note: BERNARD jp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Baines
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Baines
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Baines sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Skaidra Trilupaityte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Skaidra Trilupaityte
Lithuania

Note: Skaidra Trilupaityte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tracey Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tracey Morgan
United Kingdom

Note: Tracey Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Asger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Asger
DK

—

Note: Asger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gustav Johansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gustav Johansson
Sweden

—

Note: Gustav Johansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frauke Krahnert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frauke Krahnert
Germany

Note: Frauke Krahnert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Rosenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Rosenberg
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Rosenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Murphy
Ireland

Note: Margaret Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antero
Sweden

Note: Antero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Evison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Evison
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Evison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas PORTELETTE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas PORTELETTE
France

—

Note: Thomas PORTELETTE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evagoras Charalambous
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evagoras Charalambous
United Kingdom

Note: Evagoras Charalambous sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margareta Egeberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margareta Egeberg
Sweden

Note: Margareta Egeberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: miss.gillian.jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

miss gillian jones
United Kingdom

Note: miss gillian jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samir Hasancevic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samir Hasancevic
Denmark

Note: Samir Hasancevic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeanine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeanine
Netherlands

Note: Jeanine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gunnel Fogelström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gunnel Fogelström
Sweden

—

Note: Gunnel Fogelström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Bartlett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Bartlett
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Bartlett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lyn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lyn
United Kingdom

Note: Lyn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Jakubowski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Jakubowski
United Kingdom

Note: John Jakubowski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Senior
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Senior
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Senior sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francisco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francisco
Spain

—

Note: Francisco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ms k banner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ms k banner
United Kingdom

Note: Ms k banner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dl
France

—

Note: dl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maton Jean-Luc
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maton Jean-Luc
Belgium

Note: Maton Jean-Luc sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: IHalpin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

IHalpin
United Kingdom

Note: IHalpin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Reiff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Reiff
Germany

Note: Michael Reiff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcela Diez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcela Diez
Spain

Note: Marcela Diez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rado
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Rado
Ireland

Note: Rado sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Wallington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Wallington
United Kingdom

Note: D Wallington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kamil Karas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kamil Karas
Poland

—

Note: Kamil Karas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T. Boughton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T. Boughton
United Kingdom

Note: T. Boughton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Hardtke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Hardtke
Germany

Note: M Hardtke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Pollo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Pollo
Greece

Note: Anna Pollo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: martin walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

martin walsh
United Kingdom

Note: martin walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Neues - Hildebrandt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Neues - Hildebrandt
Germany

Note: Ruth Neues - Hildebrandt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Shimmings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Shimmings
United Kingdom

Note: David Shimmings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samantha Barham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samantha Barham
United Kingdom

Note: Samantha Barham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr S Clews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr S Clews
United Kingdom

Note: Mr S Clews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alex wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alex wilson
United Kingdom

Note: alex wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mlada
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mlada
Slovenia

Note: mlada sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Misse Ibrahimagic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Misse Ibrahimagic
Germany

Note: Misse Ibrahimagic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William S
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William S
Sweden

Note: William S sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rossana Vittani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rossana Vittani
Italy

—

Note: Rossana Vittani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration:

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anette
Sweden

Note: Anette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: clare Jordan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Jordan
[UK]

Note: clare Jordan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pablo Palacios Torne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pablo Palacios Torne
Spain

—

Note: Pablo Palacios Torne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Turnbull
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Turnbull
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Turnbull sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare Halton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Halton
United Kingdom

Note: Clare Halton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debi Jenkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debi Jenkins
United Kingdom

Note: Debi Jenkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amit
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amit
India

—

Note: Amit sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Mullins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Mullins
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Mullins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Laursen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Laursen
Denmark

Note: Julie Laursen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefanos Stefanos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefanos Stefanos
United Kingdom

Note: Stefanos Stefanos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: W.Weemaes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

W.Weemaes
Netherlands

Note: W.Weemaes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: yann goerres
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

yann goerres
Luxembourg

Note: yann goerres sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bradley Fowler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bradley Fowler
United Kingdom

Note: Bradley Fowler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: Ruth Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Hungary

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kaira van Wijk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kaira van Wijk
Netherlands

Note: Kaira van Wijk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John ford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John ford
United Kingdom

Note: John ford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemary Scott
Ireland

Note: Rosemary Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sanne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sanne
Netherlands

Note: Sanne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Zita Cronin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Zita Cronin
Ireland

Note: Helen Zita Cronin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew McGowan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew McGowan
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew McGowan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Farouk Missoum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Farouk Missoum
United Kingdom

Note: Farouk Missoum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Cluley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Cluley
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Cluley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Audrey GERALDINE BARBER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Audrey GERALDINE BARBER
Spain

Note: Audrey GERALDINE BARBER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ignas Strimaitis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ignas Strimaitis
Lithuania

Note: Ignas Strimaitis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graeme Stanley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graeme Stanley
United Kingdom

Note: Graeme Stanley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marta Pérez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marta Pérez
Spain

Note: Marta Pérez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petra Gowans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petra Gowans
United Kingdom

Note: Petra Gowans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Billy Batson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Billy Batson
Austria

Note: Billy Batson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eva westra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eva westra
Netherlands

Note: eva westra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erik Jörgenfelt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erik Jörgenfelt
Sweden

Note: Erik Jörgenfelt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stella Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stella Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Stella Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wolfgang Holoch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wolfgang Holoch
Germany

Note: Wolfgang Holoch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Marchant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Marchant
Spain

—

Note: Jennifer Marchant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inge Marie Kristiansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inge Marie Kristiansen
Denmark

Note: Inge Marie Kristiansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anca
Romania

Note: Anca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alfred Leyens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alfred Leyens
Belgium

Note: Alfred Leyens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
Sweden

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirstin Langlois
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirstin Langlois
United Kingdom

Note: Kirstin Langlois sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lawrence Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lawrence Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Lawrence Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Coughlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Coughlin
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Coughlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabrielle Chadwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabrielle Chadwick
United Kingdom

Note: Gabrielle Chadwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronald Hoskins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronald Hoskins
United Kingdom

Note: Ronald Hoskins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Holzman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Holzman
United States of America

Note: David Holzman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matilda Nyman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matilda Nyman
Sweden

Note: Matilda Nyman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Abas ali
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Abas ali
United Kingdom

Note: Abas ali sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Hardwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Hardwick
United Kingdom

Note: John Hardwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenna Westerholm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenna Westerholm
United Kingdom

Note: Jenna Westerholm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terry Worthington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Terry Worthington
United Kingdom

Note: Terry Worthington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JC Audergon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JC Audergon
United Kingdom

Note: JC Audergon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john hughes
United Kingdom

Note: john hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Mallinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Mallinson
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Mallinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Powell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Powell
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Powell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Webb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Webb
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Webb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nikolay Aretov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nikolay Aretov
Bulgaria

Note: Nikolay Aretov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorota
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorota
Cyprus

Note: Dorota sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leif Holmlid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leif Holmlid
Sweden

Note: Leif Holmlid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hess
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hess
Netherlands

Note: David Hess sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Souter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Souter
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Souter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Preeti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Preeti
United Kingdom

Note: Preeti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jurgen Dorries
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jurgen Dorries
United Kingdom

Note: Jurgen Dorries sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: adi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

adi
United Kingdom

Note: adi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Vd.heijden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Vd heijden
Netherlands

Note: J Vd heijden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zalchion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niclas
Sweden

—

Note: Niclas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pete Kovacs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pete Kovacs
United Kingdom

Note: Pete Kovacs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claudia Vollmers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claudia Vollmers
Germany

Note: Claudia Vollmers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Beckius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Beckius
Sweden

Note: Daniel Beckius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

European values of equality and equity must be preserved from all corruption or attack - whether these arise from violent religious extremists, or unchecked corporate power.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Ryan
Ireland

Note: Rachel Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Turton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Turton
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Turton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danielle Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danielle Brennan
United Kingdom

Note: Danielle Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donna Bennett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Donna Bennett
United Kingdom

Note: Donna Bennett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary Bolger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary Bolger
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary Bolger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vicki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vicki
United Kingdom

Note: Vicki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laila Hammer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laila Hammer
Sweden

Note: Laila Hammer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Fiveash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Fiveash
United Kingdom

Note: Raymond Fiveash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Thomson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Thomson
United Kingdom

Note: David Thomson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stijn Van Herpe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stijn Van Herpe
Belgium

Note: Stijn Van Herpe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hazel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hazel
United Kingdom

Note: Hazel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nadira Siddique
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nadira Siddique
United Kingdom

Note: Nadira Siddique sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marigold.hodgkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marigold hodgkinson
United Kingdom

Note: marigold hodgkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Felix Oppenheim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Felix Oppenheim
Sweden

Note: Felix Oppenheim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G.tolhurst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G.tolhurst
Portugal

Note: G.tolhurst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T Field
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T Field
United Kingdom

Note: T Field sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David O'Connor Thompson, United Kingdom

Note: [David O'Connor Thompson] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leonard Brookes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leonard Brookes
United Kingdom

Note: Leonard Brookes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bruce Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bruce Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Bruce Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silke Hurler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silke Hurler
Germany

Note: Silke Hurler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Vieira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Vieira
Portugal

Note: Miguel Vieira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andreas Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andreas Hansen
Denmark

Note: Andreas Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erich Steyrer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erich Steyrer
Austria

Note: Erich Steyrer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Gillian Plummer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Gillian Plummer
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Gillian Plummer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Elisavet Nikolaidou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Elisavet Nikolaidou
Greece

Note: Maria Elisavet Nikolaidou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Limburg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonne Limburg
Netherlands

Note: Yvonne Limburg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ashley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ashley
United Kingdom

Note: Ashley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fernando Varanda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fernando Varanda
Portugal

Note: Fernando Varanda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vispi Shroff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vispi Shroff
Ireland

—

Note: Vispi Shroff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathrin Mueller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathrin Mueller
United Kingdom

Note: Kathrin Mueller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ivan and Sue Godfrey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- We urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, We urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ivan and Sue Godfrey
United Kingdom

Note: Ivan and Sue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Owens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Owens
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Owens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Gregory
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Gregory
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Gregory sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monika Mueller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monika Mueller
Germany

Note: Monika Mueller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daphne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daphne
Netherlands

Note: Daphne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: simon pugsley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

simon pugsley
Netherlands

Note: simon pugsley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: AP Sofras
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

AP Sofras
Greece

Note: AP Sofras sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arvind Sivaramakrishnan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arvind Sivaramakrishnan
United Kingdom

Note: Arvind Sivaramakrishnan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rita
United Kingdom

Note: Rita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lloyd Palmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lloyd Palmer
Belgium

Note: Lloyd Palmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ricardo Leite
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ricardo Leite
Australia

Note: Ricardo Leite sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Townsend
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Townsend
United Kingdom

Note: John Townsend sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tanya Owen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tanya Owen
United Kingdom

Note: Tanya Owen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: IanTucker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

IanTucker
United Kingdom

Note: IanTucker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: colin.scrimgeour
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

colin scrimgeour

UK

—

Note: colin scrimgeour sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katayoun Khorrami
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katayoun Khorrami
United Kingdom

Note: Katayoun Khorrami sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linzi Bagshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linzi Bagshaw
United Kingdom

Note: Linzi Bagshaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isobel McAllister
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isobel McAllister
United Kingdom

Note: Isobel McAllister sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
Ireland

—

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Mark Brown
UK

—

Note: Mark Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Harroes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Harroes
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Harroes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Boulter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Boulter
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Boulter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sebastian Reich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sebastian Reich
Germany

Note: Sebastian Reich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Momchil Enchev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Momchil Enchev
Bulgaria

Note: Momchil Enchev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nora Moya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nora Moya
United States of America

Note: Nora Moya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Giesel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Giesel
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Giesel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: georgeg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

georgeg
United Kingdom

Note: georgeg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pamela naylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pamela naylor
United Kingdom

Note: pamela naylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Preisinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Preisinger
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Preisinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally
United Kingdom

Note: Sally sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bob funke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bob funke
Portugal

Note: bob funke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: June Liggins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet. The man who invented the Internet stated quite clearly that this should be free and open to ALL citizens of the world!!

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

June Liggins
United Kingdom

Note: June Liggins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leroy Ketelaars
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leroy Ketelaars
Netherlands

Note: Leroy Ketelaars sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BILL GARRETT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BILL GARRETT
Ireland

Note: BILL GARRETT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kaushika Shah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kaushika Shah
United Kingdom

Note: Kaushika Shah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Stuart Dower
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Stuart Dower
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Stuart Dower sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim Kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Kim Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Senta depuydt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Senta depuydt
Belgium

Internet is the last possibility for some freedom of expression. This is vital to a more human world

Note: Senta depuydt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruthie Howard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruthie Howard
United Kingdom

Note: Ruthie Howard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ida van velthoven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

DON'T FENCE US IN !! - an ordinary citizen in the Netherlands.

--

ida van velthoven
Netherlands

Note: ida van velthoven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grzegorz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grzegorz
Poland

Note: Grzegorz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cornelia Haas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cornelia Haas
Germany

Note: Cornelia Haas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Scovell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Scovell
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Scovell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Lakstigala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Lakstigala
Latvia

Note: Anna Lakstigala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: barry cohen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

barry cohen
Netherlands

Note: barry cohen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Esther Schneider
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Esther Schneider
Germany

Note: Esther Schneider sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david.whatley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david whatley
United Kingdom

Note: david whatley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Douglas Gonzalez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Douglas Gonzalez
Gibraltar

Note: Douglas Gonzalez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Parker
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsten Grønlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsten Grønlund
Denmark

Note: Kirsten Grønlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shirley Carter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shirley Carter
United Kingdom

Note: Shirley Carter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Kloiber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Kloiber
Austria

—

Note: Simon Kloiber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mattias Martinsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mattias Martinsson
Sweden

Note: Mattias Martinsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Van den Bergh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Van den Bergh
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick Van den Bergh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miriam Feehily
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miriam Feehily
United Kingdom

Note: Miriam Feehily sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tina
United Kingdom

Note: tina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannes Säly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannes Säly
Austria

Note: Hannes Säly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karvel Andersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karvel Andersen
Sweden

Note: Karvel Andersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manne Forsberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manne Forsberg
Sweden

Note: Manne Forsberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna
United Kingdom

Note: Anna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henk van Tuinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henk van Tuinen
Netherlands

Note: Henk van Tuinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jose Amores
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jose Amores
United Kingdom

Note: Jose Amores sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane CHESTERS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane CHESTERS
United Kingdom

Note: Jane CHESTERS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jana Bašteková
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jana Bašteková
Slovakia

Note: Jana Bašteková sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sören Samuelsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sören Samuelsson
Sweden

—

Note: Sören Samuelsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: patricia_hurley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

patricia hurley
United Kingdom

Note: patricia hurley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Santana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Santana
Netherlands

Note: Santana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemarie Hennessy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemarie Hennessy
Ireland

—

Note: Rosemarie Hennessy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Hipkiss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Hipkiss
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Hipkiss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Bond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Bond
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Bond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Lanchbury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Lanchbury
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Lanchbury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Smith
Hungary

Note: Martin Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James
Ireland

—

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anders Sinding
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anders Sinding
Denmark

Note: Anders Sinding sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anneleannon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anneleannon
Spain

—

Note: anneleannon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Colin Swatridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Colin Swatridge
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Colin Swatridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucy Aphramor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucy Aphramor
United Kingdom

Note: Lucy Aphramor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eleonore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eleonore
Sweden

—

Note: Eleonore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francoise Fischer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francoise Fischer
France

—

Note: Francoise Fischer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott Lucas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott Lucas
United Kingdom

Note: Scott Lucas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gentilhomme
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gentilhomme
United Kingdom

Note: gentilhomme sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean Comerford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean Comerford
United Kingdom

Note: Sean Comerford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Brunning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Brunning
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Brunning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kane
United Kingdom

Note: Kane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronny Dohmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronny Dohmen
Germany

Note: Ronny Dohmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joerg Fahlenkamp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joerg Fahlenkamp
Finland

Note: Joerg Fahlenkamp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meera Thaker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meera Thaker
United Kingdom

Note: Meera Thaker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddy Moust
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddy Moust
Netherlands

Note: Eddy Moust sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin Petersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin Petersen
Germany

Note: Karin Petersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Davis
United Kingdom

Note: Valerie Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Lupp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Lupp
Denmark

Note: Daniel Lupp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shehzada javied
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shehzada javied
Gibraltar

—

Note: Shehzada javied sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henrik Caspersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henrik Caspersen
Denmark

Note: Henrik Caspersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Forrester
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Forrester
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Forrester sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Flicoteaux
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Flicoteaux
France

—

Note: Flicoteaux sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SUSAN BURNS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SUSAN BURNS
United Kingdom

Note: SUSAN BURNS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominik Kaša
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominik Kaša
Czech Republic

Note: Martin Kaša sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: W. Bontenbal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

W. Bontenbal
Netherlands Antilles

Note: W. Bontenbal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Woodham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Woodham
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Woodham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Digant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Digant
United Kingdom

Note: Digant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: annelise bjørka gede
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

annelise bjørka gede
Denmark

Note: annelise bjørka gede sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisa
United Kingdom

Note: Lisa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lili Adeli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lili Adeli
Germany

Note: Lili Adeli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva
Portugal

Note: Eva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan whiting
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan whiting
United Kingdom

Note: Alan whiting sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tracy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tracy
United Kingdom

Note: Tracy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Saunders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Saunders
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Saunders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Bayley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Bayley
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Bayley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silke Sauritz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silke Sauritz
Germany

Note: Silke Sauritz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Gorick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Gorick
United Kingdom

Note: Maria Gorick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean Sciberras
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean Sciberras
Malta

—

Note: Sean Sciberras sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donald Maclean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Donald Maclean
United Kingdom

Note: Donald Maclean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Barrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Barrett
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Barrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin
United Kingdom

Note: Colin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: VERONIKA BLUMENBACH
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

VERONIKA BLUMENBACH
Germany

Note: VERONIKA BLUMENBACH sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mihaela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mihaela
Bulgaria

Note: Mihaela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brenda brenninkmeijer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brenda brenninkmeijer
Netherlands

Note: Brenda brenninkmeijer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ingrid.metulj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ingrid.metulj
Slovenija

Note: ingrid.metulj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Charlton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Charlton
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Charlton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shamima Chowdhury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shamima Chowdhury
United Kingdom

Note: Shamima Chowdhury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Justin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Justin
United Kingdom

Note: Justin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iain Leith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iain Leith
United Kingdom

Note: Iain Leith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pieter van Blom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pieter van Blom
Netherlands

Note: Pieter van Blom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Jordan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Jordan
Ireland

—

Note: David Jordan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: luca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

luca
Germany

Note: luca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: christina bryson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

christina bryson
United Kingdom

Note: christina bryson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Coates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Coates
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Coates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Lucas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Lucas
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Lucas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sylvie gomez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sylvie gomez
United Kingdom

Note: sylvie gomez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gulzreen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gulzreen
United Kingdom

Note: Gulzreen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iren
United Kingdom

