

From: Michael Devaney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Devaney
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Devaney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Van Horen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Van Horen
Belgium

Note: Van Horen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas
Austria

Note: Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Brudenell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Brudenell
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Brudenell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lesley Wyldbore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lesley Wyldbore
UK

—

Note: Lesley Wyldbore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kay Phillipp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kay Phillipp
Germany

Note: Kay Phillipp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SIMON Hayward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SIMON Hayward
United Kingdom

Note: SIMON Hayward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael
Cyprus

Note: Michael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marzia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marzia
Italy

—

Note: Marzia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Benbw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Benbw
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Benbw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuel Alves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuel Alves
Portugal

Note: Manuel Alves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Hathaway
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Hathaway
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Hathaway sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Devey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Devey
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Devey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Barbosa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Barbosa
Portugal

Note: Ana Barbosa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rolad Rablanský
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rolad Rablanský
Slovakia

Note: Rolad Rablanský sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henry Mehta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henry Mehta
United Kingdom

Note: Henry Mehta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
United Kingdom

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Cotterill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Cotterill
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Cotterill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helga Brochhaus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helga Brochhaus
Portugal

Note: Helga Brochhaus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Vickerman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Vickerman
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Vickerman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorraine Cope
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorraine Cope
United Kingdom

Note: Lorraine Cope sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorna Sturgis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorna Sturgis
United Kingdom

Note: Lorna Sturgis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meddy Decouture
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meddy Decouture
United Kingdom

Note: Meddy Decouture sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Devereux
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Devereux
UNited Kingdom

Note: Andrew Devereux sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva
Sweden

—

Note: Eva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zainab
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zainab
United Kingdom

Note: Zainab sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
United Kingdom

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wim De Weerd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wim De Weerd
Belgium

Note: Wim De Weerd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lawrence Hunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lawrence Hunt
France

Note: Lawrence Hunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grainne Tobin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grainne Tobin
United Kingdom

Note: Grainne Tobin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: michael french
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

michael french
[United Kingdom]

Note: michael french sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Luke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Luke
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Luke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Jutander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Jutander
Sweden

Note: Jan Jutander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CORRIGER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CORRIGER
France

—

Note: CORRIGER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cecilia Rastad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cecilia Rastad
Sweden

Note: Cecilia Rastad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Tootal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam Tootal
United Kingdom

Note: Sam Tootal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: PETER LOFTY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

PETER LOFTY
United Kingdom

Note: PETER LOFTY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tracey Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tracey Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Tracey Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Gates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Gates
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Gates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Falk Siemering
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Falk Siemering
Germany

Note: Falk Siemering sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Cashman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Cashman
France

—

Note: Jennifer Cashman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip Pearce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip Pearce
United Kingdom

Note: Philip Pearce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue Young
United Kingdom

Note: Sue Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Stevenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Stevenson
United Kingdom

Note: John Stevenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Lark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Lark
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Lark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tavenier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tavenier
Netherlands

Note: Tavenier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Mackenzie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Mackenzie
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Mackenzie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nharker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nharker
United Kingdom

Note: nharker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dianne Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dianne Kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Dianne Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Förster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Förster
Germany

Note: Anna Förster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ervant Vatan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ervant Vatan
Slovakia

Note: Ervant Vatan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: soccorsi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

soccorsi
France

—

Note: soccorsi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Lautze
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Lautze
Germany

Note: Hans Lautze sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernadette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernadette
Ireland

Note: Bernadette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paolo Pagotto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paolo Pagotto
Italy

Note: Paolo Pagotto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harri Suuronen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harri Suuronen
Finland

Note: Harri Suuronen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Wiesmeier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Wiesmeier
Germany

Note: Christine Wiesmeier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trevor Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trevor Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Trevor Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clive Walley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clive Walley
Spain

Note: Clive Walley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siraj Meherali
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siraj Meherali
United Kingdom

Note: Siraj Meherali sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Ashcroft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Ashcroft
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Ashcroft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Sloan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Sloan
United Kingdom

Note: Geoff Sloan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Grubb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Grubb
Belgium

Note: Stephen Grubb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Y.v Mook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Madam, Sir,

Democracy and freedom are of supreme importance in society, in life; the internet is one its public spaces. Therefore, please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Y. v. Mook
the Netherlands

Note: Y v Mook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mae D'Arcy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mae D'Arcy
Ireland

Note: Mae D'Arcy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mauk den Boer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mauk den Boer
Netherlands

Note: Mauk den Boer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colm Mullen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colm Mullen
Ireland

Note: Colm Mullen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: aneta novakova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

aneta novakova
Czech Republic

Note: aneta novakova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: josephine.attard.biancardi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

josephine.attard.biancardi
Malta

—

Note: josephine.attard.biancardi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Sawatzky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Sawatzky
Germany

Note: John Sawatzky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian
Poland

Note: Adrian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah flint
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah flint
United Kingdom

Note: sarah flint sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippa Tomlinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippa Tomlinson
United Kingdom

Note: Philippa Tomlinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Nye
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Nye
Belgium

Note: Rachel Nye sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard van den Akker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard van den Akker
The Netherlands

Note: Gerard van den Akker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Reynolds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Reynolds
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Reynolds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fera
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fera
Netherlands

Note: Fera sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Ulrich Fauth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Ulrich Fauth
Germany

Note: Dr. Ulrich Fauth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helena
Slovenia

Note: Helena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kieran Carr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kieran Carr
United Kingdom

Note: Kieran Carr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alan holmes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alan holmes
United Kingdom

Note: alan holmes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Stott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Stott
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Stott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joanna Rosenthal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joanna Rosenthal
United Kingdom

Note: Joanna Rosenthal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Berry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Berry
United Kingdom

Note: Julia Berry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Myriam Driesens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Myriam Driesens
Netherlands

Note: Myriam Driesens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Solvej Petersen Olesen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Solvej Petersen Olesen
Denmark

Note: Solvej Petersen Olesen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather
United Kingdom

Note: Heather sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lesley Carr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lesley Carr
United Kingdom

Note: Lesley Carr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mucke Forsberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mucke Forsberg
Sweden

Note: Mucke Forsberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Buiskool
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Buiskool
Netherlands

Note: Anne Buiskool sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monika
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monika
Germany

Note: Monika sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolyn Ault
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolyn Ault
United Kingdom

Note: Carolyn Ault sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William Mbanga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William Mbanga
United Kingdom

Note: William Mbanga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silvia Toomet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silvia Toomet
Estonia

Note: Silvia Toomet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mylene chiron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mylene chiron
United Kingdom

Note: mylene chiron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anne.weltens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anne weltens
Spain

Note: anne weltens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Summers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Summers
United Kingdom

Note: R Summers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hoffer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hoffer
Switzerland

Note: Hoffer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cameron Snell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cameron Snell
United Kingdom

Note: Cameron Snell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: karine suhrbier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

karine suhrbier
United Kingdom

Note: karine suhrbier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Coen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Coen
Netherlands

Note: Coen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ewert Bengtsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ewert Bengtsson
Sweden

—

Note: Ewert Bengtsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ragnar Wikman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ragnar Wikman
Finland

Note: Ragnar Wikman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue
United Kingdom

Note: Sue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: wiesje schuitema
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

wiesje schuitema
Netherlands

Note: wiesje schuitema sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mischa Hewitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mischa Hewitt
United Kingdom

Note: Mischa Hewitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Clay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Clay
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Clay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Bradley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Bradley
Ireland

Note: John Bradley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorothea Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorothea Potter
Germany

Note: Dorothea Potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graham.smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

graham smith
United Kingdom

Note: graham smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alis Ballin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alis Ballin
Denmark

Note: Alis Ballin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elisabeth McMahon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:50:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elisabeth McMahon
United Kingdom

Note: Elisabeth McMahon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mirjam Stofkoper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mirjam Stofkoper
Sweden

Note: Mirjam Stofkoper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morten Anker Christensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morten Anker Christensen
Denmark

Note: Morten Anker Christensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annies Hall
England

Note: annies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Wilton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Wilton
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Wilton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Walsh
Ireland

Note: Susan Walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K Barker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K Barker
United Kingdom

Note: K Barker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr F Millar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr F Millar
United Kingdom

Note: Dr F Millar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Gaston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Gaston
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Gaston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JOHN BRIGHT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JOHN BRIGHT
United Kingdom

Note: JOHN BRIGHT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma
United Kingdom

Note: Emma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luke Baker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luke Baker
United Kingdom

Note: Luke Baker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niels
Netherlands

Note: Niels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana Kiersey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana Kiersey
Ireland

Note: Diana Kiersey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Blanca Aguirre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Blanca Aguirre
Spain

Note: Blanca Aguirre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Hadley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Hadley
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Hadley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maimuna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maimuna
United Kingdom

Note: Maimuna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dottie sommerville
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dottie sommerville
United Kingdom

Note: dottie sommerville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jos
Netherlands

Note: Jos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T T Collyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T T Collyer
United Kingdom

Note: T T Collyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: danny wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

danny wilson
France

Note: danny wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Burley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Burley
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Burley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Franz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Franz
Italy

—

Note: Franz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leander Schulz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leander Schulz
Germany

Note: Leander Schulz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerstin Björklund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerstin Björklund
Sweden

Note: Kerstin Björklund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tanja Brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I have taken this time to send this as i wish to Save The Internet

- Let neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Tanja Brown
United Kingdom____

Note: Tanja Brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca
Malta

Note: Rebecca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip le Grange
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip le Grange
Netherlands

Note: Philip le Grange sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alasdair Murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alasdair Murray
United Kingdom

Note: Alasdair Murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elea Kunz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elea Kunz
Germany

Note: Elea Kunz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlos José Vilela Lúcio Pereira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlos José Vilela Lúcio Pereira
Portugal

Note: Carlos José Vilela Lúcio Pereira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrzej M Zapletal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrzej M Zapletal
United Kingdom

Note: Andrzej M Zapletal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B Kelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B Kelly
Ireland

Note: B Kelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Hägeby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Hägeby
Sweden

Note: Hans Hägeby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Quinn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Quinn
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Quinn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wally Beale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wally Beale
France

Note: Wally Beale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Fuller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Fuller
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Fuller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Huebner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Huebner
Germany

Note: Frank Huebner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Timothy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Timothy
United Kingdom

Note: Timothy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maggy Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maggy Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Maggy Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kristina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristina
Germany

Note: Kristina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian McGahon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian McGahon
Ireland

Note: Ian McGahon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isabel Pataca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isabel Pataca
Portugal

Note: Isabel Pataca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan
Netherlands

Note: Jan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aine O'Hora
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aine O'Hora
Ireland