Note: Iren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Morrissey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Morrissey
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Morrissey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Michie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Michie
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Michie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valentin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valentin
Bulgaria

Note: Valentin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elwyn Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elwyn Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Elwyn Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sean mcelhone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sean mcelhone
United Kingdom

Note: sean mcelhone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: walter mcphee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality is important for the running of an internet with democratic outcomes. giving corporate businesses the right to choose the rights of access to the internet will result in reduced choice and more targeted manipulated options for citizens.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

walter mcphee
United Kingdom

Note: walter mcphee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rui André
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rui André
Portugal

Note: Rui André sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia schaaap
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia schaaap
Netherlands

Note: Julia schaaap sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon György
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon György
Hungary

Note: Simon György sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cristiano Caldeira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cristiano Caldeira
Portugal

Note: Cristiano Caldeira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joshua Todd Gillis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joshua Todd Gillis
Italy

Note: Joshua Todd Gillis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ray Melville
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ray Melville
United Kingdom

Note: Ray Melville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Grace
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Grace
UK

—

Note: Chris Grace sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M BRANSBY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M BRANSBY
United Kingdom

Note: M BRANSBY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Calle Dahlström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Calle Dahlström
Sweden

Note: Calle Dahlström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tommy Dahlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tommy Dahlin
Sweden

—

Note: Tommy Dahlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Burak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Burak
Germany

Note: Burak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie
United Kingdom

Note: Sophie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kjell Gröndahl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kjell Gröndahl
Sweden

Note: Kjell Gröndahl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas von Rottenburg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas von Rottenburg
Germany

Note: Thomas von Rottenburg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: robert.pottinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

robert pottinger
United Kingdom

Note: robert pottinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anders cnattingius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anders cnattingius
Sweden

Note: Anders cnattingius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Constandache Tiberiu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Constandache Tiberiu
Romania

Note: Constandache Tiberiu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Nuttall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Nuttall
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Nuttall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harpreet kaur
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harpreet kaur
United Kingdom

Note: Harpreet kaur sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Wickman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Wickman
Finland

Note: Jan Wickman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samantha Smithson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samantha Smithson
United Kingdom

Note: Samantha Smithson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graeme Phillipson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graeme Phillipson
United Kingdom

Note: Graeme Phillipson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan McClelland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan McClelland
United Kingdom

Note: Susan McClelland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Horrocks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Horrocks
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Horrocks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Houchala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Houchala
United Kingdom

Note: Houchala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josefin Robertsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josefin Robertsson
Sweden

Note: Josefin Robertsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerald Bowker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerald Bowker
United Kingdom

Note: Gerald Bowker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Indra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Indra
Indonesia

Note: Indra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Stuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Stuart
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Stuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cécile Fruteau
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cécile Fruteau
France

—

Note: Cécile Fruteau sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Molnar Catalina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Molnar Catalina
Romania

Note: Molnar Catalina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shirley Rumbol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shirley Rumbol
United Kingdom

Note: Shirley Rumbol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary Harvey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary Harvey
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary Harvey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris O'Dell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris O'Dell
Ireland

—

Note: Chris O'Dell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan J Chappell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf>

Alan Chappell
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Chappell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan
United Kingdom

Note: Dan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert-Jan Vinke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert-Jan Vinke
Germany

Note: Robert-Jan Vinke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Xavier Burgos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Xavier Burgos
Spain

—

Note: Xavier Burgos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eleni variatza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eleni variatza
Greece

—

Note: eleni variatza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M
Netherlands

Note: M sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jakob Heidborn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jakob Heidborn
Germany

Note: Jakob Heidborn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jernej
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jernej
Slovenia

Note: Jernej sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Borggaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Borggaard
Denmark

Note: Per Borggaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paloma Torrado
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paloma Torrado
United Kingdom

Note: Paloma Torrado sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lionel Broche
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lionel Broche
United Kingdom

Note: Lionel Broche sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mitch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mitch
Netherlands

Note: mitch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gunilla Eberstein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gunilla Eberstein
Sweden

Note: Gunilla Eberstein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: philippe bastide
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

philippe bastide
United States of America

Note: philippe bastide sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: celia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

celia
France

—

Note: celia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Overton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Overton
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Overton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david_huttley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david huttley
United Kingdom

Note: david huttley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mike vaughan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mike vaughan
United Kingdom

Note: mike vaughan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie smith
United Kingdom

Note: Julie smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Formigo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Formigo
Portugal

Note: Miguel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Seamus O'Shea
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

My personal message to whoever reads this is that I've been a supporter of the EU for years and years, since I was a child in fact. I am now 21 years of age and given the ever increasing input from commercial interests in my own country and in the EU, I no longer support the EU, I no longer support the political systems the world over.

If there is ever a vote to leave the EU here in Ireland I will be voting out and I will campaign to make that happen just as EU policy makers have campaigned against their own people. If you are not with the people, you are against the people, by jumping into bed with the highest bidder you have abandoned the people of Europe.

I love the idea of a group of countries working together for the benefit of all nations, I'm not a fan of a group of countries working together to promote commercial interests and that's what the EU is today.

I won't stand for it and the EU shouldn't either, the European parliament has ruined the chance we had for real change. If the EU found itself financially obligated to bow to the needs of businesses then why did it bow to the current economy instead of trying to implement change in the economy in the interest of the people?

If that hasn't been done then it begs the question what is the EU actually for if the strength in numbers doesn't benefit the people why is it there? It has become clear to me and many, many others that the EU acts in the interests of personal profits for MEPs who are paid by corporations to legislate in favour of corporations.

We take nothing with us after death, the only thing we leave behind that matters is our legacy... The legacy of the ruling parties in the EU will be the complete betrayal of the people and humanity by both actions and in-action. If the EU wants to remain you must adopt radical change, a change of system if needs be.

Please listen, for the good of mankind, please. Signed: Seamus O'Shea.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Seamus O'Shea
Ireland

—

Note: Seamus O'Shea sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign (which I wholeheartedly support) to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: caudron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

caudron
France

—

Note: caudron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela J Thomson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela J Thomson
United Kingdom

Note: Angela J Thomson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: I
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lve@gmail
Belgium

Note: Lve@gmail sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georgi Georgiev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georgi Georgiev
United Kingdom

Note: Georgi Georgiev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conrd van Tooren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conrd van Tooren
Netherlands

Note: Conrd van Tooren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brendan Donohue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brendan Donohue
Ireland

Note: Brendan Donohue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Felix Rautenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:10:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Felix Rautenberg
Germany

Note: Felix Rautenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Murray
Ireland

Note: David Murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat
United Kingdom

Note: Pat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Tim Murphy
Ireland

From: Geoffrey Vale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey Vale
United Kingdom

Note: Geoffrey Vale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Bevan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Bevan
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Bevan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ziga babic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ziga babic
Slovenia

Note: Ziga babic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Esther
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Esther
Netherlands

Note: Esther sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trish et Gill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trish et Gill
France

Note: Trish et Gill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: emanuela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

emanuela
Italy

—

Note: emanuela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugh Brenham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Yours sincerely,
Hugh Brenham
UK

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
Netherlands

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellinor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellinor
Sweden

Note: Ellinor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Dornig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Dornig
United Kingdom

Note: P Dornig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lyn Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lyn Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Lyn Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: francesca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

francesca
Italy

—

Note: francesca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marios
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marios
Cyprus

Note: Marios sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mick_randall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mick randall
United Kingdom

Note: mick randall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Coughlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Coughlin
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Coughlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: annamaria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

annamaria
Hungary

Note: annamaria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oscar Feldt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oscar Feldt
Sweden

—

Note: Oscar Feldt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stella Darke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stella Darke
United Kingdom

Note: Stella Darke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter freeman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter freeman
United Kingdom

Note: peter freeman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Homan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Homan
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Homan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adiam Haile-Melekot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adiam Haile-Melekot
United Kingdom

Note: Adiam Haile-Melekot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Ashby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Ashby
Spain

—

Note: Peter Ashby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Orietta Di Stefani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Orietta Di Stefani
ITALY____

Note: Orietta Di Stefani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: robert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gella
France

—

Note: Gella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Knupper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Knupper Barbara
Germany

Note: [Barbara Knupper] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah
United Kingdom

Note: sarah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maurice Dee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maurice Dee
Ireland

Note: Maurice Dee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trace Hammond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trace Hammond
United Kingdom

Note: Trace Hammond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Enid Gordon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Enid Gordon
United Kingdom

Note: Enid Gordon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eppey Gunn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eppey Gunn
Cyprus

Note: Eppey Gunn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mercedes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mercedes
Netherlands

Note: Mercedes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Cowan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Cowan
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Cowan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annie McDonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annie McDonald
United Kingdom

Note: Annie McDonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Haywood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Haywood
United Kingdom

Note: John Haywood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Puentedura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Puentedura
France

—

Note: Puentedura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Attila Horányi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Attila Horányi
Hungary

Note: Attila Horányi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pyy Jylhä-Vuorio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pyry Jylhä-Vuorio
Finland

Note: Pyry Jylhä-Vuorio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Allan Jolly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Allan Jolly
Spain

Note: Allan Jolly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Veronica Pollard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Veronica Pollard
United Kingdom

Note: Veronica Pollard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Smith
France

Note: Sue Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Rix
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Rix
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Rix sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emilio Aguilar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emilio Aguilar
Netherlands

Note: Emilio Aguilar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phillipa Thornton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phillipa Thornton
France

—

Note: Phillipa Thornton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Earle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Earle
United Kingdom

Note: John Earle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Hollins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Hollins
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Hollins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mohnike, Ernst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mohnike, Ernst
Germany

Note: Mohnike, Ernst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Rice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Rice
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Rice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simone meah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simone meah
United Kingdom

Note: Simone meah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Foster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Foster
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Foster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pasi Pohjanperä
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pasi Pohjanperä
Finland

Note: Pasi Pohjanperä sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernard
Malta

—

Note: Bernard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian crabb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian crabb Crabb
The Netherlands

Note: Julian crabb Crabb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Tough
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Tough
United Kingdom

Note: Raymond Tough sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas Reed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas Reed
France

—

Note: Nicholas Reed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
Ireland

—

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sven.desai
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sven desai
United Kingdom

Note: sven desai sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Dowdi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Dowdi
Ireland

Note: Josephine Dowdi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L. Renaud
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L. Renaud
United Kingdom

Note: L. Renaud sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CV Universidade Lusíada Porto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CV Universidade Lusíada Porto
Portugal

Note: CV Universidade Lusíada Porto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Panagiotis Tsoukas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Panagiotis Tsoukas
Finland

Note: Panagiotis Tsoukas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.
- My family rely on the neutral accessibility of the Internet to maintain our own business and livelihoods. The financial gains of corporate giants cannot be placed over and above an individual's right to earn a living. Competition is of course inevitable, but handing over the reins to the monopoly will do nothing to help the progress of human endeavour.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Rowan
UK

—

Note: Jennifer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz
United Kingdom

Note: Liz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Broomfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Broomfield
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Broomfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jonzip.mcneill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jonzip mcneill
United Kingdom

Note: jonzip mcneill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Leenheer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Leenheer
New Zealand

Note: Rob Leenheer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ROY ABEL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ROY ABEL
United Kingdom

Note: ROY ABEL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat reddan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat reddan
Ireland

Note: Pat reddan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shane Flanagan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shane Flanagan
Ireland

Note: Shane Flanagan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maggie Tooley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maggie Tooley
United Kingdom

Note: Maggie Tooley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marijke Peters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marijke Peters
Netherlands

Note: Marijke Peters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jo.kay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jo kay
United Kingdom

Note: jo kay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Fuller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Fuller
Portugal

Note: Roger Fuller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean-Paul Balbi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean-Paul Balbi
United Kingdom

Note: Jean-Paul Balbi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Keal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Keal
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Keal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nico
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nico
Austria

—

Note: Nico sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trevor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trevor
United Kingdom

Note: Trevor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nigel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nigel
United Kingdom

Note: nigel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Minnis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Minnis
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Minnis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dmitrasinovic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dmitrasinovic
France

—

Note: Dmitrasinovic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Tynan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Tynan
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Tynan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: paul allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

paul allen
France

—

Note: paul allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Gorman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Gorman
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Gorman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Fryer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Fryer
United Kingdom

Note: David Fryer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia H.K
Sweden

Note: I, Julia, sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: victoria_Hubbard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

victoria Hubbard
United Kingdom

Note: victoria Hubbard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hampus Englund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hampus Englund
Sweden

Note: Hampus Englund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D KENT
United Kingdom

Note: D KENT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Symons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Symons
United Kingdom

Note: Maria Symons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Beesley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Beesley
United Kingdom

Note: John Beesley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingrid Hedlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingrid Hedlund
Austria

Note: Ingrid Hedlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darren
United Kingdom

Note: Darren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Veronica Clanchy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Veronica Clanchy
United Kingdom

Note: Veronica Clanchy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vicki Bares
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vicki Bares
United Kingdom

Note: Vicki Bares sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alessia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alessia
Italy

Note: Alessia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Melinda Manos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Melinda Manos
United Kingdom

Note: Melinda Manos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Byatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Byatt
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Byatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Vander Auwera
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Vander Auwera
Belgium

Note: David Vander Auwera sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Horner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Horner
United Kingdom

Note: David Horner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miro Peternelj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miro Peternelj
Slovenia

Note: Miro Peternelj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rolf Markelius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rolf Markelius
Germany

Note: Rolf Markelius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john williams
United Kingdom

Note: john williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris Stevenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris Stevenson
United Kingdom

Note: chris Stevenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ines Vodopija
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ines Vodopija Vodopija
Slovenia

Note: Ines Vodopija sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chantz perkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chantz perkins
Netherlands

Note: Chantz perkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: raquel alvarez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

raquel alvarez
United Kingdom

Note: raquel alvarez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jesper Kirknaes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jesper Kirknaes
Denmark

Note: jesper Kirknaes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra
Germany

Note: Sandra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toon Sackman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toon Sackman
Netherlands

Note: Toon Sackman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Nunn-St John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Nunn-St John
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Nunn-St John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tadeusz Dziubiak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritize certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tadeusz Dziubiak
Poland

—

Note: Tadeusz Dziubiak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lena Björkman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lena Björkman
Sweden

—

Note: Lena Björkman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bruce Dunton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bruce Dunton
United Kingdom

Note: Bruce Dunton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gaye brunton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gaye brunton
United Kingdom

Note: Gaye brunton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alessandro Bozzoli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alessandro Bozzoli
Italy

—

Note: Alessandro Bozzoli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Levi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Levi
Israel

—

Note: Martin Levi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Ford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Ford
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Ford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juliet gascoyne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juliet gascoyne
United Kingdom

Note: Juliet gascoyne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: STEPHEN DAVIS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

STEPHEN DAVIS
United Kingdom

Note: STEPHEN DAVIS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda
United Kingdom

Note: Linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C.L.Ang
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C.L.Ang
United Kingdom

Note: C.L.Ang sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antony Chapman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antony Chapman
United Kingdom

Note: Antony Chapman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jette
Denmark

Note: Jette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Porter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Porter
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Porter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Eriksen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Helen Eriksen
Denmark

Note: I sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
Sweden

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Watson
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Razia Frank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Razia Frank
Germany

Note: Razia Frank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: This was sent to you as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Livie Love
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Livie Love
France

Note: Livie Love sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marijn W Littooj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marijn W Littooj
Netherlands

Note: Marijn W Littooj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Markku Järvinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Markku Järvinen
Finland

Note: Markku Järvinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annica Berg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annica Berg
Sweden

Note: Annica Berg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bartlomiej
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bartlomiej
Poland

—

Note: Bartlomiej sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Elliott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Elliott
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Elliott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Rosenfrid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Rosenfrid
Sweden

Note: Jonathan Rosenfrid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Treanor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Treanor
Ireland

Note: Pat Treanor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: elaine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

elaine
United Kingdom

Note: elaine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Florentin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Florentin
France

—

Note: Janet Florentin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Parrott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Parrott
United Kingdom

Note: John Parrott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jenny_ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jenny ryan
United Kingdom

Note: jenny ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steven Goodwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steven Goodwin
Sweden

—

Note: Steven Goodwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Balint
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Balint
Hungary

Note: Simon Balint sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joan Procter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joan Procter
United Kingdom

Note: Joan Procter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Hungary

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A. Miller
United Kingdom

Note: A. Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lars Ole Bonnevie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lars Ole Bonnevie
Denmark

Note: Lars Ole Bonnevie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Orla Handley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Orla Handley
United Kingdom

Note: Orla Handley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Fox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Fox
Spain

Note: Michael Fox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Dee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Dee
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Dee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Pyrah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Pyrah
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Pyrah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim Pierce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim Pierce
Ireland

—

Note: Kim Pierce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Søren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Søren
Denmark

Note: Søren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Keenoy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Keenoy
United Kingdom

Note: Tom Keenoy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mike sandon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mike sandon
United Kingdom

Note: mike sandon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juris
Germany

Note: Juris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fredrik Isgren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fredrik Isgren
Sweden

Note: Fredrik Isgren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Vanessa Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Vanessa Hill
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Vanessa Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Mander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Mander
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Mander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco
Italy

Note: Marco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L. Heerrooms
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L. Heerrooms
Netherlands

Note: L. Heerrooms sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jospre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jospre
Germany

—

Note: jospre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian
Poland

—

Note: Adrian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MICHAEL NIND
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MICHAEL NIND
United Kingdom

Note: MICHAEL NIND sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dee Searle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dee Searle
United Kingdom

Note: Dee Searle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerrie MacDonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerrie MacDonald
United Kingdom

Note: Kerrie MacDonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolyne Kardia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolyne Kardia UK

Note: Carolyne Kardia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco
Italy

—

Note: Marco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JEFFREY BRODIE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JEFFREY BRODIE
United Kingdom

Note: JEFFREY BRODIE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sotiris mitsiou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sotiris mitsiou
Greece

—

Note: sotiris mitsiou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Will Matthews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Will Matthews
United Kingdom

Note: Will Matthews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tamas Kurthy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tamas Kurthy
Hungary

Note: Tamas Kurthy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Holly Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Holly Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Holly Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tattwa gyani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tattwa gyani
United Kingdom

Note: tattwa gyani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Chamberlain
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Chamberlain
United Kingdom

Note: Benjamin Chamberlain sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANTONY CURRIE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ANTONY CURRIE
United Kingdom

Note: ANTONY CURRIE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcel Davids
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcel Davids
Netherlands

Note: Marcel Davids sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Myasin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Myasin
United Kingdom

Note: Myasin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beatris Schacher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beatris Schacher
United Kingdom

Note: Beatris Schacher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan
[SWEDEN]

Note: Alan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Jim Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iwan Zarembo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iwan Zarembo
Germany

Note: Iwan Zarembo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angelo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angelo
Malta

Note: Angelo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Bieber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Bieber
Germany

Note: Peter Bieber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William Linegar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William Linegar
United Kingdom

Note: William Linegar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avAzimages.avAz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A
United Kingdom