Note: Aine O'Hora sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manos Koumiotis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manos Koumiotis
Greece

Note: Manos Koumiotis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc Schoenauer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc Schoenauer
France

Note: Marc Schoenauer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pam Murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pam Murray
United Kingdom

Note: Pam Murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Di Felice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Di Felice
Italy

Note: Andrea Di Felice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: harry martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

harry martin
United Kingdom

Note: harry martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E Mollgaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Mollgaard
Luxembourg

Note: E Mollgaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Turner
United Kingdom

Note: David Turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Read
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Read
United Kingdom

Note: Read sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: neva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

neva
Slovenia

Note: neva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Dixon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Dixon
United Kingdom

Note: Jo Dixon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: T Pearson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

T Pearson
United Kingdom

Note: T Pearson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicky King
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicky King
United Kingdom

Note: Nicky King sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Houtman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Houtman
Netherlands

Note: Hans Houtman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lesley Scales
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lesley Scales
England

Note: Lesley Scales sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anders Ilsøe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anders Ilsøe
Denmark

Note: Anders Ilsøe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maisie collins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maisie collins
United Kingdom

Note: Maisie collins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katie Stibbon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katie Stibbon
United Kingdom

Note: Katie Stibbon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jamila r-c
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jamila r-c
United Kingdom

Note: jamila r-c sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henk van Capelle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henk van Capelle
Netherlands

Note: Henk van Capelle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellis Linders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellis Linders
United Kingdom

Note: Ellis Linders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Håkan Losjö
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Håkan Losjö
Sweden

Note: Håkan Losjö sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liam Bradley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liam Bradley
United Kingdom

Note: Liam Bradley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan
Netherlands

Note: Stefan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jordi Doce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jordi Doce
Spain

Note: Jordi Doce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie
United Kingdom

Note: Julie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rosemary rimmer-clay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rosemary rimmer-clay
United Kingdom

Note: rosemary rimmer-clay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chico Charlesworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chico Charlesworth
Ireland

Note: Chico Charlesworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Stanton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Stanton
UKUnited Kingdom

—

Note: Nigel Stanton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simone Lahbib
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simone Lahbib
United Kingdom

Note: Simone Lahbib sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ahmad aziz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ahmad aziz
Malta

Note: Ahmad aziz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aileen Hood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aileen Hood
United Kingdom

Note: Aileen Hood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Snyers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Snyers
Belgium

Note: Snyers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jamie Aylward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jamie Aylward
United Kingdom

Note: Jamie Aylward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daphne Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daphne Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Daphne Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Zagrodzki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Zagrodzki
Germany

Note: Susan Zagrodzki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Batten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Batten
Germany

Note: Alan Batten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: José Martins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

José Martins
Portugal

Note: José Martins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mette Millard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mette Millard
Denmark

Note: Mette Millard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agata Kawecka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agata Kawecka
Poland

Note: Agata Kawecka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: João Luis Arrais Laneiro Velez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

João Luis Arrais Laneiro Velez
Portugal

Note: João Luis Arrais Laneiro Velez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Meijer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Meijer
Netherlands

Note: Paul Meijer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mattias Holmström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mattias Holmström
Sweden

—

Note: Mattias Holmström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil H
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil H
United Kingdom

Note: Neil H sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K.garnham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K.garnham
United Kingdom

Note: K.garnham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ewan Lamont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ewan Lamont
United Kingdom

Note: Ewan Lamont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: yota
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

yota
Greece

—

Note: yota sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare Fennell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare Fennell
United Kingdom

Note: Clare Fennell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B Collingridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B Collingridge
United Kingdom

Note: B Collingridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ole Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[sender_Ole Hansen]
Denmark

Note: Ole Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William
United Kingdom

Note: William sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krzysiek Drozdowski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krzysiek Drozdowski
Poland

Note: Krzysiek Drozdowski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bruce Robertson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bruce Robertson
United Kingdom

Note: Bruce Robertson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Harrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Harrison
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Harrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nadine Vanlombeek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nadine Vanlombeek
Belgium

Note: Nadine Vanlombeek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tunde
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tunde
Hungary

Note: Tunde sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ESMAIL ESMAIL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ESMAIL ESMAIL
United Kingdom

Note: ESMAIL ESMAIL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Júlia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Júlia
Spain

—

Note: Júlia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nam Sangat Singh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nam Sangat Singh
Ireland

Note: Nam Sangat Singh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danish
Cyprus

Note: Danish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Politajs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Politajs
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Politajs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosalind Raizada
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosalind Raizada
United Kingdom

Note: Rosalind Raizada sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A Reid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A Reid
United Kingdom

Note: A Reid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graham westerling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

graham westerling
United Kingdom

Note: graham westerling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Beaton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Beaton
United Kingdom

Note: J Beaton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Schiesser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Schiesser
France

—

Note: Schiesser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo reed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo reed
United Kingdom

Note: Jo reed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Weir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Weir
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Weir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Gegg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Gegg
United Kingdom

Note: Kate Gegg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Browne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Browne
France

Note: Christine Browne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pyne Frederick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pyne Frederick
United Kingdom

Note: Pyne Frederick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niall
Ireland

Note: Niall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: emma weekes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

emma weekes
United Kingdom

Note: emma weekes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Reynolds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Reynolds
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Reynolds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria-Dolores Lefcovitch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria-Dolores Lefcovitch
United Kingdom

Note: Maria-Dolores Lefcovitch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vincent Gaspar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:08

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vincent Gaspar
Sweden

Note: Vincent Gaspar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Clare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Clare
Ireland

Note: David Clare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Purnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Purnell
Ireland

Note: Chris Purnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pamela Dorothea Curtis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pamela Dorothea Curtis
United Kingdom

Note: Pamela Dorothea Curtis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Bradshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Bradshaw
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Bradshaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Chuter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Chuter
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Chuter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma
Sweden

—

Note: Emma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natasa Gjorgjevska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natasa Gjorgjevska
Germany

Note: Natasa Gjorgjevska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Clay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Clay
France

Note: Nick Clay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ines
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ines
Austria

Note: Ines sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Collinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Collinson
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Collinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fábio Ribeiro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fábio Ribeiro
Portugal

Note: Fábio Ribeiro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tessa Hicks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tessa Hicks
United Kingdom

Note: Tessa Hicks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie
United Kingdom

Note: Julie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Parigger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Parigger
Austria

Note: Barbara Parigger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iggi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iggi
United Kingdom

Note: Iggi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simona Tarantino
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simona Tarantino
Italy

Note: Simona Tarantino sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: antonella
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

antonella
Italy

Note: antonella sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Pais
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Pais
Portugal

Note: Miguel Pais sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Kilbane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Kilbane
Ireland

Note: Joe Kilbane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Leicester
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Leicester
United Kingdom

Note: David Leicester sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Jenny Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emily
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emily
Belgium

Note: Emily sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toni
Greece

—

Note: Toni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sofia de Mencia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sofia de Mencia
Portugal

Note: Sofia de Mencia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: NEAL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

NEAL
United Kingdom

Note: NEAL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marina
United States of America

Note: Marina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rene Abbuhl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rene Abbuhl
Netherlands

Note: Rene Abbuhl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emilio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emilio
Italy

—

Note: Emilio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rasmus Bang Petersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rasmus Bang Petersen
Denmark

Note: Rasmus Bang Petersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mattias
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mattias
Sweden

Note: Mattias sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabrielle Beamish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabrielle Beamish
Greece

Note: Gabrielle Beamish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Tyler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Tyler
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Tyler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Linda wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Carwardine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Carwardine
United Kingdom

Note: Tom Carwardine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sylvain Lamant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sylvain Lamant
Belgium

Note: Sylvain Lamant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Charalambos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Charalambos
United Kingdom

Note: P Charalambos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Davis
Ireland

Note: James Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Samantha jane Carlile
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Samantha jane Carlile
Finland

Note: Samantha jane Carlile sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pete Fitzpatrick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pete Fitzpatrick
United Kingdom

Note: Pete Fitzpatrick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Koch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Koch
Germany

Note: Paul Koch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The internet was created to allow a free flow of ideas. Please don't act against this.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linden
United Kingdom

Note: Linden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthias Wanner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthias Wanner
Germany

Note: Matthias Wanner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trevor Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trevor Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Trevor Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Ventris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The internet was set up for the free exchange of information and should be available for all on the same terms, be we individuals or large international corporations. To set up one system for large internet companies/cororations and another slower system for individuals and independent media groups defeats the initial aim of the creators of the internet from 1960s onwards.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For the above reasons, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Ventris
United Kingdom

Note: Irene Ventris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carole
United Kingdom

Note: carole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Osman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Osman
United Kingdom

Note: Osman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ieva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ieva
Lithuania

Note: Ieva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B. Roach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B. Roach
United Kingdom

Note: B. Roach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gary Noble
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gary Noble
United Kingdom

Note: gary Noble sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris
United Kingdom

Note: chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vikki Middleton-Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vikki Middleton-Blake
United Kingdom

Note: Vikki Middleton-Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susanne Birks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susanne Birks
United Kingdom

Note: Susanne Birks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: darina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

darina
Slovakia

Note: darina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Chisholm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Chisholm
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Chisholm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Marina Packalén
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Marina Packalén
Finland

Note: Andrea Marina Packalén sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anthony fenwick-wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anthony fenwick-wilson
United Kingdom

Note: anthony fenwick-wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fereshteh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fereshteh
United Kingdom

Note: Fereshteh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marco
Portugal

—

Note: Marco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Pym
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Pym
United Kingdom

Note: John Pym sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Thomas
United Kingdom

Note: E Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Booth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Booth
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Booth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rene Hogendoorn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rene Hogendoorn
Netherlands

Note: Rene Hogendoorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Lillingston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Lillingston
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Lillingston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gemma Clifton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gemma Clifton
United Kingdom

Note: Gemma Clifton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Postma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Postma
Netherlands

Note: J Postma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Royston Rogers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Royston Rogers
United Kingdom

Note: Royston Rogers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louis Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louis Young
United Kingdom

Note: Louis Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max
Italy

—

Note: Max sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JANET JENKINS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JANET JENKINS
United Kingdom

Note: JANET JENKINS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judy
United Kingdom

Note: Judy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susanne Degerfors
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Susanne Degerfors
Sweden

Note: Susanne Degerfors sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Evershed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Evershed
United Kingdom

Note: Edward Evershed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alisdair Cruchley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alisdair Cruchley
United Kingdom

Note: Alisdair Cruchley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BENJAMIN PEARCE-HIGGINS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BENJAMIN PEARCE-HIGGINS
United Kingdom

Note: BENJAMIN PEARCE-HIGGINS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Casement
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Casement
United Kingdom