Note: A sent you this message as part of an AvAz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avAz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@AvAz.org

From: Ken Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Ken Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angus Law
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angus Law
United Kingdom

Note: Angus Law sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Hardy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Hardy
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Hardy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Sarai
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Sarai
Hungary

Note: Peter Sarai sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylvia Måsan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylvia Måsan
Sweden

Note: Sylvia Måsan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonios
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonios
United Kingdom

Note: Antonios sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Brennan
United Kingdom

Note: Clare Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellen Haan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellen Haan
Netherlands

Note: Ellen Haan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carol mills
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carol mills
United Kingdom

Note: carol mills sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brother peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[brother peter sender_name]
[UK sender_country]

—

Note: brother peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hanne Blanchfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hanne Blanchfield
Denmark

Note: Hanne Blanchfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giuseppe Forte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giuseppe Forte
Spain

—

Note: Giuseppe Forte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Potter
UK___

Note: [Tom Potter] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris fillmore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris fillmore
United Kingdom

Note: Chris fillmore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Koch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Koch
Sweden

Note: Thomas Koch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Cornall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Cornall
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Cornall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: adrian.carling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

adrian carling
United Kingdom

Note: adrian carling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Dennis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Dennis
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Dennis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S. Çes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S. Çes
Belgium

Note: S. Çes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
Ireland

—

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Davies Turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Davies Turner
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Davies Turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Hunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Hunt
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Hunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giovanni Pietrobon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:00:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giovanni Pietrobon
United States of America

Note: Giovanni Pietrobon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Adams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Adams
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Adams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Goodfellow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Goodfellow
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Goodfellow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jose Varela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jose Varela
Portugal

Note: Jose Varela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve
United Kingdom

Note: Steve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Berkeley Digby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Berkeley Digby
South Africa

Note: Dr Berkeley Digby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph Lichy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph Lichy
United Kingdom

Note: Joseph Lichy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Pinnock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Pinnock
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Pinnock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C. Schmidt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C. Schmidt
Germany

Note: C. Schmidt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Collier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Collier
Ireland

Note: Michael Collier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve humbert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve humbert
United Kingdom

Note: Steve humbert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Decordier Simon-Klaas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Decordier Simon-Klaas
Belgium

Note: Decordier Simon-Klaas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David langham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David langham
United Kingdom

Note: David langham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Genevieve foulon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Genevieve foulon
Belgium

Note: Genevieve foulon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefano Barri
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefano Barri
Germany

Note: Stefano Barri sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gregorious Gilbert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gregorious Gilbert
United Kingdom

Note: Gregorious Gilbert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John James
United Kingdom

Note: John James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Meloni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Meloni
Germany

Note: Christine Meloni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Turnbull
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Turnbull
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Turnbull sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John RODEN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John RODEN
Ireland

Note: John RODEN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noel Bosch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noel Bosch
United Kingdom

Note: Noel Bosch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adeeb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adeeb
Netherlands

Note: Adeeb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva ecker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva ecker
Austria

Note: Eva ecker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Brooke-Powell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Brooke-Powell
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Brooke-Powell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mois faion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mois faion
Bulgaria

Note: mois faion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco
Italy

—

Note: Marco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Vallance
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Susan Vallance]
[England]

Note: [Susan Vallance] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catarina Farinha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catarina Farinha
Portugal

Note: Catarina Farinha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kenneth Mckay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kenneth Mckay
United Kingdom

Note: Kenneth Mckay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Ohrtmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--A. Ortmann
Germany

—
Note: A. Ohrtmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vivienne Wallace
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vivienne Wallace
United Kingdom

Note: Vivienne Wallace sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vladimir Zahradnik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vladimir Zahradnik
Slovakia

Note: Vladimir Zahradnik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agnieszka Lukasiewicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agnieszka Lukasiewicz
United Kingdom

Note: Agnieszka Lukasiewicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mona Sophie Kling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mona Sophie Kling
United Kingdom

Note: Mona Sophie Kling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George
United Kingdom

Note: George sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Marett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Marett
United Kingdom

Note: David Marett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Sutton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Sutton
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Sutton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Turner
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leif Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leif Hansen
Germany

Note: Leif Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leen Van Melle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leen Van Melle
Portugal

Note: Leen Van Melle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Hitchen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Hitchen
United Kingdom

Note: Marianne Hitchen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian HOBSON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Hobson
United Kingdom

Note: Marian HOBSON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Torgny Andersson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Torgny Andersson
Sweden

—

Note: Torgny Andersson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Stockwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Stockwell
United Kingdom

Note: Kate Stockwell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Beard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Beard
United Kingdom

Note: Andrea Beard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lukas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lukas
Germany

Note: Lukas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Veva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Veva
Belgium

Note: Veva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ross Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ross Kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Ross Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

The internet is the most beautiful and amazing thing going for the future of humanity. Let it remain free and open.

Thank you

Emma Green
United Kingdom

—

Note: Emma Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Brookes-Hocking
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Brookes-Hocking
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Brookes-Hocking sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jason Bromfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jason Bromfield
United Kingdom

Note: Jason Bromfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pawel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pawel
Poland

—

Note: Pawel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcus O'Higgins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcus O'Higgins
United Kingdom

Note: Marcus O'Higgins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vera
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vera
Cyprus

Note: Vera sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: karin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

karin
Netherlands

Note: karin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tanja Ehnevid-Kjær
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tanja Ehnevid-Kjær
Denmark

Note: Tanja Ehnevid-Kjær sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicole
United Kingdom

Note: Nicole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bianka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bianka
Germany

Note: Bianka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luís Quilhó
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luís Quilhó
Portugal

Note: Luís Quilhó sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silvio Carlucci
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silvio Carlucci
Belgium

Note: Silvio Carlucci sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny Ulrika Rajanto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny Rajanto
Finland

Note: Jenny Rajanto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacquie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacquie
United Kingdom

Note: Jacquie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fabio Tartarini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fabio Tartarini
United Kingdom

Note: Fabio Tartarini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Lundell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Lundell
Sweden

Note: Tony Lundell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura Barnes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura Barnes
United Kingdom

Note: Laura Barnes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Romeo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Romeo
Netherlands

Note: Romeo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rhoslyn Norgate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rhoslyn Norgate
United Kingdom

Note: Rhoslyn Norgate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amirah Cole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amirah Cole
United Kingdom

Note: Amirah Cole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M. Urquhart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M. Urquhart
United Kingdom

Note: M. Urquhart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Baket
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Baket
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Baket sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kalin Nenov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kalin Nenov
Bulgaria

Note: Kalin Nenov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amelia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amelia
United Kingdom

Note: Amelia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janice Frape
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janice Frape
United Kingdom

Note: Janice Frape sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Davie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Davie
United Kingdom

Note: M Davie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Nuttall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Nuttall
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Nuttall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Prof Jim Wilson Wilson
UK

—

Note: Prof Jim Wilson Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mateusz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mateusz
United Kingdom

Note: Mateusz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Ayre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Ayre
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Ayre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: John Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.hoogendoorn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j.hoogendoorn
Netherlands

Note: j.hoogendoorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: DanielaPetrova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

DanielaPetrova
Bulgaria

Note: DanielaPetrova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Wilford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Wilford
United Kingdom

Note: David Wilford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice Vezza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice Vezza
United Kingdom

Note: Alice Vezza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Borghi Adrienne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Borghi Adrienne
Italy

Note: Borghi Adrienne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: zuzana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

zuzana
Slovakia

Note: zuzana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alberto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alberto
Italy

—

Note: Alberto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leah Steele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leah Steele
United Kingdom

Note: Leah Steele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R.Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R.Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: R.Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John o'dea
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John o'dea
United Kingdom

Note: John o'dea sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Airam Segura Cigala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Airam Segura Cigala
Spain

—

Note: Airam Segura Cigala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Styles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Styles
United Kingdom

Note: G Styles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

For the beginning, I would like to share with you a poem by a writer I know:
'We can only predict the things to change/ We will not be slaves/ The world is changing/
Some call it awakening/ You may try to spread your terrors/ Make us to see only our own errors/ It is not fair/ And I'm not afraid/ With the game you've set/ You're loosing your bet/Through mass media/ You can spread the phobia/ It won't bring you more/ Soon it's the end of war/ As much as you've fought/ You cannot control our thoughts/ As the world grows global/ We will cherish the local/ No matter/ This illusion will chatter/ Perhaps think again/ And choose to feel instead'

Then, as many people have already written to you,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sade Risku
Finland

Note: Sade Risku sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jim darling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jim darling
United Kingdom

Note: jim darling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iker del Pino Arbones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iker del Pino Arbones
Spain

—

Note: Iker del Pino Arbones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gisela Jurgens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gisela Jurgens
Malta

—

Note: Gisela Jurgens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Obaro Evuarherhe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Obaro Evuarherhe
United Kingdom

Note: Obaro Evuarherhe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: branka lavric
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

branka lavric
Slovenia

Note: branka lavric sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne DELVALLET
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Anne DELVALLET
Nice FRANCE

—

Note: Anne DELVALLET sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H.Geertjes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H.Geertjes
Netherlands

Note: H.Geertjes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: KEAVA NISBET FRIEL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

KEAVA NISBET FRIEL
United Kingdom

Note: KEAVA NISBET FRIEL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans-Christer Jonsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans-Christer Jonsson
Norway

—

Note: Hans-Christer Jonsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Herbert öberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Herbert öberg
St. Vincent and the Grenadines

Note: Herbert öberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ritin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ritin
United Kingdom

Note: Ritin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Avery
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Avery
United States of America

Note: John Avery sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Mayer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Mayer
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Mayer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Dodd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Dodd
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Dodd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maghiar Cristian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maghiar Cristian
Romania

Note: Maghiar Cristian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Galbraith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Galbraith
United Kingdom

Note: John Galbraith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Josephson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Josephson
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Josephson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gabi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gabi
Slovenia

Note: gabi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jakub Kuchar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jakub Kuchar
Czech Republic

Note: Jakub Kuchar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Coddington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Coddington
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Coddington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Valenta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Valenta
Germany

From: Catherine von Schreiber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine von Schreiber
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine von Schreiber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Symon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Symon
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Symon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Michael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Michael
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Michael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nickie Todd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nickie Todd
United Kingdom

Note: Nickie Todd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G. Beerda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G. Beerda
Netherlands

Note: G. Beerda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: barbara.beaumont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

barbara beaumont
United Kingdom

Note: barbara beaumont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krzysztof Trojanowski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krzysztof Trojanowski
Norway

Note: Krzysztof Trojanowski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Makins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Makins
United Kingdom

Note: David Makins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Didzis Pilvers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Didzis Pilvers
Latvia

—

Note: Didzis Pilvers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Gordon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Gordon
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Gordon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gunnar Liljas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gunnar Liljas
Sweden

Note: Gunnar Liljas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dimitar Todorov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dimitar Todorov
Bulgaria

Note: Dimitar Todorov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicklas Berglund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicklas Berglund
Sweden

Note: Nicklas Berglund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angel
United Kingdom

Note: Angel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham Cobb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Cobb
United Kingdom

Note: Graham Cobb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Melville
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Linda Melville
[Scotland]

—

Note: Linda Melville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: matt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

matt
United Kingdom

Note: matt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Borut Krejacic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Borut Krejacic
Slovenia

Note: Borut Krejacic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil
Ireland

—

Note: Neil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicasio SANCHEZ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicasio SANCHEZ
Spain

—

Note: Nicasio SANCHEZ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hoerder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hoerder
Austria

Note: Hoerder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maartje Romme
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maartje Romme
Netherlands

Note: Maartje Romme sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karagianni Chrysoula
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karagianni Chrysoula
Greece

—

Note: Karagianni Chrysoula sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemary Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Rosemary Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Marsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Marsh
United Kingdom

Note: Bob Marsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martyn Tanner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martyn Tanner
United Kingdom

Note: Martyn Tanner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marit Thorning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marit Thorning
Denmark

Note: Marit Thorning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Volant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Volant
United Kingdom

Note: Maria Volant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Esther Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Esther Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Esther Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter mcnulty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter mcnulty
United Kingdom

Note: peter mcnulty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lindsey Lukehurst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lindsey Lukehurst
United Kingdom

Note: Lindsey Lukehurst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Arlaud
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Arlaud
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Arlaud sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.gorman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john gorman
United Kingdom

Note: john gorman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Boltz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Boltz
France

Note: Marianne Boltz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Woodhall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Woodhall
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Woodhall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoerab Tchahkiev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoerab Tchahkiev
Belgium

Note: Zoerab Tchahkiev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Knip
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Knip
Germany

Note: Thomas Knip sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stefano.petrella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stefano petrella
Italy

Note: stefano petrella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darragh Keary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darragh Keary
Ireland

—

Note: Darragh Keary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: valerie healy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

valerie healy
United Kingdom

Note: valerie healy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S.Harrup
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:51:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S.Harrup
United Kingdom

Note: S.Harrup sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graham hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

graham hughes
United Kingdom

Note: graham hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Tweddle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Tweddle
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Tweddle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Dahl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Dahl
Luxembourg

Note: Louise Dahl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Haakon Lovell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Haakon Lovell
United Kingdom

Note: Haakon Lovell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mercedes de Grado
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mercedes de Grado
Spain

—

Note: Mercedes de Grado sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph Chantree
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph Chantree
United Kingdom

Note: Joseph Chantree sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edith
Netherlands

Note: Edith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hermie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hermie
Netherlands

Note: Hermie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: LH King
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

LH King
United Kingdom

Note: LH King sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Hein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Hein
Sweden

Note: Oliver Hein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc Alsteens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Marc Alsteens]
[Belgium]

—

Note: Marc Alsteens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susie Joyce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susie Joyce
United Kingdom

Note: Susie Joyce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Forest Rainsford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Forest Rainsford
Germany

Note: Forest Rainsford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Merete Zoffmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Merete Zoffmann
Denmark

Note: Merete Zoffmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricio Alonso
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricio Alonso
Anguilla

Note: Patricio Alonso sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: circe lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

circe lewis
United Kingdom

Note: circe lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gerd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gerd
Luxembourg

Note: gerd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: melanie_wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

melanie wright
United Kingdom

Note: melanie wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Phillips
UK

—

Note: I sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Curtis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Curtis
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Curtis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grant Stirling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grant Stirling
United Kingdom

Note: Grant Stirling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter davey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter davey
Sweden

—

Note: peter davey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magnus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magnus
Sweden

Note: Magnus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amber Ravenscroft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amber Ravenscroft
United Kingdom

Note: Amber Ravenscroft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Sorrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Sorrell Sorrell
UK

—

Note: Marianne Sorrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nita
United Kingdom

Note: nita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gary Wardell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gary Wardell
Sweden

Note: Gary Wardell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve
United Kingdom

Note: Steve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ries Groen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ries Groen
Netherlands

Note: Ries Groen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerri Bleeker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerri Bleeker
United Kingdom

Note: Kerri Bleeker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eric richards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eric richards
United Kingdom

Note: eric richards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anna
United Kingdom

Note: anna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Wilson
Sweden

Note: Mark Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura
Lithuania

Note: Laura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Bright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Hands off our free net!

--

Sue Bright
England UK

Note: Sue Bright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victor Joensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victor Joensen
Denmark

Note: Victor Joensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kali
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kali
Greece

Note: Kali sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cris Haldenby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cris Haldenby
United Kingdom

Note: Cris Haldenby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Schauhuber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Schauhuber
Austria

Note: Schauhuber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ole Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ole Jensen
Denmark

Note: Ole Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Crossfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Crossfield
United Kingdom

Note: David Crossfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: myra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

myra
Ireland

Note: myra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Floortje Mossou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Floortje Mossou
Netherlands

Note: Floortje Mossou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louis Keating
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

We need to keep the internet amazing!

--

Louis Keating
United Kingdom

Note: Louis Keating sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deyan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deyan
Bulgaria

Note: Deyan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Angela Jones
Angela Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Craig Senior
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Craig Senior
United Kingdom

Note: Craig Senior sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hana Rajdlová
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hana Rajdlová
Česká republika

Note: Hana Rajdlová sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrei Bran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrei Bran
Romania

Note: Andrei Bran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T.Hornt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T.Hornt
Ireland

Note: T.Hornt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernd Hilhorst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernd Hilhorst
Netherlands

Note: Bernd Hilhorst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlotte De Syllas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlotte De Syllas
United Kingdom

Note: Charlotte De Syllas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fredrik Olovsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fredrik Olovsson
Sweden

Note: Fredrik Olovsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deirdre Nelson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deirdre Nelson
Germany

Note: Deirdre Nelson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martyn Offord
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration. The internet is the greatest tool democracy has. What sort of people would therefore want to curb it: N.Korea, China perhaps!?

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinesPolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martyn Offord
United Kingdom

Note: Martyn Offord sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana
Portugal

Note: Ana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Bowes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Bowes
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Bowes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rune Jacob Glæsel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rune Jacob Glæsel
Denmark

Note: Rune Jacob Glæsel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maurice Buckley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maurice Buckley
United Kingdom

Note: Maurice Buckley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danny
Netherlands

Note: Danny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sue hannam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sue hannam
United Kingdom

Note: sue hannam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Fleming
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Fleming
United Kingdom

Note: Pat Fleming sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin McLaughlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin McLaughlin
United Kingdom

Note: Colin McLaughlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: catherine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:50:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

catherine
United Kingdom

Note: catherine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Millar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Millar
United Kingdom

Note: Millar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Neumann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Neumann
Germany

Note: Michael Neumann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Field
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Field
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Field sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: F Mackray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

F Mackray
United Kingdom

Note: F Mackray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Merle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Merle
United Kingdom

Note: Merle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron Healey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Ron Healey
[UK]

—

Note: Ron Healey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nina Hoppe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nina Hoppe
Sweden

Note: Nina Hoppe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Sandfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Sandfield
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Sandfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erika Dwek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erika Dwek
United Kingdom

Note: Erika Dwek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leigh Broom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leigh Broom
United Kingdom

Note: Leigh Broom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominic Meskys
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominic Meskys
Ireland

—

Note: Dominic Meskys sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Murphy
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Magnusson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Magnusson
Denmark

Note: Per Magnusson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalie Boltze
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalie Boltze
Germany

Note: Natalie Boltze sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: VERONICA G.P.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

VERONICA G.P.
United Kingdom

Note: VERONICA G.P. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Javier Sáez de Lafuente Manrique
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'.