Note: Edward Casement sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stavrina Lampadari
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stavrina Lampadari
Greece

Note: Stavrina Lampadari sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Ewen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Ewen
United Kingdom

Note: Jim Ewen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B Lovegrove
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B Lovegrove
United Kingdom

Note: B Lovegrove sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yoshimi Wako
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yoshimi Wako
Czech Republic

Note: Yoshimi Wako sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Sayer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Sayer
Ireland

Note: Liz Sayer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kristiaan Renaerts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristiaan Renaerts
Belgium

Note: Kristiaan Renaerts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miriam Bisson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miriam Bisson
United Kingdom

Note: Miriam Bisson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dave astin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dave astin
United Kingdom

Note: dave astin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Per Petersson]
[Sweden]

—

Note: Per sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simona
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simona
Czech Republic

Note: Simona sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CLAIRE HARRISON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CLAIRE HARRISON
United Kingdom

Note: CLAIRE HARRISON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tomas Frajt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tomas Frajt
Slovakia

Note: Tomas Frajt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Glen
United Kingdom

Note: Glen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Felix Uehlein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Felix Uehlein
Germany

Note: Felix Uehlein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Celia Savage
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

This is very important, so please a moment to read and consider this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Celia Savage
United Kingdom

Note: Celia Savage sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M.Freisinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Freisinger
Luxembourg

Note: M Freisinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:40:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul
United Kingdom

Note: Paul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Vowles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Vowles
France

Note: J Vowles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Melamed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Melamed
United Kingdom

Note: Tom Melamed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrej
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrej
Slovenia

Note: Andrej sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Murr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Murr
United Kingdom

Note: David Murr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rania
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rania
Greece

Note: Rania sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcel Ortin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcel Ortin
Spain

Note: Marcel Ortin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: vic evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

vic evans
France

—

Note: vic evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pelle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pelle
Netherlands

—

Note: Pelle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nona Ephraim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:
<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nona Ephraim
United Kingdom

Note: Nona Ephraim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: martin richardson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

martin richardson
United Kingdom

Note: martin richardson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SUZANNE YOUNG
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SUZANNE YOUNG
Ireland

Note: SUZANNE YOUNG sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Nilsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Nilsson
Sweden

Note: Frank Nilsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brian woods
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brian woods
United Kingdom

Note: brian woods sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob Bathead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob Bathead
United Kingdom

Note: Jacob Bathead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaus Pedersen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaus Pedersen
Malta

—

Note: Klaus Pedersen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Stefanescu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Stefanescu
Romania

Note: Alex Stefanescu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Adams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Freedom to access and distribute information without restriction is fundamental to our free society. This must continue without reliance on financial resource.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Adams
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Adams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill
United Kingdom

Note: Bill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Wiklund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

This is a vital connection for so many of us and needs to be handled responsibly and democratically....

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Wiklund
Finland

Note: Alison Wiklund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: felicity eliot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

felicity eliot
Netherlands

Note: felicity eliot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grisha Georgiev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grisha Georgiev
Bulgaria

Note: Grisha Georgiev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Tinegate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[M Tinegate]
[United Kingdom]

Note: M Tinegate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juliane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juliane
Germany

Note: Juliane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sevasti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sevasti
Greece

Note: Sevasti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SARENA EDWARDS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SARENA EDWARDS
United Kingdom

Note: SARENA EDWARDS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: F STOUFFS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

F STOUFFS
Belgium

Note: F STOUFFS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: madeleine dao
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

madeleine dao
France

Note: madeleine dao sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ladislaus Baidinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ladislaus Baidinger
Germany

Note: Ladislaus Baidinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isobel Laskowska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isobel Laskowska
United Kingdom

Note: Isobel Laskowska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Baglow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Baglow
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Baglow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daems Caroline
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daems Caroline
Belgium

Note: Daems Caroline sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dan

United Kingdom

—

Note: dan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie
United Kingdom

Note: Sophie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Byrne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Byrne
Ireland

Note: Martin Byrne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Megan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Megan
United Kingdom

Note: Megan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S. Topham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S. Topham
Germany

Note: S. Topham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chloe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chloe
United Kingdom

Note: Chloe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gregory Spittle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gregory Spittle
United Kingdom

Note: Gregory Spittle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morten Blichfeldt-Eckhardt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morten Blichfeldt-Eckhardt
Denmark

Note: Morten Blichfeldt-Eckhardt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet crowley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet crowley
Ireland

Note: Janet crowley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alice Cescatti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alice Cescatti
United Kingdom

Note: Alice Cescatti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Heeley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Heeley
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Heeley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Abbott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Abbott
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Abbott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vilija
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vilija
Lithuania

Note: Vilija sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beate
Germany

Note: Beate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellie Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellie Davis
United Kingdom

Note: Ellie Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michel Meyers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michel Meyers
Luxembourg

Note: Michel Meyers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Ricketts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Ricketts
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Ricketts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isabelle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isabelle
Netherlands

Note: Isabelle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianna Jung
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianna Jung
Denmark

Note: Marianna Jung sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elodie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elodie
New Zealand

Note: Elodie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Mckernan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Mckernan
United Kingdom

Note: Tim Mckernan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H.J.Jansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H.J.Jansen
Netherlands

Note: H.J.Jansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nina
Gibraltar

Note: Nina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Kiely
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Kiely
United Kingdom

Note: John Kiely sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Idle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Tim Berners-Lee conceived of the internet for EVERYONE equally, In today's global world many of the problems are due to unequal access to education, safety, water, capital, land etc and the internet is one place we can all operate equally as citizens of the world.

I ask you to consider the consequences carefully before your power to disempower us

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Idle
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Idle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: uroš zotler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

uroš zotler
Slovenia

Note: uroš zotler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr Jack H Travers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr Jack H Travers
United Kingdom

Note: Mr Jack H Travers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sofia Andreeva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sofia Andreeva
Bulgaria

Note: Sofia Andreeva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: :Ireneusz-Jan :Kryczka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

:Ireneusz-Jan :Kryczka
United Kingdom

Note: :Ireneusz-Jan :Kryczka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Meg Bagnall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Meg Bagnall
United Kingdom

Note: Meg Bagnall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lies Vernimmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lies Vernimmen
Belgium

Note: Lies Vernimmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah
Ireland

Note: sarah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
United Kingdom

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: fiona.randall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

fiona randall
United Kingdom

Note: fiona randall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Kallioniemi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Kallioniemi
Sweden

Note: Peter Kallioniemi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ealish Whillock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ealish Whillock
Ireland

Note: Ealish Whillock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerben ter Riet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerben ter Riet
Netherlands

Note: Gerben ter Riet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ILEANA NOPPE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ILEANA NOPPE
France

—

Note: ILEANA NOPPE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monica
Portugal

Note: Monica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Javier Criado
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Javier Criado
Spain

—

Note: Javier Criado sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality is an essential part of a modern open democratic society. Net neutrality rules foster diversity, equality and innovation. They allow for healthy economic competition and protect us from a corporate takeover of the Internet.

Allowing internet 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, by default creates a 'slow lane' for the rest of us. This discrimination is unacceptable as it would negatively impact small businesses, independent media outlets and citizen movements like Avaaz compared to the major players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike
United Kingdom

Note: Mike sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen macfie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen macfie
United Kingdom

Note: Helen macfie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mia Krokstade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mia Krokstade
Sweden

Note: Mia Krokstade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans-Jurgen Quadbeck-Seeger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans-Jurgen Quadbeck-Seeger
Netherlands

Note: Hans-Jurgen Quadbeck-Seeger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denis Kozmér
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denis Kozmér
Denmark

Note: Denis Kozmér sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vicki Patterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vicki Patterson
United Kingdom

Note: Vicki Patterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zalos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zalos
Germany

Note: Zalos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erwin Oorebeek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erwin Oorebeek
Netherlands

Note: Erwin Oorebeek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Y.AST
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Y.AST
Netherlands

Note: Y.AST sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Ken Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva-Carin Hedberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva-Carin Hedberg
Sweden

Note: Eva-Carin Hedberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Corbell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Corbell
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Corbell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Willy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Willy
France

Note: Willy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert
United Kingdom

Note: Robert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Bronstein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Bronstein
United Kingdom

Note: Joe Bronstein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beatriz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beatriz
Portugal

Note: Beatriz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angus Towler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angus Towler
United Kingdom

Note: Angus Towler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Senior
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Stay true to the ideals of Tim Berners-Lee. WE owe it to him.

--

Brian Senior
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Senior sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henry Garner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henry Garner
United Kingdom

Note: Henry Garner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lizzie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lizzie
United Kingdom

Note: Lizzie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lieselotte Christ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lieselotte Christ
Germany

Note: Lieselotte Christ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda Browning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda Browning
United Kingdom

Note: Amanda Browning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dyson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dyson England UK

Note: Dyson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandra Drotz Ruhn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandra Drotz Ruhn
Sweden

Note: Alexandra Drotz Ruhn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy Crute
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy Crute
United Kingdom

Note: Kathy Crute sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Okugbeni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Okugbeni
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Okugbeni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronnie Sievewright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronnie Sievewright
United Kingdom

Note: Ronnie Sievewright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Short
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Short
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Short sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martine
Belgium

Note: Martine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pauline Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pauline Gray
United Kingdom

Note: Pauline Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rita donovan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rita donovan
United Kingdom

Note: rita donovan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Knappett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Knappett
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Knappett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Street
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Street
United Kingdom

Note: John Street sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elise Deppe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elise Deppe
Germany

Note: Elise Deppe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roobina gill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roobina gill
United Kingdom

Note: Roobina gill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Penelope Pattoglio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Penelope Pattoglio
Italy

Note: Penelope Pattoglio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: malcolm buteux
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

malcolm buteux
United Kingdom

Note: malcolm buteux sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Westwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Westwood
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Westwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hazel Burgin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hazel Burgin
United Kingdom

Note: Hazel Burgin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Browne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Browne
Ireland

Note: Robert Browne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Han van Yperen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Han van Yperen
Netherlands

Note: Han van Yperen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elen Ifan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elen Ifan
United Kingdom

Note: Elen Ifan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Webster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Webster
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Webster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pavla Kopecká
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pavla Kopecká
Czech Republic

Note: Pavla Kopecká sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: June king
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

June king
United Kingdom

Note: June king sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Green
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

From my view, a free and open internet is a beautiful and powerful tool that connects humanity across the globe. By imposing discriminatory rules on its use and content it will be small business, NGOs, indie media and individuals that will lose out. In no way should the monopolisation of internet bandwidth be allowed, nor the censoring of internet content on a national level. A truly free internet connects people, strengthens independent voices, allows the sharing of a vast wealth of knowledge, improves democracy and so much more. Please do all you can to maintain the status of the internet.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For these reasons, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Green
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Green sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stree
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stree
France