This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Javier Sáez de Lafuente Manrique
Spain

—

Note: Javier Sáez de Lafuente Manrique sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Davies
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sergio Valcarcel Macua
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sergio Valcarcel Macua
Spain

Note: Sergio Valcarcel Macua sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Sean phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nathan Quiryne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nathan Quiryne
Belgium

Note: Nathan Quiryne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Heywood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Heywood
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Heywood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Kluche
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Kluche
Germany

Note: Daniel Kluche sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Elmore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Elmore
United Kingdom

Note: David Elmore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Seven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Seven
Germany

Note: Jan Seven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: allan Donvild
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

allan Donvild
Denmark

Note: allan Donvild sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SHEILA MUNRO
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SHEILA MUNRO
United Kingdom

Note: SHEILA MUNRO sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wendy Skorupa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wendy Skorupa
United Kingdom

Note: Wendy Skorupa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Ballantyne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Ballantyne
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Ballantyne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: coral Imber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

coral Imber
United Kingdom

Note: coral Imber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca worsley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca worsley
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca worsley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Mansell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Mansell
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Mansell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dietfried
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dietfried
Germany

Note: Dietfried sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tadhg Moloney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tadhg Moloney
Ireland

—

Note: Tadhg Moloney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jozef Zvada
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jozef Zvada
Denmark

Note: Jozef Zvada sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcos Antonio Lamolda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcos A. Lamolda
Spain

—

Note: Marcos Antonio Lamolda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magdalena Galkiewicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magdalena Galkiewicz
Poland

—

Note: Magdalena Galkiewicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane
United Kingdom

Note: Jane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jules Janssen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jules Janssen
Belgium

Note: Jules Janssen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sergio Garcia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sergio Garcia
Spain

—

Note: Sergio Garcia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Ingvarson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Ingvarson
Sweden

Note: Per Ingvarson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Boswell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Boswell
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Boswell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Felicity Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Felicity Martin
United Kingdom

Note: Felicity Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Cameron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Cameron
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Cameron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kempeneers JL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kempeneers JL
Belgium

Note: Kempeneers JL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David kennard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David kennard
United Kingdom

Note: David kennard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Williamson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Williamson
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Williamson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
United Kingdom

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Negus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Edward Negus
UK.]

—

Note: [Edward Negus] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingram
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation @into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingram
France

—

Note: Ingram sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Romero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Romero
Spain

—

Note: Miguel Romero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: malcolm smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

malcolm smith
France

—

Note: malcolm smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Murrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Murrell
United Kingdom

Note: Pat Murrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hercelin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hercelin
France

—

Note: hercelin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john g beck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john g beck
United Kingdom

Note: john g beck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

After all, the organisations wanting this control earn their income from the general public and it would be highly counter-productive to 'bite the hands that feed you' and alienate the wider community, just for the sake of corporate profit (although morality of this nature hasn't bothered many of them so far).

--

Steve
United Kingdom

Note: Steve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Schierer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Schierer
France

—

Note: Patrick Schierer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chloe Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chloe Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Chloe Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ross Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ross Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Ross Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Galfrid Congreve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Galfrid Congreve
United Kingdom

Note: Galfrid Congreve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Velin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Velin
Bulgaria

Note: Velin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
United Kingdom

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Björn Kroker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Björn Kroker
Germany

Note: Björn Kroker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Biljana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Biljana
Slovenia

Note: Biljana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jhemp Mousel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jhemp Mousel
Luxembourg

Note: Jhemp Mousel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kamran Hashemi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kamran Hashemi
United Kingdom

Note: Kamran Hashemi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: june r
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

june r
United Kingdom

Note: june r sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Murphy
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Blackman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Blackman
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Blackman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Inglis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Inglis
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Inglis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gregor Drummond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gregor Drummond
United Kingdom

Note: Gregor Drummond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Everitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Everitt
Spain

—

Note: David Everitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sheila.mulloy.ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sheila mulloy ryan
Ireland

—

Note: sheila mulloy ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ida Karlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ida Karlsson
Sweden

Note: Ida Karlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Summers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Summers
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Summers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lawrence George
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lawrence George
Spain

—

Note: Lawrence George sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Boden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Boden
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Boden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annick Andrea
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annick Andrea
France

Note: Annick Andrea sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Heal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Heal
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Heal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iain Mott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iain Mott
United Kingdom

Note: Iain Mott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Issy Homan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Issy Homan
United Kingdom

Note: Issy Homan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annie Beaumont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annie Beaumont
United Kingdom

Note: Annie Beaumont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

So muss es bleiben!

Das Prinzip der Netzneutralität ist das, was das Internet einzigartig und wichtig macht - die Erkenntnis, dass jeder, von den reichsten Unternehmen zu einem gewöhnlichen Bürger in gleicher Weise freien Zugang erhält und behält, auf alle Inhalte und Anwendungen zuzugreifen kann und darf!

Bernd

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernd
Germany

—

Note: Bernd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco Merolli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco Merolli
Italy

Note: Marco Merolli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geraldine McKeown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geraldine McKeown
United Kingdom

Note: Geraldine McKeown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom van den End
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom van den End
United Kingdom

Note: Tom van den End sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joyce Culley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joyce Culley
Ireland

Note: Joyce Culley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John White
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John White
United Kingdom

Note: John White sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy
United Kingdom

Note: Roy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jos van Dijk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jos van Dijk
Netherlands

Note: Jos van Dijk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Daley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Daley
Ireland

—

Note: Elizabeth Daley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin Dietachmayr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin Dietachmayr
Austria

—

Note: Karin Dietachmayr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandros Tsatsos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandros Tsatsos
Greece

—

Note: Alexandros Tsatsos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Grealy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Grealy
United Kingdom

Note: James Grealy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sander de Groot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sander de Groot
Netherlands

Note: Sander de Groot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chirag Asnani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chirag Asnani
United Kingdom

Note: Chirag Asnani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michel Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michel Peter
Belgium

Note: Michel Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruby Jand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruby Jand
Sweden

Note: Ruby Jand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeffrey Denness
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeffrey Denness
United Kingdom

Note: Jeffrey Denness sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Flemming Falkenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Flemming Falkenberg
Denmark

Note: Flemming Falkenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Miller
UK

—

Note: A Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Hollister
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Hollister
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Hollister sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E. Katz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Breaching the net neutrality rules will extend and perpetuate the destructive divide between 'haves' and 'have-nots.'

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E. Katz
United Kingdom

Note: E. Katz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sherwin Hands
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sherwin Hands
United Kingdom

Note: Sherwin Hands sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Sandlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Sandlund
Sweden

Note: Jan Sandlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gitte Ehrhardt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gitte Ehrhardt
Denmark

Note: Gitte Ehrhardt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Agius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Agius
Malta

Note: Philip Agius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabor Holics
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabor Holics
Hungary

Note: Gabor Holics sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MRS J CLARK
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MRS J CLARK
United Kingdom

Note: MRS J CLARK sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: len Gurney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

len Gurney
United Kingdom

Note: len Gurney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sascha.steenart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sascha.steenart
Netherlands

Note: sascha.steenart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brandt, Harald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brandt, Harald
Germany

Note: Brandt, Harald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cliff Whitehead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cliff Whitehead
United Kingdom

Note: Cliff Whitehead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: Jenny Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Jerresand Öhrström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Jerresand Öhrström
Sweden

Note: Anna Jerresand Öhrström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max
Italy

—

Note: Max sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shabnam Faltenbacher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shabnam Faltenbacher
Germany

—

Note: Shabnam Faltenbacher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agne Andersson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agne Andersson
Sweden

Note: Agne Andersson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diogo Jesus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diogo Jesus
Portugal

Note: Diogo Jesus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylvia A Krancher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylvia A Krancher
Netherlands

Note: Sylvia A Krancher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nobby van Gisbergen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow ‘fast lanes’ for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a ‘slow lane’. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook. This actually makes this into an issue of democracy and human rights.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Nobby van Gisbergen
The Netherlands

From: Denise Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Miethlinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Miethlinger
Austria

Note: Thomas Miethlinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenni
United Kingdom

Note: Jenni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dimitar Drumev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dimitar Drumev
Bulgaria

Note: Dimitar Drumev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mihai Sandulescu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mihai Sandulescu
Romania

Note: Mihai Sandulescu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Jefferson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Jefferson
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Jefferson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Rumersdorfer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Rumersdorfer
Austria

Note: Stefan Rumersdorfer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannah
United Kingdom

Note: Hannah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petar Damyanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petar Damyanov
Bulgaria

Note: Petar Damyanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ali Tansey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ali Tansey
United Kingdom

Note: Ali Tansey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Moes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Moes
Netherlands

Note: Sara Moes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ola
Sweden

Note: Ola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francis Thoma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francis Thoma
Ireland

Note: Francis Thoma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zita
United Kingdom

Note: Zita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Measures
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Measures
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Measures sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Marie Burke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Marie Burke
Ireland

Note: Anne Marie Burke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Gray
Spain

—

Note: Alexander Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Greasley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Greasley
United Kingdom

Note: Tom Greasley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Corkery
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Corkery
Ireland

—

Note: Rachel Corkery sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peder Pedersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peder Pedersen
Denmark

Note: Peder Pedersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cecilia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cecilia
Sweden

Note: Cecilia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mike haslam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mike haslam
Ireland

—

Note: mike haslam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Karel Kluson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Karel Kluson
Czech Republic

Note: Martin Karel Kluson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Franz Kresten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Franz Kresten
Sweden

Note: Franz Kresten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda Isaac
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda Isaac
United Kingdom

Note: Amanda Isaac sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Young
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Kalliope Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Kalliope Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Kalliope Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Radcliffe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Radcliffe
United Kingdom

Note: G Radcliffe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Torbjörn Lööv
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Torbjörn Lööv
Sweden

Note: Torbjörn Lööv sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terhi Ketola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terhi Ketola
Finland

Note: Terhi Ketola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Bocking
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Bocking
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Bocking sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc Van Ostade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc Van Ostade
France

—

Note: Marc Van Ostade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deb Causebrook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deb Causebrook
Spain

—

Note: Deb Causebrook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martina Cerná
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martina Cerná
Czech Republic

Note: Martina Cerná sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Price
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michele Couzens-Eason
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michele Couzens-Eason
United Kingdom

Note: Michele Couzens-Eason sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jules NENY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jules NENY
France

Note: Jules NENY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gareth Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Following the disappointment of Brexit, please save my faith in mankind by insisting on the principle of net neutrality. To do otherwise would be undo the strides that have been made to making information available to all over the past 15-20 years.

Many thanks,

--

Gareth Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Gareth Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Naveed Ahmex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Naveed Ahmex
United Kingdom

Note: Naveed Ahmex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marina Littek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marina Littek
United Kingdom

Note: Marina Littek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ciara Poleon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ciara Poleon
Ireland

Note: Ciara Poleon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Desmond Conlon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Desmond Conlon
Ireland

Note: Desmond Conlon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: luisa soares almeida
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

luisa soares almeida
Portugal

Note: luisa soares almeida sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: - Heather Shipley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

- Heather Shipley
United Kingdom

Note: - Heather Shipley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Lever
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Lever
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Lever sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cynthia McLaglen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cynthia McLaglen
United Kingdom

Note: Cynthia McLaglen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oli Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oli Jackson
Greece

Note: Oli Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alwin Hamersma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alwin Hamersma
Netherlands

Note: Alwin Hamersma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elvira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elvira
Spain

Note: Elvira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Payton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Payton
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Payton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Baigent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Baigent
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Baigent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Carragher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Carragher
Ireland

Note: Michael Carragher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Brown
Andorra

Note: Rebecca Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hans woudenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hans woudenberg
Netherlands

Note: hans woudenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leizal Minton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leizal Minton
United Kingdom

Note: Leizal Minton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dirk van Hoorn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dirk van Hoorn
Netherlands

Note: Dirk van Hoorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hoon Teo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hoon Teo
United Kingdom

Note: Hoon Teo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Selim Yafi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Selim Yafi
Belgium

Note: Selim Yafi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonja P.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonja P.
Slovenia

Note: Sonja P. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Newell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Newell
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Newell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Atkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Atkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Atkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Martin
United Kingdom

Note: John Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Sági
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Sági
Hungary

Note: Peter Sági sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
United Kingdom

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerd Kauschke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerd Kauschke
Germany

Note: Gerd Kauschke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jane Sumpter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jane Sumpter
United Kingdom

Note: jane Sumpter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris_ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris ward
Ireland

Note: chris ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Allou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laurence Allou
France

—

Note: Laurence Allou] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
United Kingdom

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Pickard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Pickard
United Kingdom

Note: George Pickard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica Mintelowsky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica Mintelowsky
Germany

Note: Jessica Mintelowsky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joan Stevens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joan Stevens
United Kingdom

Note: Joan Stevens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Pudsey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Pudsey
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Pudsey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J. Becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J. Becker
Germany

Note: J. Becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kelvyn hallifax
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kelvyn hallifax
Netherlands

Note: kelvyn hallifax sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Hale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Hale
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Hale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter jeans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter jeans
United Kingdom

Note: Peter jeans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernard
Netherlands

Note: Bernard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Vanags
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Vanags
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Vanags sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola Womersley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicola Womersley
United Kingdom

Note: Nicola Womersley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jana Cerna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jana Cerna
Czech Republic

Note: Jana Cerna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Gallagher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Gallagher
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Gallagher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bronia Evers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bronia Evers
United Kingdom

Note: Bronia Evers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingrid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingrid
Sweden

Note: Ingrid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas
Spain

—

Note: Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Portela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Portela
Portugal

Note: Maria Portela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viktor Bengtsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viktor Bengtsson
United Kingdom

Note: Viktor Bengtsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hildegard Reitz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hildegard Reitz
Germany

Note: Hildegard Reitz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Colley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Colley
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Colley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison miller
United Kingdom

Note: Alison miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louiselle Bonnici
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louiselle Bonnici
Malta

Note: Louiselle Bonnici sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vera Vasiljevic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vera Vasiljevic
United Kingdom

Note: Vera Vasiljevic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Mairs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Mairs
United Kingdom

Note: John Mairs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stef Middelbos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stef Middelbos
Netherlands

Note: Stef Middelbos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nelly Lindroth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nelly Lindroth
Sweden

Note: Nelly Lindroth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacquiline Traher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacquiline Traher
United Kingdom

Note: Jacquiline Traher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol
United Kingdom

Note: Carol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jayne Marar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jayne Marar
United Kingdom

Note: Jayne Marar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Spencer Tasker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Spencer Tasker
United Kingdom

Note: Spencer Tasker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nabil Shabka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nabil Shabka
United Kingdom

Note: Nabil Shabka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicoli Day
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicoli Day
United Kingdom

Note: Nicoli Day sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingo
Germany

Note: Ingo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Moore
Australia

Note: Mary Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Seward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Seward
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Seward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaudia Sosnica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaudia Sosnica
Poland

—

Note: Klaudia Sosnica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: cliff benson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

cliff benson
United Kingdom

Note: cliff benson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alix Henley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alix Henley
Switzerland

Note: Alix Henley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: van Lessen, Hedwig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

van Lessen, Hedwig
Germany

—

Note: van Lessen, Hedwig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samina Bashir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samina Bashir
United Kingdom

Note: Samina Bashir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean-Baptiste Frichet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean-Baptiste Frichet
France

—

Note: Jean-Baptiste Frichet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Knight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Knight
United Kingdom

Note: Frances Knight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Shepherd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Shepherd
United Kingdom

Note: George Shepherd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: caro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

caro
Poland

—

Note: caro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SM
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SM
Ireland

—

Note: SM sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Stanley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Stanley
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Stanley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michele
United Kingdom

Note: Michele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jann palmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jann palmer
United Kingdom

Note: jann palmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hoyland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hoyland
United Kingdom

Note: David Hoyland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fellingmal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:40:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fellingmal
United Kingdom

Note: Fellingmal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Goat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Goat
Bulgaria

Note: John Goat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sabine Keppel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sabine Keppel
Germany

—

Note: Sabine Keppel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: henry nicholson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

henry nicholson
United Kingdom

Note: henry nicholson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Tennant-Ralphs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Tennant-Ralphs
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Tennant-Ralphs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Duncan H
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Duncan H
United Kingdom

Note: Duncan H sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Václav Procházka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Václav Procházka
Czech Republic

Note: Václav Procházka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Grimshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Grimshaw
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Grimshaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Hallows
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Hallows
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Hallows sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beryl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beryl
Greece

Note: Beryl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juliet Gwyn Palmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juliet Gwyn Palmer
United Kingdom

Note: Juliet Gwyn Palmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Jonsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Jonsson
Netherlands

Note: Martin Jonsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Blake
United Kingdom

Note: James Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Ball
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Ball
United Kingdom

Note: John Ball sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marie Abrahamsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marie Abrahamsson
Sweden

Note: marie Abrahamsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ernest Rodker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ernest Rodker
United Kingdom

Note: Ernest Rodker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
Ireland

—

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Virjanand Panday
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Virjanand Panday
Netherlands

Note: Virjanand Panday sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Allan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Allan
UK

—

Note: John Allan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pierre Ambroise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pierre Ambroise
Ireland

—

Note: Pierre Ambroise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M.C. Rabben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M.C. Rabben
Germany

Note: M.C. Rabben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dario Kley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dario Kley
Germany

Note: Dario Kley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Serge Vermeir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Serge Vermeir
Belgium

Note: Serge Vermeir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Audrey Mullender
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Audrey Mullender
United Kingdom

Note: Audrey Mullender sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Søren Lange
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Søren Lange
Denmark

Note: Søren Lange sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephan Hock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephan Hock
Germany

Note: Stephan Hock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fraser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fraser
United Kingdom

Note: Fraser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Simmons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Simmons
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Simmons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: isabelle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

isabelle
France

—

Note: isabelle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Stephens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Stephens
United Kingdom

Note: John Stephens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emilie Roelofsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emilie Roelofsen
Netherlands

Note: Emilie Roelofsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter baillie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter baillie
UK

—

Note: peter baillie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefanie Kapp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefanie Kapp
Germany

Note: Stefanie Kapp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlotte Haughton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlotte Haughton
United Kingdom

Note: Charlotte Haughton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christiniam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christiniam
France

—

Note: Christiniam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josip Kuljevan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josip Kuljevan
Denmark

Note: Josip Kuljevan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Olsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Olsson
Sweden

Note: Per Olsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Pickles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Pickles
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Pickles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nieves Casas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nieves Casas
Spain

—

Note: Nieves Casas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jack
United Kingdom

Note: Jack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Zwerver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Zwerver
Netherlands

Note: Christine Zwerver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart Beveridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart Beveridge
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart Beveridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
Ireland

—

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David McDowell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David McDowell
United Kingdom

Note: David McDowell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Cox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Cox
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Cox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phyllis Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phyllis Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Phyllis Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara
United Kingdom

Note: Sara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anette Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anette Martin
Germany

Note: Anette Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: martin micallef
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

martin micallef
Malta

—

Note: martin micallef sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Don Hodgers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Don Hodgers
Ireland

Note: Dr Don Hodgers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vanessa Cuenca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vanessa Cuenca
Spain

Note: Vanessa Cuenca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Suchita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Suchita
Austria

Note: Suchita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann McMillan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann McMillan
United Kingdom

Note: Ann McMillan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jana
Czech Republic

Note: Jana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Bajada
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Bajada
Malta

Note: Caroline Bajada sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Hadfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Hadfield
UK

—

Note: Paul Hadfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulrika Karpefors
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Best regards,

Ulrika Karpefors
Sweden

—

Note: [ulrika.karpefors@gmail.com] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Backe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Backe
Germany

Note: Jonathan Backe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aureliano Candido
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aureliano Candido
Italy

—

Note: Aureliano sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: joe warren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please don't assume the general public is idiotic and short sighted, we know how the world works and how the corporate world influences world issues with greed and profit number one in their interests. Your greed WILL cause your eventual loss of profit, and also cause a worse environment for your children and all future generations. Use compassion and freedom of information, give love and understanding to all and you will see how this improves your well being, and the well being of others..... you will then see for yourselves, it is the only way to be truly happy. Please change your ways, people helping each other and showing kindness is how we will move forward and all be stress free, happy, and content.