—

Note: stree sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Jameson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Jameson
United Kingdom

Note: Adrian Jameson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niel van Vlaanderen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niel van Vlaanderen
United Kingdom

Note: Niel van Vlaanderen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Ames
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Ames
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Ames sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean Wilmshurst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean Wilmshurst
United Kingdom

Note: Jean Wilmshurst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ignacio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ignacio
Spain

—

Note: Ignacio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Jennings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Jennings
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Jennings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis Talbot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis Talbot
United Kingdom

Note: Dennis Talbot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Sykes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Sykes
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Sykes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carla zumbado
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carla zumbado
Spain

Note: carla zumbado sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carl Jonathan Forrester
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carl Jonathan Forrester
Italy

Note: Carl Jonathan Forrester sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lawrence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Do not give in to bribery, or accept large sums of money or reward to look the other way, you will be shooting yourself in the foot.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lawrence
United Kingdom

Note: Lawrence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonia klajnberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonia klajnberg
Germany

Note: Sonia klajnberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mariusz C. kozak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mariusz C. kozak
Netherlands

Note: Mariusz C. kozak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Neil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Neil
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Neil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Hartmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Hartmann
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Hartmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Rolfe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Rolfe
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Rolfe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Reid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Reid
United Kingdom

Note: Liz Reid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: JENNY JEMISON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

JENNY JEMISON
United Kingdom

Note: JENNY JEMISON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fabian Boutall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fabian Boutall
United Kingdom

Note: Fabian Boutall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisa Metherell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisa Metherell
United Kingdom

Note: Lisa Metherell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Price
United Kingdom

Note: Andrea Price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benedetto Spina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benedetto Spina
Italy

Note: Benedetto Spina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: STEWART C LEWIS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

STEWART C LEWIS
Denmark

Note: STEWART C LEWIS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maarit Luck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maarit Luck
United Kingdom

Note: Maarit Luck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Vernimmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Vernimmen
Netherlands

Note: Max Vernimmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bojk Berghuis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bojk Berghuis
Netherlands

Note: Bojk Berghuis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Seal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Andrew
Andrew Seal
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Seal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Ballard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Ballard
United Kingdom

Note: John Ballard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: julie palmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

julie palmer
United Kingdom

Note: julie palmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aldona muska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aldona muska
United Kingdom

Note: Aldona muska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Corbett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Corbett
United Kingdom

Note: John Corbett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex van Wettum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Kind regards,
Alex van Wettum
Netherlands

Note: Alex van Wettum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doraly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Doraly
London UK

Note: Doraly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sian Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sian Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Sian Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daisy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daisy
United Kingdom

Note: Daisy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inger Ludwigson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inger Ludwigson
Sweden

Note: Inger Ludwigson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M H
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M H
United Kingdom

Note: M H sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob Atzen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob Atzen
Denmark

Note: Jacob Atzen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john smith
United Kingdom

Note: john smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlotte Keech
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlotte Keech
United Kingdom

Note: Charlotte Keech sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gaurang Thaker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gaurang Thaker
United Kingdom

Note: Gaurang Thaker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Ware
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Ware
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Ware sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bengt Mjöberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bengt Mjöberg
Sweden

Note: Bengt Mjöberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Indrani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Indrani
United Kingdom

Note: Indrani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peeters denis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peeters denis
Belgium

Note: Peeters denis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gregory Fenton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gregory Fenton
United Kingdom

Note: Gregory Fenton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana
Netherlands

Note: Diana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Knight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Knight
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Knight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Quirk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

The Internet allows freedom of speech and freedom to access information to people a cross the world. It should not be controlled or high-jacked by those with pecuniary vested interests!

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Quirk
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Quirk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Ttip will lead to a rise in piracy and vpn services just to spite your multinational companies. Leave us alone

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben smith
United Kingdom

Note: Ben smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Duff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Duff
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Duff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Till
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Till
Germany

Note: Till sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marios Gkionis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marios Gkionis
Greece

Note: Marios Gkionis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Lawson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Lawson
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Lawson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Struthers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Struthers
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Struthers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark
United Kingdom

Note: Mark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Demijan Lesjak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Demijan Lesjak
Slovenia

Note: Demijan Lesjak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerry
United Kingdom

Note: Kerry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toby Jeffries
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toby Jeffries
United Kingdom

Note: Toby Jeffries sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannes Griffith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannes Griffith
United Kingdom

Note: Hannes Griffith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Nielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Nielsen
Denmark

Note: Johan Nielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eleanor Thurston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eleanor Thurston
United Kingdom

Note: Eleanor Thurston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine B.H.Tolderlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine B H Tolderlund
Denmark

Note: Christine B H Tolderlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Heather
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Heather
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Heather sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Smith
Ireland

Note: Richard Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B. Koehler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B. Koehler
Germany

Note: B. Koehler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Spickernell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Spickernell
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Spickernell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: Ken Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim Knott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim Knott
United Kingdom

Note: Tim Knott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Hall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Hall
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Hall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Saville
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Saville
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Saville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Descamps
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Descamps
France

Note: Edward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Orna Hadary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Orna Hadary
United Kingdom

Note: Orna Hadary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Almudena Pérez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Almudena Pérez
Spain

Note: Almudena Pérez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harald Schmutzhard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harald Schmutzhard
Austria

Note: Harald Schmutzhard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erik Vrees
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erik Vrees
Netherlands

Note: Erik Vrees sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monika Eckardt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monika Eckardt
Italy

Note: Monika Eckardt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Taylor
Spain

Note: Christopher Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mans Nyberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mans Nyberg
Austria

Note: Mans Nyberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H stob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H stob
Netherlands

Note: H stob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: christopher hardwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

christopher hardwick
Ireland

Note: christopher hardwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edgars
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edgars
Latvia

Note: Edgars sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: k.aitken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

k.aitken
United Kingdom

Note: k.aitken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klara
United States of America

Note: Klara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Spyridoula Kolossa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Spyridoula Kolossa
Germany

Note: Spyridoula Kolossa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D.M. de Leeuw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D.M. de Leeuw
Netherlands

Note: D.M. de Leeuw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: micke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

micke
Sweden

—

Note: micke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Obermeier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Obermeier
Germany

Note: Obermeier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathryn Lydon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathryn Lydon
United Kingdom

Note: Kathryn Lydon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Bawler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Bawler
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Bawler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Feierabend
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:30:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Feierabend
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Feierabend sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kim Trotter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Kim Trotter]
[United Kingdom]

—

Note: [Kim Trotter] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachael Dunn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachael Dunn
United Kingdom

Note: Rachael Dunn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Auke Pols
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Auke Pols
Netherlands

Note: Auke Pols sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Nichols-Rexwall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Nichols-Rexwall
Sweden

—

Note: Karen Nichols-Rexwall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy Plummer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy Plummer
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy Plummer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eric Scanlon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eric Scanlon
Ireland

Note: Eric Scanlon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm CROOK
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm CROOK
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm CROOK sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Coombe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Coombe
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Coombe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: WilliamBras
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

WilliamBras
Netherlands

Note: WilliamBras sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Tyler-Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Tyler-Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Tyler-Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarita Nahar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarita Nahar
United Kingdom

Note: Sarita Nahar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandra Mazilu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandra Mazilu
Romania

Note: Alexandra Mazilu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabby Aquilina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabby Aquilina
United Kingdom

Note: Gabby Aquilina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Kukan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Kukan
Czech Republic

Note: Jan Kukan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann
United Kingdom

Note: Ann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tomas håkansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tomas håkansson
Sweden

Note: tomas håkansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philip
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philip
United Kingdom

Note: Philip sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mar de Leon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mar Leon
Germany

Note: Mar de Leon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miquel Alcaraz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miquel Alcaraz
Spain

Note: Miquel Alcaraz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Booth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Booth
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Booth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerwin Verschuur
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Gerwin Verschuur]
[the Netherlands]

—

Note: Gerwin Verschuur sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel van Cappelle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel van Cappelle
Germany

Note: Daniel van Cappelle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Moss Ladbroke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Moss Ladbroke
United Kingdom

Note: Moss Ladbroke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lu Wray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lu Wray
United Kingdom

Note: Lu Wray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susen Wriedt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susen Wriedt
Sweden

Note: Susen Wriedt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kimball Ormond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kimball Ormond
United Kingdom

Note: Kimball Ormond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: claire davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

claire davies
United Kingdom

Note: claire davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Walter Schollum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Walter Schollum
Austria

Note: Walter Schollum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: c.stembridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

c stembridge
Austria

Note: c stembridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noura
United Kingdom

Note: Noura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathleen Pye
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathleen Pye
United Kingdom

Note: Kathleen Pye sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rinaldo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rinaldo
Netherlands

Note: Rinaldo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krasimir Stoyanov Stoyanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krasimir Stoyanov Stoyanov
France

Note: Krasimir Stoyanov Stoyanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elin Örum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elin Örum
Sweden

Note: Elin Örum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank
Germany

Note: Frank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Norris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Norris
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Norris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandulache Dumitru
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandulache Dumitru
Romania

Note: Sandulache Dumitru sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Bentley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Bentley
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Bentley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paola Gotti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paola Gotti
United Kingdom

Note: Paola Gotti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Harvey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Harvey
United Kingdom

Note: James Harvey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sabine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sabine
United Kingdom

Note: Sabine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linsey Pluckrose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linsey Pluckrose
United Kingdom

Note: Linsey Pluckrose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jannik Ejning Bjerg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jannik Ejning Bjerg
Denmark

Note: Jannik Ejning Bjerg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arturas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arturas
Ireland

Note: Arturas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew McLeod
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew McLeod
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew McLeod sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ed
United Kingdom

Note: Ed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bess Miles-Duncan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bess Miles-Duncan
United Kingdom

Note: Bess Miles-Duncan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Reeves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Reeves
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Reeves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Koen van Dijk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Koen van Dijk
Netherlands

Note: Koen van Dijk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: linda long
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

linda long
United Kingdom

Note: linda long sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francoise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francoise
Belgium

Note: Francoise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cecilia Pedroza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cecilia Pedroza
Italy

Note: Cecilia Pedroza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Fairclough
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Fairclough
United Kingdom

Note: P Fairclough sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Larkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Larkin]
United Kingdom

Note: David Larkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Noel Kelleher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Noel Kelleher
Ireland

Note: Noel Kelleher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Dixon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[P Dixon]
[UK]