--

joe warren
United Kingdom

Note: joe warren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Dade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Dade
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Dade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Camille
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

S'il vous plaît, please, faites le bon choix, make the right choice. Protégez l'internet que nous avons connu jusqu'à aujourd'hui, portect the internet as we have known it to this day, c'est un monde dans lequel nombre d'entre nous ont grandi, it's a world in which many of us have grown up, un monde que nous ne pouvons laisser aux mains de ces grandes entreprises, a world that we cannot leave to those corporations, le choix est votre, choice is yours.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Camille Bourland
France

—

Note: Camille sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BSidhu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BSidhu
United Kingdom

Note: BSidhu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Bentall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Bentall
Libya

Note: Raymond Bentall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter simkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter simkins
United Kingdom

Note: Peter simkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Coelus wilfried
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Coelus wilfried
Belgium

Note: Coelus wilfried sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raddius Reynolds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raddius Reynolds
United Kingdom

Note: Raddius Reynolds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kristofer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristofer
Sweden

—

Note: Kristofer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathryn Foster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathryn Foster
United Kingdom

Note: Kathryn Foster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agnes AI
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agnes AI
Netherlands

Note: Agnes AI sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesper Strom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesper Strom
Sweden

Note: Jesper Strom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry Muir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barry Muir
United Kingdom

Note: Barry Muir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stephen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stephen
United Kingdom

Note: stephen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pamela mcbratney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pamelamcbratney]
[UK

—

Note: Pamela mcbratney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolyn Moody
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolyn Moody
United Kingdom

Note: Carolyn Moody sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael James Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael James Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Michael James Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beate Johannessen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beate Johannessen
Sweden

Note: Beate Johannessen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sebastian Eckert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sebastian Eckert
Germany

—

Note: Sebastian Eckert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Sakellaridou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Sakellaridou
Greece

Note: Elizabeth Sakellaridou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria payne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria payne
United Kingdom

Note: Maria payne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire Bridges
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire Bridges
United Kingdom

Note: Claire Bridges sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aoife Ashford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aoife Ashford
Ireland

Note: Aoife Ashford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Janssen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Janssen
Belgium

Note: Diane Janssen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Loraine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Loraine
United Kingdom

Note: Loraine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Hulme
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Hulme
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Hulme sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: uwe harter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

uwe harter
Germany

Note: uwe harter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Enrico Arman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Enrico Arman
Italy

Note: Enrico Arman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Germany

—

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Bergqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Bergqvist
Sweden

Note: Mike Bergqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caro Brandauer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caro Brandauer
United Kingdom

Note: Caro Brandauer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Val Collins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Val Collins
United Kingdom

Note: Val Collins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jacqueline
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jacqueline
Spain

—

Note: jacqueline sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Garbett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Garbett
United Kingdom

Note: P Garbett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Ferguson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Ferguson
Switzerland

Note: Oliver Ferguson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tobias Feitkenhauer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tobias Feitkenhauer
Germany

Note: Tobias Feitkenhauer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeroen Wolterink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeroen Wolterink
Netherlands

Note: Jeroen Wolterink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Richards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Richards
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Richards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: christine.houeix
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

christine.houeix
France

Note: christine.houeix sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John McGill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John McGill
United Kingdom

Note: John McGill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola Browne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicola Browne
Ireland

Note: Nicola Browne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: suzanne wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

suzanne wright
Spain

—

Note: suzanne wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fern Hodges
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please consider this view from someone who uses the internet extensively when reacting to the BEREC net neutrality guidelines.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fern Hodges
United Kingdom

Note: Fern Hodges sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Myers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Myers
United Kingdom

Note: David Myers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominic Kasteel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The constant erosion of freedoms and democratic rights, such as equality and privacy, is frightening and mainly driven by power and profit. This makes it hard to fight and so the process continues. The sad thing is that the individuals who drive or support this, are creating a world of unhappiness, that even they would not like.

Dominic Kasteel

From: Ceri bloor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ceri bloor
United Kingdom

Note: Ceri bloor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: naseem mazhar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

naseem mazhar
United Kingdom

Note: naseem mazhar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: clive beardsmore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

clive beardsmore
United Kingdom

Note: clive beardsmore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laurie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laurie
United Kingdom

Note: Laurie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alette Liewwma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alette Liewwma
Netherlands

Note: Alette Liewwma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arnau Vilanova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arnau Vilanova
Spain

Note: Arnau Vilanova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim
United Kingdom

Note: Kim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerd
Sweden

—

Note: Gerd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kaya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kaya
France

—

Note: Kaya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sven Oeselg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sven Oeselg
Netherlands

Note: Sven Oeselg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luke
United Kingdom

Note: Luke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Jernkrok
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Jernkrok
Sweden

Note: Johan Jernkrok sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jeffers mayo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jeffers mayo
United Kingdom

Note: jeffers mayo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samantha Marson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samantha Marson
United Kingdom

Note: Samantha Marson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clive Hillman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clive Hillman
United Kingdom

Note: Clive Hillman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A.Richardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A.Richardson
United Kingdom

Note: A.Richardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doreen Lamont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Doreen Lamont
United Kingdom

Note: Doreen Lamont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hanna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hanna
United Kingdom

Note: Hanna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cathrine Plumridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cathrine Plumridge
United Kingdom

Note: Cathrine Plumridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Sophie Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vivien Sunlight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vivien Sunlight
United Kingdom

Note: Vivien Sunlight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Satyagita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Satyagita
United Kingdom

Note: Satyagita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: J Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martyn Baldwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martyn Baldwin
United Kingdom

Note: Martyn Baldwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: robert kagzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

robert kagzi
United Kingdom

Note: robert kagzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Pereira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Pereira
Belgium

Note: Ana Pereira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manfred Becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manfred Becker
Germany

—

Note: Manfred Becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr P J Corner-Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr P J Corner-Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Mr P J Corner-Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meredith Cane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meredith Cane
United Kingdom

Note: Meredith Cane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: damodar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

damodar
Ireland

—

Note: damodar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah brown
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Cullen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Cullen
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Cullen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane
Spain

—

Note: Jane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jana Hylmarová
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jana Hylmarová
Česká republika

Note: Jana Hylmarová sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Friedrich Moshhammer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Friedrich Moshhammer
Austria

Note: Friedrich Moshhammer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ineke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ineke
Netherlands

Note: Ineke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: steve foster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

steve foster
United Kingdom

Note: steve foster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Müller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Müller
Germany

Note: Stefan Müller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Hernandez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Hernandez
Netherlands

Note: R Hernandez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ramin Khoshchin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ramin Khoshchin
Sweden

Note: Ramin Khoshchin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dawn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dawn
United Kingdom

Note: Dawn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rukiye Tortop
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rukiye Tortop
France

—

Note: Rukiye Tortop sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bern Jurecic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bern Jurecic
Slovenia

Note: Bern Jurecic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Paterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Paterson
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Paterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harvey Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harvey Sullivan
United Kingdom

Note: Harvey Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Shepherd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Shepherd
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Shepherd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Millie Payne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Millie Payne
United Kingdom

Note: Millie Payne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Turner
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Goodman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Goodman
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Goodman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yolanda Powell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yolanda Powell
United Kingdom

Note: Yolanda Powell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Howley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Howley
United Kingdom

Note: James Howley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Valtanen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Valtanen
Sweden

Note: Jan Valtanen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom collier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom collier
United Kingdom

Note: Tom collier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ilse Segalla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ilse Segalla
Austria

Note: Ilse Segalla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rutger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rutger
Netherlands

Note: Rutger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C.gravesteijn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C.gravesteijn
Netherlands

Note: C.gravesteijn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rhianon Turrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rhianon Turrell
United Kingdom

Note: Rhianon Turrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Z Browne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Z Browne
United Kingdom

Note: Z Browne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ada Gutiérrez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ada Gutiérrez
Mexico

Note: Ada Gutiérrez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ned O'Brien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ned O'Brien
Ireland

Note: Ned O'Brien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Abigail Harrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Abigail Harrison
United Kingdom

Note: Abigail Harrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Heeks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

While we all value the internet, we value it most when it is free, fair and equal.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Heeks
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Heeks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda john
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda john
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda john sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Biao Li
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Biao Li
Italy

—

Note: Biao Li sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stan Latosinski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stan Latosinski
United Kingdom

Note: Stan Latosinski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fions
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fions
United Kingdom

Note: Fions sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Termars
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Termars
Netherlands

Note: Peter Termars sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cristiana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cristiana
Portugal

Note: Cristiana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Rehlendt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Rehlendt
Austria

Note: Alexander Rehlendt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare ~Bell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare ~Bell
Ireland

Note: Clare ~Bell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrej
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrej
Slovenia

Note: Andrej sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david de diego
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david de diego
United Kingdom

Note: david de diego sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcus Thorne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcus Thorne
United Kingdom

Note: Marcus Thorne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline O'Neill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline O'Neill
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline O'Neill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Sacks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Sacks
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Sacks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Mallon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Mallon
Ireland

Note: Anne Mallon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony
Belgium

Note: Tony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tibau Brigitta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tibau Brigitta
Germany

Note: Tibau Brigitta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BUBA talheimer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BUBA talheimer
Spain

—

Note: BUBA talheimer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikael Holst Nørlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikael Holst Nørlund
Denmark

Note: Mikael Holst Nørlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: André Gomes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

André Gomes
Portugal

Note: André Gomes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent. kuin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent. kuin
Netherlands

Note: Vincent. kuin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lauren Griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lauren Griffiths
United Kingdom

Note: Lauren Griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: daniela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

daniela
Italy

Note: daniela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: karen_selby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

karen selby
Malta

—

Note: karen selby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erik Flygt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erik Flygt
Sweden

Note: Erik Flygt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C

United Kingdom

Note: C sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brenda Muller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brenda Muller
United Kingdom

Note: Brenda Muller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Cigman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Cigman
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Cigman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dawn Houghton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dawn Houghton
United Kingdom

Note: Dawn Houghton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynn Clearwaters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Lynn Clearwaters

--

Lynn Clearwaters

United Kingdom England

Note: Lynn Clearwaters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Mallen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Mallen
Ireland

Note: Kevin Mallen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M B Heath
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M B Heath
United Kingdom

Note: M B Heath sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben
Malta

—

Note: Ben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Naveen Arles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Naveen Arles
United Kingdom

Note: Naveen Arles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Armin Rott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Armin Rott
Switzerland

Note: Armin Rott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olivia de Wrangel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olivia de Wrangel
Belgium

Note: Olivia de Wrangel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Malton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Malton
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Malton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Prescott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Prescott
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Prescott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
Ireland

—

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Merlin Matthews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:54

Hello, Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Sincerely
Merlin Matthews
United Kingdom

—

Note: Merlin Matthews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anne_marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anne_marshall
Ireland

Note: anne_marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Knight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Knight
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Knight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cas Ros
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cas Ros
Netherlands

Note: Cas Ros sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samantha Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samantha Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Samantha Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: s. thorpe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

s. thorpe
Greece

Note: s. thorpe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wagener, Raphael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wagener, Raphael
Germany

Note: Wagener, Raphael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ines Guimaraes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ines Guimaraes
Portugal

Note: Ines Guimaraes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Drinkwater
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Drinkwater
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Drinkwater sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sherrie Dallon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sherrie Dallon
United Kingdom

Note: Sherrie Dallon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Jones
United Kingdom

Note: David Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bridget Fowler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bridget Fowler
United Kingdom

Note: Bridget Fowler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anita Delaney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anita Delaney
United Kingdom

Note: Anita Delaney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandulache Dumitru
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandulache Dumitru
Romania

Note: Sandulache Dumitru sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arturs Reirs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arturs Reirs
United Kingdom

Note: Arturs Reirs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annette Caroline Popma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annette Caroline Popma
Netherlands

Note: Annette Caroline Popma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Wickson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Wickson
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Wickson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: van de Walle Joseph
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

van de Walle Joseph
France

—

Note: van de Walle Joseph sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ezra Strömgren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ezra Strömgren
Sweden

Note: Ezra Strömgren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emily Lusty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emily Lusty
United Kingdom

Note: Emily Lusty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Betsy van der Lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Betsy van der Lee
United Kingdom

Note: Betsy van der Lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L van Kuik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L van Kuik
Netherlands

Note: L van Kuik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Rotherham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Rotherham
United Kingdom

Note: David Rotherham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D. F. Clift
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D. F. Clift
United Kingdom

Note: D. F. Clift sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Marion Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nat Hazlett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nat Hazlett
United Kingdom

Note: Nat Hazlett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monica Yasmin Lindqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monica Yasmin Lindqvist
Sweden

Note: Monica Yasmin Lindqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Somers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Somers
Ireland

Note: Rachel Somers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen McEvoy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen McEvoy
United Kingdom

Note: Maureen McEvoy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T Visser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T Visser
Netherlands

Note: T Visser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lianne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lianne
Netherlands

Note: Lianne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: aleid warmelink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

aleid warmelink
Spain

—

Note: aleid warmelink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Tuovainen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Tuovainen
Finland

Note: Anne Tuovainen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Balazs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Balazs
Ireland

—

Note: Balazs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve haveneers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve haveneers
Belgium

Note: Steve haveneers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Young
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trevor Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trevor Taylor
Spain

—

Note: Trevor Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Reinhard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Reinhard
Germany

Note: Ruth Reinhard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malte Hozzel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malte Hozzel
Monaco

Note: Malte Hozzel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Holyoak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Holyoak
United Kingdom

Note: Diane Holyoak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Weilguny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Weilguny
Denmark

Note: Maria Weilguny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Whittern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Whittern
United Kingdom

Note: David Whittern sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Wirde
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Wirde
Sweden

Note: Marie Wirde sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aline Gaub
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aline Gaub
Germany

Note: Aline Gaub sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amira
Netherlands

Note: Amira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lukas malek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lukas malek
Germany

—

Note: lukas malek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Scarrott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Please keep the internet fair and equal for all users.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Scarrott
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Scarrott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Blair
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Blair
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Blair sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances
Spain

Note: Frances sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Feurle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Feurle
Austria

Note: Stefan Feurle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Duffy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Duffy
United Kingdom

Note: David Duffy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Theocharis Charalambous
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Theocharis Charalambous
Cyprus

Note: Theocharis Charalambous sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Jones
United Kingdom

Note: David Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jo cornell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:30:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jo cornell
United Kingdom

Note: jo cornell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Malmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Malmer
Denmark

Note: Martin Malmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: EM Mansnerus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

EM Mansnerus
Finland

Note: EM Mansnerus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C. van Klink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C. van Klink
Netherlands

Note: C. van Klink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Darin Lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Darin Lee
United Kingdom

Note: Darin Lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Powley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Powley
United Kingdom

Note: David Powley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Sleven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Sleven
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Sleven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian clifford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I am astonished that this proposal to change the open and effective, positive use of the internet should have ever been raised - never mind considered. Strong net neutrality rules must be maintained and enforced for the greater good.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian clifford
United Kingdom

Note: brian clifford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kâthlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kâthlin
Netherlands

Note: Kâthlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: muller.jean-marc
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

muller.jean-marc
France

—

Note: muller.jean-marc sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eluned gold
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eluned gold
United Kingdom

Note: eluned gold sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Griffiths
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate
Poland

—

Note: Kate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B. van Drenth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B. van Drenth
Netherlands

Note: B. van Drenth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Woolley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Woolley
United Kingdom

Note: R Woolley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Ken Price]
[England]

—

Note: Ken Price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vanessa Worship
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vanessa Worship
United Kingdom

Note: Vanessa Worship sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lora Doychinova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lora Doychinova
Bulgaria

Note: Lora Doychinova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nadege.forde-vidal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nadege forde-vidal
United Kingdom

Note: nadege forde-vidal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Norman M. Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Norman M. Miller
United Kingdom

Note: Norman M. Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carole Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carole Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Carole Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Whittle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Whittle
Denmark

Note: Robert Whittle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rianne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rianne
Netherlands

Note: Rianne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline allan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline allan
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline allan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
Sweden

—

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Izett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Izett
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Izett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roch Peyret
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roch Peyret
France

Note: Roch Peyret sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorraine Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorraine Gray
United Kingdom

Note: Lorraine Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simo Sainio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simo Sainio
Finland

—

Note: Simo Sainio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Milijan Šiško
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Milijan Šiško
Slovenia

Note: Milijan Šiško sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Forbes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Forbes
United Kingdom

Note: J Forbes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P.J.Wain
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[PJWain]
UK]

—

Note: P J Wain sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trevor Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trevor Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Trevor Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amelia Bottomley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amelia Bottomley
United Kingdom

Note: Amelia Bottomley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean O'Mahony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean O'Mahony
Ireland

—

Note: Sean O'Mahony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Berny McMahon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Berny McMahon
Ireland

Note: Berny McMahon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris major
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris major
Ireland

Note: chris major sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Kramer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder representation for equal unfettered access to all regarding the BEREC net neutrality guideline creation, which is under consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Kramer
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Kramer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kaisa Jormanainen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kaisa Jormanainen
Finland

Note: Kaisa Jormanainen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Bone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Bone
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Bone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heidi de Boer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heidi de Boer
the Netherlands

Note: Heidi de Boer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Lundholm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Lundholm
Sweden

Note: Marie Lundholm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Broad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Broad
United Kingdom

Note: John Broad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare Wilder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Wilder
United Kingdom

Note: Clare Wilder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlotte Mouncey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlotte Mouncey
United Kingdom

Note: Charlotte Mouncey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronald van Zijl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronald van Zijl
Netherlands

Note: Ronald van Zijl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Avril Levi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Avril Levi
United Kingdom

Note: Avril Levi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lulu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lulu
United Kingdom

Note: lulu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L.turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L turner
United Kingdom

Note: L turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Kelder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Kelder
Belgium

Note: Richard Kelder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Justin Mills
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Justin Mills
United Kingdom

Note: Justin Mills sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anji Felstead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anji Felstead
United Kingdom

Note: Anji Felstead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Roebuck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Roebuck
United Kingdom

Note: Karl Roebuck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Tyacke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Tyacke
Germany

—

Note: Andy Tyacke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david gretton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david gretton
United Kingdom

Note: david gretton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dilys Guildford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dilys Guildford
United Kingdom

Note: Dilys Guildford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: petra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

petra
Ireland

—

Note: petra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hareth Khan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hareth Khan
United Kingdom

Note: Hareth Khan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Schilling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Schilling
Germany

Note: Steve Schilling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victor Ivanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The internet is one of our most sacred sources of information, as well as space for freedom of speech and sharing thoughts. As such, I urge you to help protect the online ecosystem that we have and make sure that the internet remains neutral and free of corporate influence with everyone having equal rights to access and contribute.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victor Ivanov
United Kingdom

Note: Victor Ivanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda Cullum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda Cullum
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda Cullum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lee beale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lee beale
United Kingdom

Note: Lee beale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andraz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andraz
Slovenia

Note: Andraz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meher
United Kingdom

Note: Meher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lars Morberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lars Morberg
Sweden

Note: Lars Morberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C.Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C.Hill
United Kingdom

Note: C.Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marija
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marija
Lithuania

Note: Marija sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jasmine Black
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jasmine Black
United Kingdom

Note: Jasmine Black sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica Redman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica Redman
United Kingdom

Note: Jessica Redman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cornelia Stock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cornelia Stock
Germany

Note: Cornelia Stock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amos Voron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amos Voron
Spain

Note: Amos Voron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: zzzzzz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

zzzzzz
Greece

—

Note: zzzzzz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonas
United Kingdom

Note: Jonas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny
United Kingdom

Note: Jenny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Eastop
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Eastop
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Eastop sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R. den hartog
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R. den Hartog
Netherlands

Note: R. den hartog sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jamie Melrose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jamie Melrose
United Kingdom

Note: Jamie Melrose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Wills
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'.

This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Wills
United Kingdom

Note: Rob Wills sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.tufail
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john tufail
United Kingdom

Note: john tufail sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Ring
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Ring
United Kingdom

Note: Rob Ring sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maaike Derks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maaike Derks
Netherlands

Note: Maaike Derks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sören Lischke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sören Lischke
Germany

Note: Sören Lischke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: michael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

michael
Ireland

—

Note: michael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Happel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Happel
Netherlands

Note: Paul Happel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth
Denmark

Note: Ruth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: janet horvath
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

janet horvath
United Kingdom

Note: janet horvath sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leyla Ahmet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leyla Ahmet
United Kingdom

Note: Leyla Ahmet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gillian Ruth Heywood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gillian Ruth Heywood
Italy

Note: Gillian Ruth Heywood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donal O Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Donal O Sullivan
Ireland

Note: Donal O Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.glaves-smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john glaves-smith
United Kingdom

Note: john glaves-smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kombet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kombet
France

—

Note: Kombet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joyce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joyce
Ireland

—

Note: Joyce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sven Olaf Hegstaf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sven Olaf Hegstaf
Norway

Note: Sven Olaf Hegstaf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Hogg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Hogg
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Hogg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucas van der Have
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucas van der Have
Netherlands

Note: Lucas van der Have sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iwan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iwan
United Kingdom

Note: Iwan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Peeters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Peeters
Belgium

Note: Johan Peeters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annelies Philippo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annelies Philippo
Netherlands

Note: Annelies Philippo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: petros kefalopoulos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

petros kefalopoulos
Belgium

Note: petros kefalopoulos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

linda
United Kingdom

Note: linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lilian Hillyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lilian Hillyer
United Kingdom

Note: Lilian Hillyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Dench
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Dench
France

—

Note: Ian Dench sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leslie Daniel Surridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leslie Daniel Surridge
United Kingdom

Note: Leslie Daniel Surridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Ireland

—

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lieselot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lieselot IJsendoorn
The Netherlands

Note: Lieselot IJsendoorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robyn Pender
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:18

Dear Regulators,

As a Stakeholder, I would like to offer the following comments for you to take into account when considering the creation of BEREC net neutrality guidelines.

The EU current net neutrality rules are specifically intended to protect the net from corporate takeover, as well as to foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

The risk of the current broadly wise BEREC proposals is that they contain loopholes could potentially be exploited by service providers to allow them to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers (for example through preferential treatment, “zero-rating”, or class-based traffic management). To ensure that this does not become a way of providing ‘fast lanes’ for the highest bidders at the expense of others (most likely not just individuals, but more seriously start-up companies, charities, independent media groups, and citizen movements like Avaaz) would demand extraordinary vigilance on the part of the regulators.

That is likely to be impractical, making the risk of a poor outcome all too likely if the current guidance is adopted as it currently stands.

Avaaz has produced a very useful policy analysis (<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>), which makes the following points:

*zero-rating

The proposed guidelines fail to provide legal certainty, harmonised application of Regulation 2, or an investment-friendly climate. Although the Regulation allows the prohibition of harmful commercial practices (such as some zero-rating), the Guidelines lack clear rules on this issue, and instead rely on a case-by-case approach. This is likely to cause lengthy ex-post reviews. It may also lead to significant competitive distortions and interference in consumer choice.

*traffic management

The guidelines do not sufficiently protect the application-agnostic nature of the internet, allowing a class-based system of Quality of Service at the discretion of the ISP. This brings considerable risks of competitive distortions and discrimination, which would undermine future innovation.

*Specialised Services

The current text has two outstanding issues.

1. The quality requirements can be set by the provider instead of being based on objective technical characteristics (as in fact required by the Regulation). "

2. Specialised services will be allowed to cannibalise the bandwidth of Internet Access Services, which would create incentives for ISPs to sell the same network capacity twice to the same end-user, instead of expanding capacity.

Measuring the risk of unfortunate consequences to many against the benefits to few, it would seem to be wise to resist bringing in these guidelines without sufficient modification to close these loopholes. It is perhaps not surprising that regulators in the USA, Brazil, and India received an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their own similar consultations, and as a result have already adopted strong net neutrality rules. I write in expectation that EU regulators will be no less cautious.

If the loopholes identified by Avaaz are dealt with, however, the BEREC should provide a robust solution on sub-internet offers, and a potential third category of access services outside of the scope of the Regulation. Together with Avaaz , I hope that this balanced solution is able to survive the review and decision-making process.

Many thanks for your attention

Robyn Pender
United Kingdom

—

Note: Robyn Pender sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hari Kiran Rallapalli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hari Kiran Rallapalli
United Kingdom

Note: Hari Kiran Rallapalli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark
United Kingdom

Note: Mark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Tong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Tong
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Tong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Hoy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Hoy
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Hoy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rose Anne Main
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rose Anne Main
United Kingdom

Note: Rose Anne Main sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan Alderman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan Alderman
United Kingdom

Note: Dan Alderman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trudi Hewitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trudi Hewitt
United Kingdom

Note: Trudi Hewitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin
Sweden

Note: Benjamin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Price
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Ziherl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Ziherl
Slovenia

Note: Ana Ziherl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: f
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

f

United Kingdom

Note: f sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elspeth Goodwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elspeth Goodwin
United Kingdom

Note: Elspeth Goodwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silke Hagmaier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silke Hagmaier
Germany

Note: Silke Hagmaier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Patton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Below is a stock response from Avaaz which fully represents my views, but I would like to add my personal thoughts here:

The internet can be a radical force for change and the productive dissemination of information, as well as a foundation for open platforms such as itch.io (a site which has created amazing opportunities for me) or wordpress (used by a huge number of people for many different purposes). The most powerful thing about it, in my opinion, is that it gives us what we are all promised in the West but rarely receive: a more or less level playing field.

Any threat to net neutrality, or attempt to build "fast lanes" (which will inevitably become a way of restricting access for poorer users and businesses) puts this in jeopardy. I want - and, I believe, most people want - the internet to be a thriving place where new services, businesses and content creators can rise to the top, buoyed by talent or skill rather than sheer capital. I'm not sure how true this is of the current internet, but I know that we will move further away from this - perhaps permanently - if net neutrality is threatened.

Many thanks,

James Patton

And below, the stock response:

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Patton
United Kingdom

Note: James Patton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john H Falkner
France

—

Note: John Falkner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cheryl Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cheryl Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Cheryl Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans G.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans G.
Sweden

Note: Hans G. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paulo Galvão Paulo Jorge Galvão de Almeida
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paulo Galvão Paulo Jorge Galvão de Almeida
Portugal

Note: Paulo Galvão Paulo Jorge Galvão de Almeida sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meeta Rani Mannaert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meeta Rani Mannaert
Netherlands

Note: Meeta Rani Mannaert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Göran Strömqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Göran Strömqvist
Sweden

Note: Göran Strömqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leen Vervaeke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leen Vervaeke
Belgium

Note: Leen Vervaeke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Cooke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Cooke
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Cooke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marika
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marika
Netherlands

Note: Marika sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ania Sanches
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ania Sanches
Portugal

Note: Ania Sanches sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tove Gustafson Sätter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tove Gustafson Sätter
Sweden

Note: Tove Gustafson Sätter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorna Fletcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorna Fletcher
United Kingdom

Note: Lorna Fletcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karolina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karolina
United Kingdom

Note: Karolina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nabila
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nabs
United Kingdom

Note: nabs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noah Birksted-Breen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noah Birksted-Breen
United Kingdom

Note: Noah Birksted-Breen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phillip Howells
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phillip Howells
United Kingdom

Note: Phillip Howells sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henrique Martins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henrique Martins
Portugal

Note: Henrique Martins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wanda Glowinska-Rizzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wanda Glowinska-Rizzi
France

Note: Wanda Glowinska-Rizzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Woodhams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Woodhams
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Woodhams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Webbe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Webbe
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Webbe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vagelis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vagelis
Greece

Note: Vagelis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Teike van Baden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Teike van Baden
Netherlands

Note: Teike van Baden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent Cofalka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent Cofalka
Austria

Note: Vincent Cofalka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yorgos Taxiarchopoulos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yorgos Taxiarchopoulos
Greece

Note: Yorgos Taxiarchopoulos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Jermyn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Jermyn
Ireland

Note: Mary Jermyn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Brooke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,
John

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Brooke
United Kingdom

Note: John Brooke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vigo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vigo
France

—

Note: Vigo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ansie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ansie
South Africa

Note: ansie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Sommers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Sommers
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Sommers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lauren Oliver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lauren Oliver
United Kingdom

Note: Lauren Oliver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
Netherlands

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaus Fuxjager
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaus Fuxjager
Czech Republic

Note: Klaus Fuxjager sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gillian Thornhill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gillian Thornhill
United Kingdom

Note: Gillian Thornhill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Post
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Post
Netherlands

Note: David Post sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judy Weeks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judy Weeks
United Kingdom

Note: Judy Weeks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Harding
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Harding
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Harding sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: julie Lightfoot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

julie Lightfoot
United Kingdom

Note: julie Lightfoot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: KLAUS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

KLAUS
Australia

Note: KLAUS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellen Stern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellen Stern
Germany

Note: Ellen Sten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Willems
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Willems
Germany

Note: Willems sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Huba Horvath
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'.

This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Huba Horvath
Austria

Note: Huba Horvath sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carina Johnsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carina Johnsson
Sweden

Note: Carina Johnsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Lynch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Lynch
Ireland

Note: John Lynch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

The internet was invented by someone who wanted it to be free for all for all time, a real chance for democracy, neutrality and responsibility for humanity. Please confirm your intention is to keep this as intended by its magnanimous creator.

This Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net ask you to ensure neutrality guidelines creation remain. All states must help police this to ensure it continues unbiased.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Delicado
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Delicado
Portugal

Note: Ana Delicado sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mazhar Asghar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet. The very idea that corporate interests should be allowed to take over the internet is quite frankly disgraceful, and would simply serve to reinforce the belief that neo-liberalist corporate economics come first, rather than people. precisely whom does the EU serve?

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mazhar Asghar
United Kingdom

Note: Mazhar Asghar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silvia Torelli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silvia Torelli
United Kingdom

Note: Silvia Torelli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: christine.Chapman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

christine Chapman
United Kingdom

Note: christine Chapman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ramo de Boer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ramo de Boer
Netherlands

Note: Ramo de Boer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Niekel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Niekel
Netherlands

Note: A Niekel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martina Nier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martina Nier
Germany

Note: Martina Nier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: angela.campion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

angela.campion
Ireland

Note: angela.campion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bindi Shah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Bindi Shah]
[United Kingdom]

Bindi Shah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Gjoreski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Gjoreski
Slovenia

Note: Martin Gjoreski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Valerie Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sergio Azzopardi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The right to a neutral playing field is a basic right, one in line with the EU's core values, both as a consumer and as an entrepreneur. We strongly have net neutrality at heart. Don't let us down.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sergio Azzopardi
Malta

Note: Sergio Azzopardi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerti Hofmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerti Hofmann
Germany

—

Note: Gerti Hofmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pirkko Aura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pirkko Aura
Italy

Note: Pirkko Aura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D. Hennessy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D. Hennessy
Australia

Note: D. Hennessy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Barnett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Barnett
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Barnett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jackie Stapleton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jackie Stapleton
United Kingdom

Note: Jackie Stapleton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Glover
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Glover
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Glover sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rajwinder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rajwinder
United Kingdom

Note: Rajwinder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shane Peiris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shane Peiris
United Kingdom

Note: Shane Peiris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Cole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Cole
Spain

—

Note: Anna Cole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia
Spain

Note: Patricia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martine Fritz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martine Fritz
Italy

Note: Martine Fritz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wolfgang Grabs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wolfgang Grabs
Germany

Note: Wolfgang Grabs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Woods
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Woods
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Woods sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tsvetan Drakaliev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tsvetan Drakaliev
United Kingdom

Note: Tsvetan Drakaliev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Lowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Lowe
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Lowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mairead barley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mairead barley
France

—

Note: mairead barley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesús Alcázar López
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesús Alcázar López
Spain

—

Note: Jesús Alcázar López sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Warren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Warren
Italy

Note: Malcolm Warren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toby Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toby Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Toby Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Seymour
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Seymour
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Seymour sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gundi Ehringhaus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gundi Ehringhaus
Germany

Note: Gundi Ehringhaus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Johnstone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Johnstone
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Johnstone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chas Stewart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chas Stewart
United Kingdom

Note: Chas Stewart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arnaud
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arnaud
France

—

Note: Arnaud sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie
Germany

Note: Sophie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dal
France

—

Note: dal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Baguley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Baguley
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Baguley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Hollins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Janet Hollins

UK

—

Note: Janet Hollins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martyn Chalk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martyn Chalk
United Kingdom

Note: Martyn Chalk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Green
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: liz allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

liz allen
Portugal

Note: liz allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Linehan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Linehan
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Linehan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Alexander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Alexander
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Alexander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beatrix Feser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beatrix Feser
Germany

Note: Beatrix Feser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mirjam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mirjam Han
Netherlands

Note: Mirjam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kari vartia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kari vartia
Sweden

Note: kari vartia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: deborah armitage
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

deborah armitage
France

—

Note: deborah armitage sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Jones
United Kingdom

Note: D Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Harvey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon Harvey
United Kingdom

Note: Sharon Harvey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Cunningham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Cunningham
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Cunningham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Härtle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Härtle
Germany

—

Note: Andrea Härtle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Kent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Kent
United Kingdom

Note: Frances Kent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mattias Elensjö
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mattias Elensjö
Sweden

—

Note: Mattias Elensjö sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maja
Slovenia

Note: Maja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire
United Kingdom

Note: Claire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lena Eriksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lena Eriksson
Sweden

Note: Lena Eriksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chrisRoald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chrisRoald
United Kingdom

Note: chrisRoald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Everaerts JP
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Everaerts JP
Belgium

Note: Everaerts JP sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Moy El-Bushra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:20:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Moy El-Bushra
United Kingdom

Note: Moy El-Bushra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lionel Ferreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lionel Ferreira
Portugal

Note: Lionel Ferreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Serdar BIYIK
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Serdar BIYIK
Netherlands

Note: Serdar BIYIK sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Langdon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Langdon
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Langdon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luísa m^a Silva rocha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luísa m^a Silva rocha
Portugal

Note: Luísa m^a Silva rocha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Atthill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Atthill
UK

—

Note: Thomas Atthill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dominika
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dominika
Slovakia

Note: Dominika sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob
Gibraltar

Note: Jacob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mariateresa Azzolini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mariateresa Azzolini
Italy

Note: Mariateresa Azzolini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: vincent conway
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

vincent conway
Ireland

—

Note: vincent conway sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conor McCann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conor McCann
United Kingdom

Note: Conor McCann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva
United Kingdom

Note: Eva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Lawrence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Lawrence
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Lawrence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Mallett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Mallett
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Mallett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: andy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

andy
United Kingdom

Note: andy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: monique
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

monique
Netherlands

Note: monique sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ilsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ilsen
United Kingdom

Note: Ilsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rICHARD GREEN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:15:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rICHARD GREEN
United Kingdom

Note: rICHARD GREEN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: steve_burgess
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

steve burgess
United Kingdom

Note: steve burgess sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John O'Kelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John O'Kelly
United Kingdom

Note: John O'Kelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Ellams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Ellams
United Kingdom

Note: David Ellams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Lasarev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Lasarev
Canada

Note: Alex Lasarev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henrique Soares dos Reis Duarte de Oliveira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henrique Soares dos Reis Duarte de Oliveira
Portugal

Note: Henrique Soares dos Reis Duarte de Oliveira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne-Marie Appleton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne-Marie Appleton
United Kingdom

Note: Anne-Marie Appleton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia mccarthy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia mccarthy
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia mccarthy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viv Cecil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viv Cecil
United Kingdom

Note: Viv Cecil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A, Hansen
Denmark

Note: A, Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michal Holoda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michal Holoda
Slovakia

Note: Michal Holoda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Holly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Holly
United Kingdom

Note: Holly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan
United Kingdom

Note: Dan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sasha Major
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sasha Major
United Kingdom

Note: Sasha Major sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: peter bennett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

peter bennett
United Kingdom

Note: peter bennett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalie Baker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Don't forgoe the rights of all to be seen as equal! Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalie Baker
United Kingdom

Note: Natalie Baker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ida
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ida
Denmark

Note: Ida sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olga
Czech Republic

Note: Olga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ernst W. Mueller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ernst W. Mueller
Austria

Note: Ernst W. Mueller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gijs de Vries
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gijs de Vries
United Kingdom

Note: Gijs de Vries sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Kelleter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Kelleter
Netherlands

Note: Barbara Kelleter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Björn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Björn
Sweden

Note: Björn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Wheway
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Wheway
United Kingdom

Note: John Wheway sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Dodwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Dodwell

Englamnd , UK

—

Note: [Chris Dodwell] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monika Costelloe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monika Costelloe
United Kingdom

Note: Monika Costelloe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JM Brodu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JM Brodu
France

—

Note: JM Brodu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Wanjura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Wanjura
Germany

Note: Benjamin Wanjura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Keep
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Keep
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Keep sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georgios Savvidis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georgios Savvidis
Germany

Note: Georgios Savvidis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T. Bofa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T. Bofa
United Kingdom

Note: T. Bofa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alina Dragan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alina Dragan
Netherlands

Note: Alina Dragan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Richardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Richardson
United Kingdom

Note: John Richardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Renée Browning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Renée Browning
United Kingdom

Note: Renée Browning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Budd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Budd
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Budd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Penny Southgate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Penny Southgate
United Kingdom

Note: Penny Southgate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Shinie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Shinie
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Shinie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: DARREN BUSH
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

DARREN BUSH
United Kingdom

Note: DARREN BUSH sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Healy-Nolan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Healy-Nolan.
Ireland