—

Note: Peter Dixon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Robertson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Robertson
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Robertson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Ryan
Ireland

Note: Catherine Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dai Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dai Wright
United Kingdom

Note: Dai Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ivan Datko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ivan Datko
Czech Republic

Note: Ivan Datko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miss RS Coe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miss RS Coe
United Kingdom

Note: Miss RS Coe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Axel Brorson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Axel Brorson
Norway

Note: Axel Brorson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jw_drijver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jw drijver
Netherlands

Note: jw drijver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
Ireland

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean Laura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean Laura
United Kingdom

Note: Jean Laura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lena Amberger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lena Amberger
Germany

Note: Lena Amberger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Barker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Barker
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Barker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam Stewart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Sam Stewart
United Kingdom

—

Note: Sam Stewart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zuidema
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zuidema
France

Note: Zuidema sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ger Malone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ger Malone
Ireland

Note: Ger Malone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Rehm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Rehm
Germany

Note: Michael Rehm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krisztina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krisztina
United Kingdom

Note: Krisztina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Friedrich Sterner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Friedrich Sterner
Germany

Note: Friedrich Sterner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrej
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrej
Ireland

Note: Andrej sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Gebert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Gebert
Sweden

Note: Max Gebert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rory Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rory Blake
United Kingdom

Note: Rory Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
United Kingdom

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Griffiths
Germany

Note: Andrea Griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary Watkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary Watkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary Watkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Bond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Bond
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Bond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doug Lennon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Doug Lennon
United Kingdom

Note: Doug Lennon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.C. Lorquet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J.C. Lorquet
Belgium

Note: J.C. Lorquet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rod Devonshire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rod Devonshire
United Kingdom

Note: Rod Devonshire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mohammed Bilal ahmed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mohammed Bilal ahmed
United Kingdom

Note: Mohammed Bilal ahmed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda James
United Kingdom

Note: Linda James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: diana leishman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

diana leishman
United Kingdom

Note: diana leishman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Rous
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Rous
United Kingdom

Note: Benjamin Rous sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom Butler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to monopolising players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom Butler Butler
Ireland

Note: Tom Butler Butler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marjan Spegel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marjan Spegel
Slovenia

Note: Marjan Spegel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Ratzenbeck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Ratzenbeck
Austria

Note: Oliver Ratzenbeck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandra Munteanu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandra Munteanu
Romania

Note: Alexandra Munteanu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denis Creaghan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denis Creaghan
United Kingdom

Note: Denis Creaghan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Reith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Reith
United Kingdom

Note: G Reith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josh Buhl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josh Buhl
Germany

Note: Josh Buhl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Houfe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Houfe
United Kingdom

Note: David Houfe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cheryl Cousins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cheryl Cousins
United Kingdom

Note: Cheryl Cousins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Desmond O Rafferty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Desmond O'Rafferty Ireland
Desmond O Rafferty
Ireland

Note: Desmond O Rafferty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorothy Cosh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorothy Cosh
United Kingdom

Note: Dorothy Cosh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Esteban Nada
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Esteban Nada
United States of America

Note: Esteban Nada sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hedeshiu Andrei Vladimir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hedeshiu Andrei Vladimir
Romania

Note: Hedeshiu Andrei Vladimir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Southard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Southard
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Southard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacek Rudowski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacek Rudowski
Poland

Note: Jacek Rudowski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Heriz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Heriz
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Heriz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard Choo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard Choo
United Kingdom

Note: Gerard Choo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda
United Kingdom

Note: Linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Mutimer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Christopher Mutimer]
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Mutimer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aja
Czech Republic

Note: Aja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Cronin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Cronin
Ireland

Note: Mary Cronin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Ivanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Ivanov
Bulgaria

Note: Alexander Ivanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vivien Wickham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vivien Wickham
United Kingdom

Note: Vivien Wickham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Giller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Giller
United Kingdom

Note: Sara Giller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simone Siegel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simone Siegel
Germany

Note: Simone Siegel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Healy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Healy
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Healy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Dixon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Dixon
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Dixon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Popa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Popa
Romania

Note: Daniel Popa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stavroula Tzachrista
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stavroula Tzachrista
Ireland

Note: Stavroula Tzachrista sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marián Miliczki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marián Miliczki
Slovakia

Note: Marián Miliczki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Haysom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Haysom
United Kingdom

Note: Nigel Haysom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: matt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

matt

United Kingdom

Note: matt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nathan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nathan M
United Kingdom

Note: Nathan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Baxter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Baxter
Spain

—

Note: David Baxter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denis Hebden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denis Hebden
United Kingdom

Note: Denis Hebden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aniek Boon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aniek Boon
Netherlands

Note: Aniek Boon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Domenico Nuti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Domenico Nuti
Italy

Note: Domenico Nuti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Robillard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Robillard
Netherlands

Note: George Robillard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Jones
United Kingdom

Note: John Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stewart Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stewart Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Stewart Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jose beltran espallardo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jose beltran espallardo
Spain

—

Note: jose beltran espallardo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Buck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Buck
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Buck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J. Janssen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J. Janssen
Netherlands

Note: J. Janssen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:12

Dear EU Representative,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Wilson
Spain

Note: John Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jozef Newiadomy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jozef Newiadomy
United Kingdom

Note: Jozef Newiadomy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Jensen
Denmark

Note: Thomas Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: irene.shields
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

irene shields
United Kingdom

Note: irene shields sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Juliet Newbigin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Juliet Newbigin
United Kingdom

Note: Juliet Newbigin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Donaldson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Donaldson
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Donaldson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Mutch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Mutch
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Mutch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steffen Silkjær
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steffen Silkjær
Denmark

Note: Steffen Silkjær sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- more and more people want a more inclusive, peaceful society and take action on it. Fast lanes for the (commercial) rich are harmful to a more common future.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline
Netherlands

Note: Caroline sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: joan Foster
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

joan Foster
United Kingdom

Note: joan Foster sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin olsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin olsson
Sweden

—

Note: Karin olsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Douwe Rijkstra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Douwe Rijkstra
Netherlands

Note: Douwe Rijkstra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Balazs Kovacs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Balazs Kovacs
Hungary

Note: Balazs Kovacs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne-Catriona Schaupp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

I urge you to do all you can to uphold net neutrality rules. I am sickened at the thought that corporations could ever have a stake in the internet, in terms of creating 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder and monetising one of the greatest, democratic assets of our modern world. We must preserve the internet as it is in order that every one can access it and use it to empower and express themselves. Please close any loopholes in the current system that would enable corporations to influence access to the internet in any way. As I write this message via Avaaz I am delighted to see new signatures being added very second and from all corners of the EU. Please listen to the people!

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne-Catriona Schaupp
United Kingdom

Note: Anne-Catriona Schaupp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: maria.pastoor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

maria pastoor
Netherlands

Note: maria pastoor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: boon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[nico boon
[netherlands

Note: boon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: William Moyes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

William Moyes
United Kingdom

Note: William Moyes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Mackintosh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Mackintosh
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Mackintosh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mihaela Golic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mihaela Golic
Sweden

Note: Mihaela Golic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klas Rydberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klas Rydberg
Sweden

Note: Klas Rydberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate McIntosh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate McIntosh
United Kingdom

Note: Kate McIntosh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: LDeters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L Deters
The Netherlands

Note: L Deters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathryn Eade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathryn Eade
United Kingdom

Note: Kathryn Eade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: António Moura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

António Moura
Portugal

Note: António Moura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: koos.schippers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

koos schippers
Netherlands

Note: koos schippers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Lunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Lunt
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Lunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Kunz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Kunz
Germany

Note: Patricia Kunz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aino Keinänen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aino Keinänen
Finland

Note: Aino Keinänen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erwin Vasbinder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf>.

Erwin Vasbinder Vasbinder
Netherlands

Note: Erwin Vasbinder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Barbara Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Barbara Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: Dr. Barbara Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Han Verveld
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Han Verveld
Netherlands

Note: Han Verveld sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoe Rimmer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoe Rimmer
United Kingdom

Note: Zoe Rimmer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kiran Doddigarla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kiran Doddigarla
India

—

Note: Kiran Doddigarla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Coralie Thomson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Coralie Thomson
United Kingdom

Note: Coralie Thomson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Andrews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Andrews
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Andrews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jaun fisher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Jaun fisherfisher
New. Zealand
[

—

Note: jaun fisher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Gachev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Gachev
Bulgaria

Note: Martin Gachev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan denton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan denton
United Kingdom

Note: Susan denton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geraldine Butler-Duffy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geraldine Butler-Duffy
Ireland

Note: Geraldine Butler-Duffy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trudy de Jongh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trudy de Jongh
Netherlands

Note: Trudy de Jongh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniela Forgáčová
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniela Forgáčová
Slovakia

Note: Daniela Forgáčová sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard
Netherlands

Note: Gerard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cedric Plichart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cedric Plichart
Belgium

Note: Cedric Plichart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Verhaeg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Verhaeg
Netherlands

Note: Verhaeg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil
United Kingdom

Note: Neil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Hawes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Hawes
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Hawes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jagoda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jagoda
Poland

—

Note: Jagoda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marco
Italy

—

Note: marco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Potter
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malin Vikstrom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malin Vikstrom
Netherlands

Note: Malin Vikstrom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wim Lentink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wim Lentink
Netherlands

Note: Wim Lentink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerry Wardle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerry Wardle
United Kingdom

Note: Gerry Wardle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Hales
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon Hales
United Kingdom

Note: Sharon Hales sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorine
Netherlands

Note: Dorine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Agostinha Quintas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Agostinha Quintas
Portugal

Note: Agostinha Quintas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vesselina Marinova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vesselina Marinova
Bulgaria

Note: Vesselina Marinova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tamas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Tamas
Tamas
Hungary
Hungary

Note: Tamas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mark
United Kingdom

Note: mark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: helen leaver
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

helen leaver
United Kingdom

Note: helen leaver sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Will Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Will Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Will Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Wiseberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Wiseberg
United Kingdom

Note: Max Wiseberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katerina Bubenickova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katerina Bubenickova
Czech Republic

Note: Katerina Bubenickova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bram
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bram
Belgium

—

Note: Bram sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eileen Mc kean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eileen Mc kean
Ireland

Note: Eileen Mc kean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pascal Carstensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pascal Carstensen
Germany

Note: Pascal Carstensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James lindsay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James lindsay
United Kingdom

Note: James lindsay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Halldin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Halldin
Sweden

Note: Anne Halldin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C. Achenbach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C. Achenbach
Germany

Note: C. Achenbach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eszter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eszter
Hungary

Note: Eszter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brendan Pollitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brendan Pollitt
United Kingdom

Note: Brendan Pollitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elize
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elize
Netherlands