Note: Rebecca Healy-Nolan. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne-Lise Lancaster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne-Lise Lancaster
United Kingdom

Note: Anne-Lise Lancaster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Karen kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Prem
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Prem
France

—

Note: Prem sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tadhg O'Meara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tadhg O'Meara
Ireland

Note: Tadhg O'Meara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barclay Neville Langridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barclay Neville Langridge
United Kingdom

Note: Barclay Neville Langridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helm Vaneker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helm Vaneker
Netherlands

Note: Helm Vaneker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bas Leijdekkers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bas Leijdekkers
Sweden

Note: Bas Leijdekkers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Pessoa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Pessoa
United Kingdom

Note: Maria Pessoa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johnny Karlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johnny Karlsson
Sweden

Note: Johnny Karlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlos Magalhaes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlos Magalhaes
Portugal

Note: Carlos Magalhaes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anna soyka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anna soyka
United Kingdom

Note: anna soyka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lennart Johansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lennart Johansson
Sweden

—

Note: Lennart Johansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Smith
Spain

—

Note: Stephen Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Douglas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Douglas
Gibraltar

Note: Douglas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Celine Cart-Lamy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Celine Cart-Lamy
France

—

Note: Celine Cart-Lamy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D Choo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D Choo
Canada

Note: D Choo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill
United Kingdom

Note: Jill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc
Netherlands

Note: Marc sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nuno Goncalves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nuno Gonçalves
Portugal

Note: Nuno Gonçalves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Winifred Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Winifred Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Winifred Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Kroon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Kroon
Netherlands

Note: Max Kroon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Monk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Monk
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Monk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicky Beele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicky Beele
United Kingdom

Note: Nicky Beele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Thomas
France

—

Note: G Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evelin Haav
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evelin Haav
Estonia

Note: Evelin Haav sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Doyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Doyle
Ireland

—

Note: John Doyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan
Sweden

Note: Stefan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Eardley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Eardley
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Eardley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara
Ireland

Note: Barbara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joan Ribí
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joan Ribí
Switzerland

Note: Joan Ribí sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Wheeler
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas
France

—

Note: Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nimmi Schueller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nimmi Schueller
Germany

Note: Nimmi Schueller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrina Gordon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katrina Gordon
United Kingdom

Note: Katrina Gordon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Mooney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Mooney
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Mooney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nico Prommer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nico Prommer
United Kingdom

Note: Nico Prommer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lars-Onni Wik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lars-Onni Wik
Sweden

Note: Lars-Onni Wik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronald McHugh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronald McHugh
United Kingdom

Note: Ronald McHugh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: caroline_young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

caroline young
United Kingdom

Note: caroline young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph C. Boylan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph C Boylan
Romania

Note: Joseph C Boylan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rafael Holt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rafael Holt
United Kingdom

Note: Rafael Holt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michaela Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michaela Ryan
United Kingdom

Note: Michaela Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D. Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D. Hansen
Denmark

Note: D. Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rytis Kymantas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rytis Kymantas
Lithuania

Note: Rytis Kymantas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antoni Maria Gavarró i Ferrer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antoni Maria Gavarró i Ferrer
Spain

—

Note: Antoni Maria Gavarró i Ferrer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aparna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aparna
Germany

Note: Aparna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M. C. te Riele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M. C. te Riele
Netherlands

Note: M. C. te Riele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Papadelis Thomell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Papadelis Thomell
Sweden

Note: Anna Papadelis Thomell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: steven peck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

steven peck
United Kingdom

Note: steven peck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Silen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Silen
Finland

Note: Johan Silen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siri M.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siri M.
Denmark

Note: Siri M. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bianca von Heiroth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bianca von Heiroth
France

—

Note: Bianca von Heiroth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ric Beerens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ric Beerens
Netherlands

Note: Ric Beerens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Merkle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Merkle
Germany

Note: Karen Merkle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonne Davies
United Kingdom

Note: Yvonne Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Humble
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Humble
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Humble sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nadire Omer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nadire Omer
Romania

Note: Nadire Omer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronan Stewart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronan Stewart
Ireland

Note: Ronan Stewart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Musgrave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Musgrave
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Musgrave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela
Ireland

Note: Angela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janice Ross
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janice Ross
United Kingdom

Note: Janice Ross sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Connor Hickey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Connor Hickey
United Kingdom

Note: Connor Hickey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: henry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

henry
United Kingdom

Note: henry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrizia Zanelli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrizia Zanelli
Italy

Note: Patrizia Zanelli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joachim Schäfer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joachim Schäfer
Germany

Note: Joachim Schäfer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katarzyna Katner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katarzyna Katner
United Kingdom

Note: Katarzyna Katner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claudia Bakker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claudia Bakker
Netherlands

Note: Claudia Bakker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonia Stella Karsties
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:14:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonia Karsties
Germany

Note: Antonia Stella Karsties sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dylan Mosselmans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dylan Mosselmans
Belgium

Note: Dylan Mosselmans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noel Hodson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noel Hodson
United Kingdom

Note: Noel Hodson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linnea Rowlatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linnea Rowlatt
United Kingdom

Note: Linnea Rowlatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kaare Sørensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kaare Sørensen
Denmark

Note: kaare Sørensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dimitra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dimitra
Greece

Note: Dimitra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Veronica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Veronica
United Kingdom

Note: Veronica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Onions
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Onions
United Kingdom

Note: Nigel Onions sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M.I.Scholte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

You filthy thieves!

--

M.I.Scholte
Netherlands

Note: M.I.Scholte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michal Wozniak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michal Wozniak
Poland

—

Note: Michal Wozniak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agnieszka wichary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agnieszka wichary
United Kingdom

Note: Agnieszka wichary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Cowper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Cowper
France

—

Note: Anna Cowper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronja Klepser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronja Klepser
Germany

Note: Ronja Klepser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tanya Nash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tanya Nash
United Kingdom

Note: Tanya Nash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JOSÉ RODRÍGUEZ RANDÓN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JOSÉ RODRÍGUEZ RANDÓN
Spain

—

Note: JOSÉ RODRÍGUEZ RANDÓN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gisela Pahl-Köhler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gisela Pahl-Köhler
Germany

Note: Gisela Pahl-Köhler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeroen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeroen
Netherlands

Note: Jeroen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John McKenzie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John McKenzie
United Kingdom

Note: John McKenzie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vasile Daniel Mois
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vasile Daniel Mois
Romania

Note: Vasile Daniel Mois sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Mullgerw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Mullgerw
Ireland

—

Note: G Mullgerw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Corness
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Corness
United Kingdom

Note: Raymond Corness sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Teit Nielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Teit Nielsen
Denmark

Note: Teit Nielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bryan Haddon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

We are counting on you to take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

With kind regards,

--

Bryan Haddon
France

Note: Bryan Haddon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emelie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emelie
Sweden

Note: Emelie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate
United Kingdom

Note: Kate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Reid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Reid
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Reid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jakob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jakob
Denmark

Note: Jakob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

linda
United Kingdom

Note: linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulrich Looser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ulrich Looser
Germany

Note: Ulrich Looser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yannick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yannick
Mauritius

Note: Yannick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Flight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Flight
United Kingdom

Note: P Flight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hodgkiss p
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hodgkiss p
United Kingdom

Note: hodgkiss p sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicolas Marquet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicolas Marquet
France

—

Note: Nicolas Marquet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Svetozar Marinov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Marinov
Bulgaria

Note: Marian Marinov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miriam Shorter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miriam Shorter
United Kingdom

Note: Miriam Shorter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The net should be a place of equality. preserving the spirit and generosity of its inventor, Tim Berners Lee, who valued the free exchange of knowledge.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Andrew Wilson, UK

Note: Andrew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Vasques
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Vasques
United Kingdom

Note: Miguel Vasques sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Hemmings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Hemmings
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Hemmings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jack watkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jack watkins
United Kingdom

Note: jack watkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Van der Eycken Kris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Van der Eycken Kris
Belgium

Note: Van der Eycken Kris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ralf Enevi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ralf Enevi
Sweden

Note: Ralf Enevi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mavis Woodhouse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mavis Woodhouse
United Kingdom

Note: Mavis Woodhouse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georges Melides
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georges Melides
Belgium

Note: Georges Melides sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jordan carroll
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jordan carroll
United Kingdom

Note: Jordan carroll sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karel Vitvar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karel Vitvar
Czech Republic

Note: Karel Vitvar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonya
Czech Republic

Note: Sonya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynn G
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynn G
United Kingdom

Note: Lynn G sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Albert Muñoz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Albert Muñoz
Gibraltar

Note: Albert Muñoz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: don_welsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

don welsh
Finland

—

Note: don welsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arne Bjerre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arne Bjerre
Denmark

Note: Arne Bjerre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jk
Ireland

—

Note: Jk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Lamb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Lamb
Ireland

—

Note: Roger Lamb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Montague
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Montague
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Montague sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krasimir Dimitrov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krasimir Dimitrov
Bulgaria

Note: Krasimir Dimitrov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Blackman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Blackman
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Blackman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Walsh
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jolanta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jolanta
Poland

—

Note: jolanta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Meyers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Meyers
Belgium

Note: Peter Meyers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Wheatley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Wheatley
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Wheatley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Vilmi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:13:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Vilmi
Finland

Note: Ruth Vilmi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Callaghan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Callaghan
Ireland

Note: Barbara Callaghan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephan Hammelberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephan Hammelberg
Spain

—

Note: Stephan Hammelberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glenn Pope
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

In the (ungrateful) UK we already have "up to" speeds marketed. I only get 1 of my "up to" 8 mb/s, which is slow anyway.

Because it is OK for companies to market a speed if 10% of their customers get it.

In this (nasty racist) country I have never met anyone getting the "up to" speed let alone 10%.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Glenn Pope]
[(un)United Kingdom]

Note: [Glenn Pope] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris carder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris carder
Spain

—

Note: chris carder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Patterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Patterson
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Patterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: shirley lowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

shirley lowe
United Kingdom

Note: shirley lowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ves Kostov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ves Kostov
United Kingdom

Note: Ves Kostov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Bell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Bell
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Bell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion press
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion press
United Kingdom

Note: Marion press sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tracey mold
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tracey mold
United Kingdom

Note: tracey mold sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian pretty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian pretty
United Kingdom

Note: brian pretty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viggy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viggy
Sweden

—

Note: Viggy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Butcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Butcher
United Kingdom

Note: Karl Butcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr Jake A Toon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr Jake A Toon
United Kingdom

Note: Mr Jake A Toon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Howard Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Howard Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Howard Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: matteo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

matteo
Italy

—

Note: matteo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian Bell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Bell
United Kingdom

Note: Marian Bell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Johansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Johansson
Sweden

—

Note: Peter Johansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marion Durkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marion Durkin
United Kingdom

Note: Marion Durkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisbet Skobe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisbet Skobe
Sweden

Note: Lisbet Skobe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophia van Ruth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophia van Ruth
Netherlands

Note: Sophia van Ruth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Balvinder Dhami
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Balvinder Dhami
United Kingdom

Note: Balvinder Dhami sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Occhipinti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Occhipinti
Belgium

Note: Sara Occhipinti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy Halliday
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy Halliday
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy Halliday sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: PETER CULLEN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

PETER CULLEN
United Kingdom

Note: PETER CULLEN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Madihaf
United Kingdom

Note: Madihaf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrice Anita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrice Anita
United States of America

Note: Patrice Anita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lui
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lui
United Kingdom

Note: Lui sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy Oakwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy Oakwood
United Kingdom

Note: Kathy Oakwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derwyn Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derwyn Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Derwyn Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Kay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Kay
Bulgaria

Note: Emma Kay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gustav VINKLER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gustav VINKLER
Sweden

Note: gustav VINKLER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr C Thanki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr C Thanki
United Kingdom

Note: Dr C Thanki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maartje
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maartje
Netherlands

Note: Maartje sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mihail Balabanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mihail Balabanov
Bulgaria

Note: Mihail Balabanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David jackson
United Kingdom

Note: David jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy
United Kingdom

Note: Kathy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny
Sweden

Note: Jenny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Takako Oxenløwe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Takako Oxenløwe
Denmark

Note: Takako Oxenløwe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Wróblewska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Wróblewska
Poland

Note: Maria Wróblewska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rainer Telaar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rainer Telaar
Luxembourg

Note: Rainer Telaar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marlene morvillo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marlene morvillo
Portugal

—

Note: marlene morvillo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lesley ringwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lesley ringwood
United Kingdom

Note: lesley ringwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis Haak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis Haak
Germany

Note: Dennis Haak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charis Dardougia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charis Dardougia
Greece

Note: Charis Dardougia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leif Kragh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leif Kragh
Denmark

Note: Leif Kragh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Jensen
Denmark

Note: Michael Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marni
United Kingdom

Note: marni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clair Szuts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Clair Szuts]
United Kingdom

Note: [Clair Szuts] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeff Faulkner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeff Faulkner
United Kingdom

Note: Jeff Faulkner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Walter Rasmussen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Walter Rasmussen
Germany

Note: Walter Rasmussen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Wolferstan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Wolferstan
United Kingdom England

Note: Frances Wolferstan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Audrey Griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Audrey Griffiths
United Kingdom

Note: Audrey Griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Savidge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:10:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Savidge
United Kingdom

Note: Frank Savidge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Baillie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Baillie
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Baillie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie Thompson
United Kingdom

Note: Sophie Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the cuRent proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the cuRent draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R
United Kingdom

Note: R sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Howe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Howe
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Howe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Domen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Domen Fras
Slovenia

Note: Domen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin O'Brien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin O'Brien
Ireland

—

Note: Kevin O'Brien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ines martins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ines martins
Portugal

Note: ines martins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: andrew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

andrew
United Kingdom

Note: andrew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adugna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adugna
United Kingdom

Note: Adugna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Beevor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Beevor
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Beevor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D M ALLMAN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D M ALLMAN
United Kingdom

Note: D M ALLMAN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Lee
United Kingdom

Note: Sam Lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rafaello Bergonse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rafaello Bergonse
Portugal

Note: Rafaello Bergonse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Weeks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Weeks
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Weeks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nous Tamu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nous Tamu
Tanzania

Note: Nous Tamu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marek Vosswinkel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marek Vosswinkel
Germany

Note: Marek Vosswinkel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ute Marxreiter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ute Marxreiter
Germany

Note: Ute Marxreiter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheena Pollet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheena Pollet
United Kingdom

Note: Sheena Pollet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: fiona OSullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

fiona OSullivan
United Kingdom

Note: fiona OSullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michiel Zwijnenburg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michiel Zwijnenburg
Netherlands

Note: Michiel Zwijnenburg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rasmus Sigvardt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:42

Dear Sir and or Madam

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rasmus Sigvardt
Copenhagen, Denmark

Note: Rasmus Sigvardt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antoni Pilarski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antoni Pilarski
Austria

Note: Antoni Pilarski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Strube
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Strube
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Strube sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bohumil Bednár
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bohumil Bednár
Czech Republic

Note: Bohumil Bednár sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Davinia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Davinia
[Gibraltar]

Note: I, Davinia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rickard Eriksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rickard Eriksson
Sweden

—

Note: Rickard Eriksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerry Clancy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerry Clancy
Ireland

—

Note: Gerry Clancy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nedyalko Vasilev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nedyalko Vasilev
Bulgaria

Note: Nedyalko Vasilev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Sturgess
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Sturgess
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Sturgess sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Kathy Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: vanderstuyft.johan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

vanderstuyft johan
Belgium

Note: vanderstuyft johan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kristel Morrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristel Morrison
United Kingdom

Note: Kristel Morrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Teresa Widdowson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Teresa Widdowson
United Kingdom

Note: Teresa Widdowson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ursula Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ursula Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Ursula Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris MacGregor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris MacGregor
United Kingdom

Note: Chris MacGregor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Hoas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Please do the right thing for the good of all peoples on this planet. We are challenged in a number of ways, and people need to be able to communicate effectively to be able to take action in a peaceful and democratic way.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Hoas
Denmark

Note: Anna Hoas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria De Blasi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria De Blasi
Germany

Note: Maria De Blasi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tom kalkman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tom kalkman
Sweden

Note: tom kalkman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erica Gregory
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erica Gregory
United Kingdom

Note: Erica Gregory sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jolanda Mul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jolanda Mul
Netherlands

Note: Jolanda Mul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Axel Augustin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Axel Augustin
Canada

Note: Axel Augustin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco Moebus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco Moebus
Germany

Note: Marco Moebus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Les Terris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Les Terris
Netherlands

Note: Les Terris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: elizabeth hargreaves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

elizabeth hargreaves
United Kingdom

Note: elizabeth hargreaves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bob
Sweden

—

Note: bob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Oliver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Oliver
Greece

Note: Maria Oliver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leo Moons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leo Moons
Belgium

Note: Leo Moons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisa Moir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisa Moir
UK

—

Note: [lisa moir] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dina
Netherlands

Note: Dina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Corinna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Keep the internet as free and neutral so that it can be there for the good of all, instead of just a few big corporations and the rich.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Corinna
United Kingdom

Note: Corinna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robbie Turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robbie Turner
Ireland

—

Note: Robbie Turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizia
United Kingdom

Note: Elizia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham Watts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Watts
United Kingdom

Note: Graham Watts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hugh scullion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hugh scullion
United Kingdom

Note: hugh scullion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jodie Partington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jodie Partington
United Kingdom

Note: Jodie Partington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hugo lima dos santos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hugo lima dos santos
Portugal

Note: hugo lima dos santos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jerry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jerry
United Kingdom

Note: Jerry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BENJAMIN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BENJAMIN
Germany

Note: BENJAMIN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: c.heaton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

c.heaton
United Kingdom

Note: c.heaton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tomi Puumalainen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tomi Puumalainen
Finland

Note: Tomi Puumalainen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: olivia cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

olivia cook
Spain

—

Note: olivia cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R. Reich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R. Reich
United Kingdom

Note: R. Reich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jonathan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jonathan
Luxembourg

Note: jonathan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kama Glover
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kama Glover
United Kingdom

Note: Kama Glover sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Sousa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Sousa
Portugal

Note: Ana Sousa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olivia Sanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olivia Sanders
United Kingdom

Note: Olivia Sanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannah
United Kingdom

Note: Hannah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Lind
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Lind
Sweden

Note: Peter Lind sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inger Draeby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inger Draeby
Denmark

Note: Inger Draeby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron Hurrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The American Constitution begins "We the people...." The People of Britain have spoken and the establishment have climbed down over Europe. Ultimately the power resides in the people and we are being driven to the point where, metaphorically speaking, we will start chopping off heads.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ron Hurrell
United Kingdom

Note: Ron Hurrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine
United Kingdom

Note: Christine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Pryce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Pryce
Malta

Note: Phil Pryce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reinier Kooistra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reinier Kooistra
Netherlands

Note: Reinier Kooistra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie Punte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie Punte
Netherlands

Note: Sophie Punte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Maughan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Maughan
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Maughan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gatis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gatis
Latvia

—

Note: Gatis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathrine Stannov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathrine Stannov
Belgium

Note: Kathrine Stannov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debbie Cotman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debbie Cotman
United Kingdom

Note: Debbie Cotman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Davin Pukulis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Davin Pukulis
United States of America

Note: Davin Pukulis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Finn Hansch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Finn Hansch
Germany

Note: Finn Hansch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoffrey Baldry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey Baldry
Greece

—

Note: Geoffrey Baldry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Rooney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Rooney
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Rooney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: linda.thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

linda thompson
United Kingdom

Note: linda thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Hall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Hall
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Hall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nerini Venito
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nerini Venito
Italy

Note: Nerini Venito sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Markov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Markov
United Kingdom

Note: M Markov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edouard Paquet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edouard Paquet
Luxembourg

Note: Edouard Paquet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandra Mann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandra Mann
United Kingdom

Note: Alexandra Mann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pietdewolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pietdewolf
France

—

Note: pietdewolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conor
United Kingdom

Note: Conor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark
United Kingdom

Note: Mark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Fry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Fry
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Fry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sanne Andersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sanne Andersen
Denmark

Note: Sanne Andersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Brailsford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Brailsford
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Brailsford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Poley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Poley
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Poley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sinead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sinead
Ireland

Note: Sinead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: F. Brekeveld
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

F. Brekeveld
Netherlands

Note: F. Brekeveld sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephanie Pratt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephanie Pratt
United Kingdom

Note: Stephanie Pratt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D. Kaiser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D. Kaiser
Germany

Note: D. Kaiser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Lloyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules create a virtual open space for EU citizens to meet and share ideas, information and creativity. As NATO commits itself to protecting cyberspace, there should also be a commitment to celebrating communal access to it.