Note: Elize sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hovannesjan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hovannesjan
Germany

—

Note: hovannesjan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nikola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nikola
Czech Republic

Note: Nikola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeppe Cramon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeppe Cramon
Denmark

Note: Jeppe Cramon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ralph Stewart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ralph Stewart
United Kingdom

Note: Ralph Stewart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Phil Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P

United Kingdom

Note: P sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henk van Aalstede
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henk van Aalstede
Netherlands

Note: Henk van Aalstede sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John V McKee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John V McKee
United Kingdom

Note: John V McKee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Newby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Newby
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Newby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Rondahl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Rondahl
Sweden

Note: Jan Rondahl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin O'Regan-Pevchikh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin O'Regan-Pevchikh
Ireland

Note: Martin O'Regan-Pevchikh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Grafton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Grafton
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Grafton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ihab
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ihab
France

—

Note: Ihab sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne James
United Kingdom

Note: Anne James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Pollack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Pollack
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Pollack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Helder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Helder
Netherlands

—

Note: Thomas Helder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grace Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grace Murphy
United Kingdom

Note: Grace Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david daniels
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david daniels
United Kingdom

Note: david daniels sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Fryer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Fryer
United Kingdom

Note: Sara Fryer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ray Stables
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ray Stables
United Kingdom

Note: Ray Stables sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tarja Nurmi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tarja Nurmi
Finland

Note: Tarja Nurmi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: René van Keulen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

René van Keulen
Netherlands

Note: René van Keulen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Keuning
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Keuning
Netherlands

Note: J Keuning sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deirdre Ni Chearra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deirdre Ni Chearra
Ireland

Note: Deirdre Ni Chearra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oriana Franco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oriana Franco
United Kingdom

Note: Oriana Franco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Leach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Leach
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Leach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex van Hoorn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex van Hoorn
Netherlands

Note: Alex van Hoorn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elisabeth Kraft
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elisabeth Kraft
Netherlands

Note: Elisabeth Kraft sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: judith.greenwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

judith greenwood
United Kingdom

Note: judith greenwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arjen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arjen Veldt
Netherlands

Note: Arjen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.F.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J.F.

Netherlands

—

Note: J.F. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorna Heaslip
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorna Heaslip
United Kingdom

Note: Lorna Heaslip sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Matia Prinoth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Jan Matia Prinoth
Italy

Note: [Dr Jan Matia Prinoth] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Caffrey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Caffrey
Ireland

Note: Margaret Caffrey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Fairgrieve
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Raymond G. Fairgrieve
Scotland

Note: Raymond G. Fairgrieve sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vesselka Christova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vesselka Christova
Bulgaria

Note: Vesselka Christova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Murrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Murrell
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Murrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jean taboulet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jean taboulet
France

Note: jean taboulet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mariana Del pretti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mariana Del pretti
Portugal

Note: Mariana Del pretti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Pearson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Pearson
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Pearson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Irving
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:20:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Irving
United Kingdom

Note: John Irving sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Schelstraete
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Schelstraete
Belgium

Note: John Schelstraete sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder coMent regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M
United Kingdom

Note: M sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debra Cave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Debra Cave]
[United Kingdom]

Note: Debra Cave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernardeta Jakubczyk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernardeta Jakubczyk
UK

Note: Bernardeta Jakubczyk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Indigo Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Indigo Lane
United Kingdom

Note: Indigo Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tosh Burns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tosh Burns
Sweden

Note: Tosh Burns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: André Ferreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

André Ferreira
Portugal

Note: André Ferreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexia Sewe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexia Sewe
Germany

Note: Alexia Sewe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: Diane Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Thompson
United Kingdom

Note: David Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennie Polyblank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennie Polyblank
United Kingdom

Note: Jennie Polyblank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Christiansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Christiansen
Denmark

Note: Louise Christiansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: vincenzo cioppettini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

vincenzo cioppettini
Italy

Note: vincenzo cioppettini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jens Halford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jens Halford
Sweden

Note: Jens Halford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob Mackenzie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob Mackenzie
United Kingdom

Note: Jacob Mackenzie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Winfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Winfield
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Winfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandrian Negrila
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandrian Negrila
United Kingdom

Note: Alexandrian Negrila sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Kearns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Kearns
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Kearns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Lawson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I do NOT Agree that the internet should be tiered into a pay zone! I demand that the internet be a level playing field for all business. media, and campaign groups and I accept NO agruement from business that it is justified or acceptable to have to pay for faster service or access to users or markets.

The Internet must remain free.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Lawson
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Lawson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gianmaria barbotto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gianmaria barbotto
Italy

—

Note: gianmaria barbotto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thilde van Norel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thilde van Norel
Germany

Note: Thilde van Norel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham & Sylvia Parkhouse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham & Sylvia Parkhouse
United Kingdom

Note: Graham & Sylvia Parkhouse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacqueline Killivk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacqueline Killivk
United Kingdom

Note: Jacqueline Killivk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Hunter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Hunter
United Kingdom

Note: John Hunter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irena
Slovenia

Note: Irena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: geeske
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

geeske
Netherlands

Note: geeske sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Pulford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Pulford
United Kingdom

Note: Kevin Pulford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maren Kallenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maren Kallenberg
Germany

Note: Maren Kallenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Micallef
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Micallef
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Micallef sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fernando Martins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fernando Martins
Portugal

Note: Fernando Martins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siobhan McCafferty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siobhan McCafferty
United Kingdom

Note: Siobhan McCafferty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kevin haeney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kevin haeney
United Kingdom

Note: kevin haeney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Westerstahl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Westerstahl
United Kingdom

Note: Maria Westerstahl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cairo Sealey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cairo Sealey
United Kingdom

Note: Cairo Sealey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C Kenward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C Kenward
United Kingdom

Note: C Kenward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen wyllie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen wyllie
United Kingdom

Note: Helen wyllie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rory Considine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rory Considine
Ireland

Note: Rory Considine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Smedley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Smedley
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Smedley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henk van Dijk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henk van Dijk
Netherlands

Note: Henk van Dijk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Tatham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Tatham
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Tatham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nic Harrington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nic Harrington
France

Note: Nic Harrington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: s.cumming
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

s.cumming
United Kingdom

Note: s.cumming sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Harrison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Sue Harrison--
Susan Harrison
United Kingdom

—

Note: Susan Harrison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Ball
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Ball
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Ball sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David
United Kingdom

Note: David sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vera Pamminger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vera Pamminger
Austria

Note: Vera Pamminger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: V́ctor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow ‘fast lanes’ for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a ‘slow lane’. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it’s Europe’s turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

V́ctor
Spain

—

Note: V́ctor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Brennan
Ireland

Note: John Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Luke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Luke
Ireland

Note: George Luke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Armishaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Armishaw
United Kingdom

Note: Frank Armishaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Bahier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Bahier
France

Note: Martin Bahier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pauliina Hulkko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pauliina Hulkko
Finland

Note: Pauliina Hulkko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luke Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luke Edwards
United Kingdom

Note: Luke Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Stevenson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Stevenson
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Stevenson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Watts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Watts
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Watts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Stonham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Stonham
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Stonham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GEERT DE BOOS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GEERT DE BOOS
Belgium

Note: GEERT DE BOOS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: LYNN IMPERATORE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

LYNN IMPERATORE
United Kingdom

Note: LYNN IMPERATORE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Lawlor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Lawlor
Ireland

Note: Tony Lawlor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gesine Mahoney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gesine Mahoney
Germany

Note: Gesine Mahoney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petra Cincalova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petra Cincalova
Slovakia

Note: Petra Cincalova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie-Louise Eriksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie-Louise Eriksson
Sweden

Note: Marie-Louise Eriksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Lindgren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Lindgren
Sweden

Note: Stefan Lindgren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zelino Rocha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zelino Rocha
Belgium

Note: Zelino Rocha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Griffiths
Austria

Note: Susan Griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gert Verschueren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gert Verschueren
Belgium

Note: Gert Verschueren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Alexander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Alexander
United Kingdom

Note: John Alexander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arthur Simmons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arthur Simmons
United Kingdom

Note: Arthur Simmons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carolyn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carolyn
United Kingdom

Note: Carolyn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Pope
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Pope
United Kingdom

Note: David Pope sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirsten Kure
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirsten Kure
Denmark

Note: Kirsten Kure sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marina.ellerington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Marina Ellerington
UK

—

Note: marina.ellerington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

The developer of the Internet generously gave it free to us all for the price of a connection - it would thus be especially unfair for private concerns to hijack it.

--

Janet Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Griffiths
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Griffiths
France

Note: Catherine Griffiths sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Evanns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Evanns
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Evanns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: John Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kalman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kalman
Hungary

Note: kalman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo
United Kingdom

Note: Jo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Newbold
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gill Newbold
United Kingdom

Note: Gill Newbold sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert
Germany

Note: Robert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bjørn Abelson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bjørn Abelson
Germany

Note: Bjørn Abelson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Simmons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Simmons
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Simmons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tiina Georg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tiina Georg
Estonia

Note: Tiina Georg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elias
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elias
Greece

—

Note: Elias sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Bainbridge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Bainbridge
United Kingdom

Note: Ruth Bainbridge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlos Sousa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlos Sousa
Portugal

Note: Carlos Sousa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Webb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Webb
United Kingdom

Note: Robin Webb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graham potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

graham potter
United Kingdom

Note: graham potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MIKE CAMERON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MIKE CAMERON
United Kingdom

Note: MIKE CAMERON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paschal MAHONEY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paschal MAHONEY
Ireland

Note: Paschal MAHONEY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: susan plowman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

susan plowman
United Kingdom

Note: susan plowman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Cosslett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Cosslett
United Kingdom

Note: Derek Cosslett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosmarijn Minnema
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosmarijn Minnema
Netherlands

Note: Rosmarijn Minnema sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erlend Badham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erlend Badham
United Kingdom

Note: Erlend Badham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roz

United States of America

Note: Roz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Doyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Doyle
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Doyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katharina Grünewald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katharina Grünewald
Germany

Note: Katharina Grünewald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stewart Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stewart Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: Stewart Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maxine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:16:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Maxine
Malta

—

Note: Maxine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: susan auger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

susan auger
United Kingdom

Note: susan auger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonius de Veth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonius de Veth
Spain

Note: Antonius de Veth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: BEA
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

BEA
United Kingdom

Note: BEA sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Featherstone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Featherstone
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Featherstone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Curtis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Curtis
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Curtis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: José María Mitjavila Buendía
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

José María Mitjavila Buendía

Spain

--

José María Mitjavila Buendía

Spain

—

Note: José María Mitjavila Buendía sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:15:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia wright
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Kightley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Kightley
United Kingdom

Note: John Kightley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingrid Minot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingrid Munro
United Kingdom

Note: Ingrid Munro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseba Sampedro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseba Sampedro
Spain

Note: Joseba Sampedro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Murray
Ireland

Note: Denise Murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Somers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Somers
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Somers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin Rantala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin Rantala
Finland

Note: Karin Rantala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Matthes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Matthes
Germany

Note: Elaine Matthes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Kerr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

We all deserve equal level of access to the internet and the data speeds available. Please close the loopholes that would allow the big internet players to have prioritised traffic streams.

Please support fair access to all internet users irrespective of of social status or affiliations.

I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

John Kerr
United Kingdom

Note: John Kerr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david tupper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david tupper
Cyprus

Note: david tupper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zrinzo Ludvic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zrinzo Ludvic
United Kingdom

Note: Zrinzo Ludvic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gitte Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gitte Hansen
Denmark

Note: Gitte Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Xerri
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Xerri
United Kingdom

Note: David Xerri sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James
United Kingdom

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Greg Lyons
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Greg Lyons
United Kingdom

Note: Greg Lyons sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zsolt Gyenge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I am very concerned about the new regulations to be introduced regarding the free use of Internet. As a researcher free and open access internet is the main tool for me to access information; as a teacher free and open access Internet is the most effective tool in transferring up-to-date knowledge to students. So please take into consideration the following:

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zsolt Gyenge
Hungary

Note: Zsolt Gyenge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Ayers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Ayers
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Ayers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: phil lansdown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

phil lansdown
United Kingdom

Note: phil lansdown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Freer Kidd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Freer Kidd
France

Note: Nigel Freer Kidd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philippe Riché
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Best regards

--

Philippe Riché
France

Note: Philippe Riché sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Kirk-Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Kirk-Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Kirk-Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: andrew heaney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

andrew heaney
United Kingdom

Note: andrew heaney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nane Kvillsaeter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nane Kvillsaeter
Sweden

Note: Nane Kvillsaeter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heather Tromans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heather Tromans
United Kingdom

Note: Heather Tromans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anne.hunt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anne hunt
Spain

Note: anne hunt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marouschka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marouschka
Netherlands

Note: Marouschka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Murphy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Murphy
UK

—

Note: Peter Murphy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tessa Spencr Pryse
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tessa Spencr Pryse
United Kingdom

Note: Tessa Spencr Pryse sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denisa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denisa
United Kingdom

Note: Denisa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phyllida Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phyllida Edwards
UK

—

Note: Phyllida Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zdenek Ptacek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zdenek Ptacek
Denmark

Note: Zdenek Ptacek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine
Austria

Note: Josephine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evelyn brodie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evelyn brodie
United Kingdom

Note: Evelyn brodie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Cone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Cone
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Cone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gordon thomson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gordon thomson
United Kingdom

Note: gordon thomson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ryan Firchau
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ryan Firchau
United Kingdom

Note: Ryan Firchau sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nad Badshah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nad Badshah
United Kingdom

Note: Nad Badshah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: m
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder coment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

m

United Kingdom

Note: m sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jordi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jordi
New Zealand

Note: Jordi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Kitchman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Kitchman
United Kingdom

Note: James Kitchman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Lewin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Alex Lewin Lewin]
UK]

—

Note: Alex Lewin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda Nicol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda Nicol
United Kingdom

Note: Amanda Nicol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heidi Väistö
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heidi Väistö
Finland

Note: Heidi Väistö sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donna Corbett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Donna Corbett
France

Note: Donna Corbett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.or

From: Taavi Heinoja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Taavi Heinoja
Estonia

Note: Taavi Heinoja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddie
United Kingdom

Note: Eddie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: June McConnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

June McConnell
United Kingdom

Note: June McConnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thea van gaalen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thea van gaalen
Netherlands

Note: Thea van gaalen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilary Wilkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilary Wilkinson
United Kingdom

Note: Hilary Wilkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sohani Gonzalez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sohani Gonzalez
United Kingdom

Note: Sohani Gonzalez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michele Harvey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michele Harvey
United Kingdom

Note: Michele Harvey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Lester
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Lester
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Lester sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Turrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Turrell
United Kingdom

Note: Andrea Turrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Cracknell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Cracknell
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Cracknell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Thompson Thompson
UK

Note: Geoff Thompson Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luis Moreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luis Moreira
Portugal

Note: Luis Moreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gordon Grant Benton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gordon Grant Benton
United Kingdom

Note: Gordon Grant Benton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronan
Ireland

Note: Ronan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janete West
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janete West
United Kingdom

Note: Janete West sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean D
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean D
Aruba

Note: Sean D sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isaura Vazquez Reid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isaura Vazquez Reid
United States of America

Note: Isaura Vazquez Reid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H Waugh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H Waugh
United Kingdom

Note: H Waugh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Haxen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Haxen
Denmark

Note: Emma Haxen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Hales
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Hales
Ireland

Note: Liz Hales sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Goedele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Goedele
Belgium

Note: Goedele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Broadhurst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Broadhurst
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Broadhurst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Uz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Uz
United Kingdom

Note: Uz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: LASKARIDIS DIMITRIS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

LASKARIDIS DIMITRIS
Greece

Note: LASKARIDIS DIMITRIS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard De Souza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard De Souza
United Kingdom

Note: Richard De Souza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Palfreyman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Palfreyman
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Palfreyman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis van Geest
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis van Geest
Netherlands

Note: Dennis van Geest sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick
United Kingdom

Note: Nick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bruce Mclean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bruce Mclean
United Kingdom

Note: Bruce Mclean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugh Gash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugh Gash
Ireland

Note: Hugh Gash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Wells
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Wells
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Wells sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brendan Lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brendan Lee
Ireland

Note: Brendan Lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anita Schneider
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anita Schneider
Sweden

Note: Anita Schneider sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joseba Bombin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joseba Bombin
Spain

Note: Joseba Bombin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.gribbin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john gribbin
United Kingdom

Note: john gribbin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Philbin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Philbin
Ireland

Note: Mark Philbin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francois Bouchet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

François Bouchet
France

Note: François Bouchet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Mawdsley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Mawdsley
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Mawdsley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynn.parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynn parker
United Kingdom

Note: Lynn parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hannah bullen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hannah bullen
United Kingdom

Note: hannah bullen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Raven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Raven
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Raven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.N.A. Meevers Scholte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J.N.A. Meevers Scholte
Netherlands

Note: J.N.A. Meevers Scholte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs Marie Harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs Marie Harris
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs Marie Harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pedro Gaivao
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pedro Gaivao
Portugal

Note: Pedro Gaivao sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary-Ann Flood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--Mary Ann Flood
Mary-Ann Flood
United Kingdom
___ England

Note: Mary-Ann Flood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Moya Henry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Moya Henry
United Kingdom

Note: Moya Henry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hermano José Corujo da Silva e Costa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hermano José Corujo da Silva e Costa
Portugal

Note: Hermano José Corujo da Silva e Costa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gary Webb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gary Webb
United Kingdom

Note: Gary Webb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Lorentzen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Lorentzen
Denmark

Note: Kate Lorentzen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Hughes
Ireland

Note: Marian Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Napier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Napier
United Kingdom

Note: Kate Napier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert van der Mast
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert van der Mast
Netherlands

Note: Robert van der Mast sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Sweeney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Sweeney
Ireland

Note: Peter Sweeney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Nagel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Nagel
Denmark

Note: John Nagel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E.Crowley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Crowley
United Kingdom

Note: E Crowley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Skedgell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Skedgell
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Skedgell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elizabeth Lockett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elizabeth Lockett
United Kingdom

Note: Elizabeth Lockett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Allan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Matthew Allan
United Kingdom

—

Note: Matthew Allan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Thomas Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Thomas Jackson
United Kingdom

Note: David Thomas Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Soledad Fojas Rojas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Soledad Fojas Rojas
Spain

Note: Maria Soledad Fojas Rojas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas Pini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas Pini
United Kingdom

Note: Nicholas Pini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cian Hamilton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cian Hamilton
Ireland

Note: Cian Hamilton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eugénia Marlene Ferreira Alves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eugénia Marlene Ferreira Alves
Portugal

Note: Eugénia Marlene Ferreira Alves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sofia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sofia
United Kingdom

Note: Sofia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth
United Kingdom
____united kingdom

Note: Ruth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Osborn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Osborn
United Kingdom

Note: Benjamin Osborn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin
Germany

Note: Benjamin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Blankenstein
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Blankenstein
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Blankenstein sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: I am only supporting this in case this is real and not a lie.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

I am only supporting this in case this is real and not a lie.
Slovenia

Note: I am only supporting this in case this is real and not a lie. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jessica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jessica
Belgium

Note: Jessica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Reddin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Reddin
Ireland

Note: Helen Reddin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gašper Lavric
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gašper Lavric
Slovenia

Note: Gašper Lavric sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Gatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Gatt
Malta

—

Note: Michael Gatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David reed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David reed
Spain

Note: David reed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Ward
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Ward
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Ward sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louisa Coursey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louisa Coursey
United Kingdom

Note: Louisa Coursey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Mikolajczak
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Mikolajczak
United Kingdom

Note: Jan Mikolajczak sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morris Henderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morris Henderson
United Kingdom

Note: Morris Henderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mardi Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mardi Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Mardi Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane and Roy Atkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane and Roy Atkins
United Kingdom

Note: Jane and Roy Atkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bijan Sheibani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bijan Sheibani
United Kingdom

Note: Bijan Sheibani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Khalil Hitti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Khalil Hitti
France

Note: Khalil Hitti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Morrice
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Morrice
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Morrice sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.klabbers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j klabbers
Netherlands

Note: j klabbers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbro-Isabel Bruhns
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Barbro-Isabel Bruhns
Portugal

Note: Barbro-Isabel Bruhns sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison
United Kingdom

Note: Alison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andre Averdung
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andre Averdung
Germany

Note: Andre Averdung sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Sheridan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Sheridan
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Sheridan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Thomas
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Malley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Malley
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Malley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Bromberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Bromberg
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Bromberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Makepeace
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Makepeace
United Kingdom

Note: Makepeace sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steffan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steffan
Denmark

Note: Steffan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher wellard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher wellard
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher wellard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim Thompson
United Kingdom

Note: Kim Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Wheeler
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miquel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miquel
Spain

Note: Miquel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruud Thoes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruud Thoes
Netherlands

Note: Ruud Thoes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rhys Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rhys Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Rhys Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wendy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wendy
United Kingdom

Note: Wendy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim A
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim A
Denmark

Note: Kim A sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stella bikaki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stella bikaki
Greece