--

David Lloyd
Finland

—

Note: David Lloyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Rafferty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Rafferty
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Rafferty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Seligman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Seligman
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Seligman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lotta Marjamäki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Please, listen to us. Young people don't want to live that kind of a future. Internet should be kept as a free continent for everyone to explore and use as a platform.

--

Lotta Marjamäki
Finland

—

Note: Lotta Marjamäki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
United Kingdom

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Watkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Watkin
United Kingdom

Note: Liz Watkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseph D Barry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseph D Barry
Ireland

Note: Joseph D Barry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gareth Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gareth Davies
France

—

Note: Gareth Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gil Sharp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gil Sharp
United Kingdom

Note: Gil Sharp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Johansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Johansson
Sweden

—

Note: Frank Johansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Backhouse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Backhouse
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Backhouse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Alexander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Alexander
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Alexander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arne Blom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arne Blom
Sweden

Note: Arne Blom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doug Borthwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Doug Borthwick
United Kingdom

Note: Doug Borthwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: maria_tsiatoura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

maria_tsiatoura
United Kingdom

Note: maria_tsiatoura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Pozo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Pozo
Spain

—

Note: Ana Pozo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: F.Santos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

F.Santos
Portugal

Note: F.Santos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Sotiriou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Sotiriou
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Sotiriou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Len Fisher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Len Fisher
United Kingdom

Note: Len Fisher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara
Italy

—

Note: Sara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marc mc mahon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marc mc mahon
Ireland

—

Note: marc mc mahon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niklas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niklas
Germany

Note: Niklas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike R. Hoeffken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike R. Hoeffken
Germany

Note: Mike R. Hoeffken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Baker-Rabe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Baker-Rabe
Poland

—

Note: John Baker-Rabe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Everett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I ask that you to close all loopholes within the current proposals allowing service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

Therefore, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Everett
United Kingdom

Note: Joe Everett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wendy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wendy
United Kingdom

Note: Wendy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Conall Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Conall Clarke
Ireland

Note: Conall Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Kathy Owen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Kathy Owen
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Kathy Owen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Woolmore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Woolmore
United Kingdom

Note: John Woolmore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco van Lenten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco van Lenten
Netherlands

Note: Marco van Lenten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernhard Röck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernhard Röck
Austria

Note: Bernhard Röck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david logue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

You will already have seen the mistrust in the UK for EU regulators please do not do anything that would encourage these people further

--

[david logue]
[Scotland UK]

Note: david logue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miina Seer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miina Seer
Estonia

Note: Miina Seer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Robertson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Robertson
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Robertson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kieran Laureston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kieran Laureston
United Kingdom

Note: Kieran Laureston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonio Gil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonio Gil
Portugal

Note: Antonio Gil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Stuckey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Stuckey
United Kingdom

Note: John Stuckey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Diack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Diack
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Diack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laurence Bryant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laurence Bryant
United Kingdom

Note: Laurence Bryant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Collins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Collins
Ireland

Note: Susan Collins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rodgers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rodgers
United Kingdom

Note: rodgers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Baines
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

""Please retain net neutrality for a democratic and fair internet. Ensure it is maintained as a basic utility with equal access for all.""

--

David Baines
United Kingdom

Note: David Baines sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonija Grubisic-Cabo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristoffer Basse
Croatia

—

Note: Kristoffer Basse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sb
United Kingdom

Note: Sb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian paterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian paterson
United Kingdom

Note: brian paterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingeborg Karsties
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingeborg Karsties
Germany

Note: Ingeborg Karsties sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aaliya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aaliya
United Kingdom

Note: Aaliya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: NORMA Wardle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

NORMA Wardle
United Kingdom

Note: NORMA Wardle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ausra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ausra
Lithuania

Note: Ausra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill Murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill Murray
United Kingdom

Note: Jill Murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Dovey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Dovey
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Dovey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laurence Parmenter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laurence Parmenter
United Kingdom

Note: Laurence Parmenter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire Newton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire Newton
United Kingdom

Note: Claire Newton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Bridgman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please consider this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines.

- Net neutrality protects us all from a corporate takeover of the Internet.
- Fast lanes for the highest bidder would force everyone else into a slow lane, making it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive among players like Google and Facebook.
- Please close loopholes in the current proposals that would let service providers prioritise some content and act as gatekeepers through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens. Now it’s Europe’s turn.

For these reasons I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Bridgman
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Bridgman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger
United Kingdom

Note: Roger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annette
United Kingdom

Note: Annette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Dods
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Dods
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Dods sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kjell Ekstrand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kjell Ekstrand
Sweden

Note: Kjell Ekstrand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: milica.pistolova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

milica.pistolova
Macedonia

Note: milica.pistolova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emily Kirby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emily Kirby
United Kingdom

Note: Emily Kirby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerontidis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerontidis
Greece

Note: Gerontidis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Tovey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Tovey
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Tovey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Minna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Minna
United Kingdom

Note: Minna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fredrik Feurst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fredrik Feurst
Sweden

Note: Fredrik Feurst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mari Maxwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mari Maxwell
Ireland

Note: Mari Maxwell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Miell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Miell
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Miell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Andrew Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Andrew Jensen
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Andrew Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Moore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Moore
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Moore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcelle Richardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcelle Richardson
United Kingdom

Note: Marcelle Richardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amy Darby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amy Darby
United Kingdom

Note: Amy Darby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Grahn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Grahn
Sweden

Note: Johan Grahn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda Richardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda Richardson
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda Richardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Theresa Fisher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Theresa Fisher
United Kingdom

Note: Theresa Fisher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jue Dwayne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jue Dwayne
United Kingdom

Note: Jue Dwayne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mahtab Ahmad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mahtab Ahmad
United Kingdom

Note: Mahtab Ahmad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dinu Munteanu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to immediately close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating", class-based traffic management or other similar methods or tactics.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dinu Munteanu
United Kingdom

Note: Dinu Munteanu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annika Kjellberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annika Kjellberg
Sweden

Note: Annika Kjellberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Sargent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Sargent
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Sargent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zafeipia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zafeipia
Greece

Note: Zafeipia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Dittmar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Dittmar
Germany

Note: Peter Dittmar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nazihm abdah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nazihm abdah
Qatar

Note: nazihm abdah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JULIE COLE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JULIE COLE
United Kingdom

Note: JULIE COLE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marten Hynard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marten Hynard
United Kingdom

Note: Marten Hynard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Fayers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Fayers
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Fayers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Stevens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Stevens
Belgium

Note: Michael Stevens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Justin Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Justin Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Justin Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dimitris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dimitris
Greece

—

Note: dimitris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Gledhill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Gledhill
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel Gledhill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul O'Hanlon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul O'Hanlon
United Kingdom

Note: Paul O'Hanlon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pekka Halonen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pekka Halonen
Finland

Note: Pekka Halonen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Sargent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Sargent
United Kingdom

Note: P Sargent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Bell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Bell
United Kingdom

Note: David Bell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ilonka de Beer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ilonka de Beer
Netherlands

Note: Ilonka de Beer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Subramaniam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Subramaniam
Ireland

—

Note: Subramaniam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denis
France

—

Note: Denis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura Moreton-griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura Moreton-griffiths
United Kingdom

Note: Laura Moreton-griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann
United Kingdom

Note: Ann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolín
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolín
Sweden

Note: Carolín sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hannah Waldron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hannah Waldron
United Kingdom

Note: hannah Waldron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Ellwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Ellwood
United Kingdom

Note: James Ellwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Balloch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Balloch
United Kingdom

Note: James Balloch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucas
France

—

Note: Lucas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Heaton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Heaton
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Heaton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eleni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eleni
Cyprus

Note: eleni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Alina Badora
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Alina Badora
Poland

Note: Barbara Alina Badora sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doreen Uterstädt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:53

Dear Sir or Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality needs to be protected for a lot of reasons. First and foremost the Internet should not be controlled by corporations. Keeping the Internet free ensures that everyone can use it equally. It also ensures diversity, competition and innovation.

The so called 'fast lanes' that large telecommunication corporation want to introduce for customers who pay for them, would result in 'slow lanes' for everyone else. Independent media, small start-ups and non-profit movements wouldn't be able to exist next to large corporations who dominate the market even now.

Furthermore, service providers should not be allowed to control any content access and allocation in any way. It's essential, in this regard, to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow them to do so.

Other countries like Brazil, the US and India have already implemented strong rules to ensure net neutrality. They have listened to their citizens. I urge you to hear our voice as well and protect an open and democratic Internet in Europe.

For this reason, please take the following policy analysis into consideration and change the current draft guidelines accordingly:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

With kind regards

Doreen Uterstädt
from Germany

—

Note: This message is part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open:
<https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stella
Bulgaria

Note: Stella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Axel Strijk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Axel Strijk
Netherlands

Note: Axel Strijk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erik Becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erik Becker
New Zealand

Note: Erik Becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc O Connor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc O Connor
Ireland

Note: Marc O Connor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Ramsbottom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Ramsbottom
United Kingdom

Note: James Ramsbottom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Verhoeven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Verhoeven
Netherlands

Note: Simon Verhoeven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan
United Kingdom

Note: Susan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart mclellan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart mclellan
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart mclellan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kostas K
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kostas K
Greece

—

Note: Kostas K sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas Welsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas Welsh
United Kingdom

Note: Nicholas Welsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Åke Boketoft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Åke Boketoft
Sweden

Note: Åke Boketoft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality should be one our fundamental freedoms!

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Davies
United Kingdom

Note: David Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gearoid nealon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gearoid nealon
Ireland

—

Note: gearoid nealon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Talib Syed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Talib Syed
Spain

Note: Talib Syed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Padraic Flynn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Padraic Flynn
Ireland

—

Note: Padraic Flynn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: antigonos sochos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

antigonos sochos
United Kingdom

Note: antigonos sochos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsti
Finland

—

Note: Kirsti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Thomas
United Kingdom

Note: G Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Stefan Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Stefan Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Stefan Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruben Hoffmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruben Hoffmann
Germany

Note: Ruben Hoffmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry James Oswald Tucker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Barry Tucker
England

—

[Barry Tucker] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JohnB
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JohnB
France

—

Note: JohnB sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eszter M
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eszter M
Hungary

Note: Eszter M sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tomas Antila
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tomas Antila
Sweden

Note: Tomas Antila sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jairo Sánchez-Galvis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jairo Sánchez-Galvis
Spain

—

Note: Jairo Sánchez-Galvis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pieter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pieter
Netherlands

Note: pieter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amie de Jeu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amie de Jeu
Netherlands

Note: Amie de Jeu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Hyland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Hyland
Ireland

Note: Helen Hyland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dan
Israel

—

Note: dan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amy spencer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amy spencer
United Kingdom

Note: Amy spencer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Solesbury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Solesbury
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Solesbury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Trenchard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 23:00:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Trenchard
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Trenchard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul O'Raw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul O'Raw
Ireland

Note: Paul O'Raw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: n craib
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

n craib
United Kingdom

Note: n craib sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christer Erlandson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christer Erlandson
Sweden

Note: Christer Erlandson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Westphal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Westphal
Germany

Note: Margaret Westphal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Timothy Burford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Timothy Burford
United Kingdom

Note: Timothy Burford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Stinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Stinson
United Kingdom

Note: David Stinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tobias Sjölund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tobias Sjölund
Sweden

Note: Tobias Sjölund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terry Lowther
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terry Lowther
United Kingdom

Note: Terry Lowther sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tristan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tristan
United Kingdom

Note: tristan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire Gripton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire Gripton
United Kingdom

Note: Claire Gripton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Holst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Holst
Denmark

Note: Per Holst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marek Czerwinski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marek Czerwinski
Poland

—

Note: Marek Czerwinski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacqueline Leach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacqueline Leach
United Kingdom

Note: Jacqueline Leach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: June miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

June miller
Ireland

—

Note: June miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henric Wiktor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henric Wiktor
Sweden

Note: Henric Wiktor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas
Ireland

Note: Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brenda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brenda
Spain

Note: Brenda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vicky McNeilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

I have two points:

- 1) Please can we stay in the EU?!
- 2)

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vicky McNeilly
United Kingdom

Note: Vicky McNeilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Brown
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr G S Mead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr G S Mead
United Kingdom

Note: Dr G S Mead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saskia Armée
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saskia Armée
Australia

Note: Saskia Armée sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane
United Kingdom

Note: Jane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Berit Pegg-Karlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Berit Pegg-Karlsson
United Kingdom

Note: Berit Pegg-Karlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin
Sweden

—

Note: Robin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ninah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ninah
United Kingdom

Note: ninah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valeria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valeria
Italy

—

Note: Valeria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Henson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Henson
United Kingdom

Note: Irene Henson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Green
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan Drapal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan Drapal
Czech Republic

Note: Dan Drapal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Garnham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Garnham
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Garnham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Cole Brooman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Cole Brooman
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Cole Brooman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arianna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arianna
Germany

Note: Arianna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nathan Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nathan Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Nathan Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrik Sevallius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrik Sevallius
Sweden

Note: Patrik Sevallius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Polona Medja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Polona Medja
Slovenia

Note: Polona Medja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: U Loew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

U Loew
Germany

Note: U Loew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geraldine Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geraldine Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Geraldine Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Hough
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Hough
Ireland

Note: Julian Hough sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rak Bibi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rak Bibi
United Kingdom

Note: Rak Bibi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kev Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kev Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Kev Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Naomi Chambers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Naomi Chambers
United Kingdom

Note: Naomi Chambers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonas Thoor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonas Thoor
Sweden

Note: Jonas Thoor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joyce Gregory
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joyce Gregory
United Kingdom

Note: Joyce Gregory sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edel Gött
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edel Gött
France

Note: Edel Gött sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Burnett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Burnett
United Kingdom

Note: Eva Burnett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
United Kingdom

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pumeza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pumeza
Germany

Note: Pumeza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vin West
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vin West
United Kingdom

Note: Vin West sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark IJkelenstam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark IJkelenstam
Netherlands

Note: Mark IJkelenstam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rochat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rochat
France

—

Note: rochat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Henderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Henderson
United Kingdom

Note: Nigel Henderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisjohn>

—

Note: john thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Gelissen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Gelissen
Netherlands

Note: Richard Gelissen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Geurts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Geurts
Netherlands

Note: Hans Geurts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chiara calegari
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chiara calegari
Spain

—

Note: chiara calegari sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Toet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Toet
Netherlands

Note: Edward Toet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Perry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Perry
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Perry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Rowold
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Rowold
Germany

Note: Tom Rowold sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: robert spicer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

robert spicer
United Kingdom

Note: robert spicer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: melissa hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

melissa hughes
United Kingdom

Note: melissa hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: oissine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,
!!!STOP BEING EVIL!!!

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

oissine
United Kingdom

Note: oissine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lucianne Zammit
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lucianne Zammit
Malta

—

Note: Lucianne Zammit sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Yarrow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Yarrow
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Yarrow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne
Cyprus

Note: Anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Satu Herrala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Satu Herrala
Finland

Note: Satu Herrala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noortje
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noortje
Netherlands

Note: Noortje sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorge Aguilera Colmenero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorge Aguilera Colmenero
Spain

Note: Jorge Aguilera Colmenero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew O'Keeffe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew O'Keeffe
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew O'Keeffe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Borsó Zsolt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Borsó Zsolt
Hungary

Note: Borsó Zsolt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Day
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Day
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Day sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthea Kemp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthea Kemp
United Kingdom

Note: Anthea Kemp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mairead McEntee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mairead McEntee
Ireland

—

Note: Mairead McEntee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Guillermo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Guillermo
Spain

—

Note: Guillermo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Polly Perkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Polly Perkins
Spain

—

Note: Polly Perkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alma
Ireland

—

Note: Alma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Norma W
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Norma W
United Kingdom

Note: Norma W sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mel Blunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mel Blunt
United Kingdom

Note: Mel Blunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Porter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Porter
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Porter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Silva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela MAria Azevedo da Silva
Portugal
Europa

Note: Angela Silva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Thavenius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Thavenius
Sweden

Note: Jan Thavenius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Conibear
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Conibear
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Conibear sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niclas Wennberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niclas Wennberg
Sweden

—

Note: Niclas Wennberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grazyna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grazyna
Ireland

Note: Grazyna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victor Galliano Villarejo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victor Galliano Villarejo
Spain

Note: Victor Galliano Villarejo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margret Barner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margret Barner
Germany

Note: Margret Barner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Hall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The person who invented the internet gave it to the world, did not sell it. So how can a group now try and take ownership of it and profit from it?

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Hall
United Kingdom

Note: Jo Hall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela
United Kingdom

Note: Angela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Donovan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Donovan
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Donovan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L.Pritchard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L Pritchard
United Kingdom

Note: L Pritchard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Camilla Andersson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Camilla Andersson
Sweden

—

Note: Camilla Andersson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Michael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Internet neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

Also, seeing the threat of Russian take-over in eastern Europe, there MUST BE neutrality allowing fast lines to be given to private, social and small commercial users lest big businesses take over the rule.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:
<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Michael
Germany

Note: Thomas Michael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Francis
UK

Note: Sue Francis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie ballet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Marie Ballet]
[Belgium]

Note: Marie ballet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Gilis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Gilis
Belgium

Note: Jan Gilis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Barclay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Barclay
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Barclay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Macdonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Macdonald
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick Macdonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Green
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian
Ireland

—

Note: Brian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L. osullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 16 July 2016 00:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L. osullivan
United Kingdom

Note: L. osullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org