Note: Stella bikaki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manca
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manca
Slovenia

Note: Manca sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Suvi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Suvi
Finland

—

Note: Suvi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luís Manuel Gonçalves da Conceição
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luís Manuel Gonçalves da Conceição
Portugal

Note: Luís Manuel Gonçalves da Conceição sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Becky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Becky
United Kingdom

Note: Becky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Elizabeth Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Elizabeth Young
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Elizabeth Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kostantinos Pilikidis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kostantinos Pilikidis
Greece

Note: kostantinos Pilikidis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin Mussche
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin Mussche
Belgium

Note: Karin Mussche sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Seegers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Seegers
Netherlands

Note: Jo Seegers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian O'Connell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian O'Connell
Austria

Note: Brian O'Connell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kara Colclough
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kara Colclough
United Kingdom

Note: Kara Colclough sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Naomi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Naomi
United Kingdom

Note: Naomi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: misha carder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

misha carder
United Kingdom

Note: misha carder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Vulliamy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Vulliamy
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel Vulliamy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: PILLON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

PILLON
France

Note: PILLON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pavel Siska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pavel Siska
Czech Republic

Note: Pavel Siska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nicki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

B take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nicki
France

—

Note: nicki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Minhas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Minhas
United Kingdom

Note: M Minhas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Michael Dobbing
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Michael Dobbing
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Michael Dobbing sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Monika Fiby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Monika Fiby
Austria

Note: Monika Fiby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kümmel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kümmel
Germany

Note: Kümmel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Rockall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Rockall
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Rockall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A.Addink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A.Addink
Netherlands

Note: A.Addink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Sandy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Sandy
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Sandy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Hope
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

The internet needs to be free and neutral at the point of use. Free access to it has never been more important. It has the potential to be the key to a new local to global democracy. Providing a voice for the majority of good, over the minority of bad.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Hope
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Hope sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Dunne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Sharon Dunne
United Kingdom

Note: Sharon Dunne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Alleyne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Alleyne
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Alleyne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johanna Billingsley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johanna Billingsley
United Kingdom

Note: Johanna Billingsley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian
United Kingdom

Note: Ian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marilu'
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marilu'
Italy

—

Note: Marilu' sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernard Goffe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernard Goffe
Belgium

Note: Bernard Goffe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mervyn Maciel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mervyn Maciel

United Kingdom

Note: Mervyn Maciel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Fowles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Fowles
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Fowles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugo Milhazes Cunha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugo Milhazes Cunha
Portugal

Note: Hugo Milhazes Cunha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Wakeling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Wakeling
United Kingdom

Note: Bob Wakeling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Francis house
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Francis house
United Kingdom

Note: David Francis house sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Franzen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Franzen
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Franzen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Louise Burch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Louise Burch
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Louise Burch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players such as Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anke
United Kingdom

Note: Anke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emmanuel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emmanuel
Spain

—

Note: Emmanuel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Abigail Salamin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Abigail Salamin
United Kingdom

Note: Abigail Salamin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olga
United Kingdom

Note: Olga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jessica woodrow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jessica woodrow
United Kingdom

Note: jessica woodrow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eveline Lagard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Eveline Lagard
The Netherlands

Note: Eveline Lagard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lawrence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lawrence
Germany

Note: Lawrence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Habibi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Habibi
Bulgaria

—

Note: Habibi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A.Sales
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A.Sales
United Kingdom

Note: A.Sales sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Adebisi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Adebisi
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Adebisi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Lorf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Lorf
Canada

Note: Adam Lorf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jaakko Kiljunen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jaakko Kiljunen
Finland

Note: Jaakko Kiljunen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugh McCormack
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugh McCormack
United Kingdom

Note: Hugh McCormack sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ulf almroth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ulf almroth
Sweden

Note: ulf almroth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B. Gerum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B Gerum
Germany

Note: B Gerum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Botha
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Botha
United Kingdom

Note: Adam Botha sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valentin Schönfeldt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valentin Schönfeldt
Sweden

Note: Valentin Schönfeldt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Franzen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Franzen
United Kingdom

Note: Irene Franzen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david ortega
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:10:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david ortega
Spain

Note: david ortega sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesús París
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesús París
Spain

Note: Jesús París sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Rudd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Rudd
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Rudd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zsuzsanna Kaló
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zsuzsanna Kaló
Magyarország

Note: Zsuzsanna Kaló sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorcan Whitehead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Net neutrality is absolutely essential to everything that's good and valuable about the Internet. Tim Berners-Lee could have made a huge amount of money out of the World Wide Web, but he chose to distribute it for free, and enforced no patents and took no royalties. For others to now decide that they will use their existing power and wealth to create a division between the rich and poor on the Internet for no other reason than their own gain is utterly disgusting.

Net neutrality protects ordinary citizens from rich and powerful corporations and individuals. One of the great things about the Internet is its democratic structure - anyone can place anything on it, and all are equal in doing so. It has opened up a world in which anyone can be a political commentator or independent merchant, if only they choose to do so. What's more, net neutrality offers untold other benefits through the innovation and richness of content that increased diversity, equality, and competition produce.

Allowing a two-speed Internet will rob us of all of this, especially those who are poorest, weakest, and most vulnerable. In particular, independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like Avaaz.org will be placed at a disadvantage as compared to rich, monolithic, monopolistic, homogenising organisations such as Google and Facebook.

Please, I urge you, close all the loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise some content over others and set themselves up as the gatekeepers of this invaluable common resource. Do not allow them to use preferential treatment, “zero-rating” or class-based traffic management. Tim Berners-Lee gave the Internet to all of us, don't allow these providers to take it away by treating it as if really it belongs to them.

You can act to stop them. In Brazil, the US, and India regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules in response to the overwhelming popular response from ordinary citizens to their own consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet, and to show that it shares in the democratic and egalitarian values embedded in an Internet governed by net neutrality.

For all these reasons, I urge you to please amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:
<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

We the citizens of Europe are relying on you.

In hope and warmest thanks.

Yours faithfully,

--

Lorcan Whitehead
United Kingdom

Note: Lorcan Whitehead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Matakitoa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Matakitoa
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Matakitoa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger O'Hara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger O'Hara
United Kingdom

Note: Roger O'Hara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jean-Francois PINAULT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jean-François PINAULT
France

Note: Jean-François PINAULT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANNA TASIPOULOU
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

ANNA TASIPOULOU
Greece

—

Note: ANNA TASIPOULOU sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pamela Pottinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pamela Pottinger
United Kingdom

Note: Pamela Pottinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Craig Humphreys
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Craig Humphreys
United Kingdom

Note: Craig Humphreys sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikko Toivanen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikko Toivanen
Finland

Note: Mikko Toivanen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Suleiman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Suleiman
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Suleiman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ciaran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ciaran
Ireland

Note: Ciaran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill
Italy

—

Note: Jill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nancy Hocking
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nancy Hocking
United Kingdom

Note: Nancy Hocking sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victor Pereira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victor Pereira
Portugal

Note: Victor Pereira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Lodge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Lodge
United Kingdom

Note: Irene Lodge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Shaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Shaw
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Shaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marilene
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marilene
United Kingdom

Note: Marilene sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Aguda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Aguda
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Aguda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jill stephens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jill stephens
United Kingdom

Note: jill stephens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bart Groenhuizen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bart Groenhuizen
Netherlands

Note: Bart Groenhuizen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna
Finland

—

Note: Anna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maya Dimitrova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maya Dimitrova
Bulgaria

Note: Maya Dimitrova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: michael cornish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

michael cornish
United Kingdom u.k

Note: michael cornish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura Sammut
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura Sammut
Malta

Note: Laura Sammut sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Beeton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Beeton
United Kingdom

Note: David Beeton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Camille
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Camille
United Kingdom

Note: Camille sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gitte Renno
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gitte Renno
Germany

Note: Gitte Renno sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ruth Ahrens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ruth Ahrens
United Kingdom

Note: Ruth Ahrens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam
United Kingdom

Note: Sam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane Bovell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I value the internet as an incredibly rich resource and believe it should be equally available to all, from the humblest individual to the largest corporation.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane Bovell
United Kingdom

Note: Jane Bovell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johanna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johanna N.
Sweden

—

Note: Johanna N. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mireia Pacheco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mireia Pacheco
Spain

Note: Mireia Pacheco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harry Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harry Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: Harry Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria João Cardoso
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria João Cardoso
Portugal

Note: Maria João Cardoso sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: AM Stainton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

AM Stainton
United Kingdom

Note: AM Stainton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tom
United Kingdom

Note: Tom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Silvia Brandmeier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Silvia Brandmeier
Germany

Note: Silvia Brandmeier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris billington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris billington
United Kingdom

Note: Chris billington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula Boughton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula Boughton
United Kingdom

Note: Paula Boughton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
Sweden

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura Pasquarelli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura Pasquarelli
Italy

Note: Laura Pasquarelli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morag Perrott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Morag Perrott

--

United Kingdom

Note: Morag Perrott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: margaret blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

margaret blake
United Kingdom

Note: margaret blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claire
United Kingdom

Note: Claire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eamonn noone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eamonn noone
Ireland

Note: Eamonn noone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charles Sutherland Boyce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charles Sutherland Boyce
United Kingdom

Note: Charles Sutherland Boyce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carla Holmes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carla Holmes
Australia

Note: Carla Holmes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Theo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Theo
Netherlands

Note: Theo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tania Higgins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tania Higgins
United Kingdom

Note: Tania Higgins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isobel Mackie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isobel Mackie
Belgium

Note: Isobel Mackie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per-Håkan Jansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per-Håkan Jansson
Sweden

Note: Per-Håkan Jansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marieke Dekker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Marieke Dekker
The Netherlands

Note: Marieke Dekker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Ryall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Ryall
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Ryall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorge Fernández
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorge Fernández
Spain

—

Note: Jorge Fernández sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony
United Kingdom

Note: Tony sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jodie Squire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jodie Squire
United Kingdom

Note: Jodie Squire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Warren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Warren
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Warren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I strongly urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Brennan
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: aingeru oyarzabal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

aingeru oyarzabal
Spain

—

Note: aingeru oyarzabal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugo Ryckeboer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugo Ryckeboer
Belgium

Note: Hugo Ryckeboer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hill
United Kingdom

Note: David Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vesa Heiskanen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vesa Heiskanen
Finland

Note: Vesa Heiskanen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Schollmayer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Schollmayer
Germany

Note: Caroline Schollmayer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ralf Borchert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ralf Borchert
Germany

Note: Ralf Borchert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynda Haydney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynda Haydney
United Kingdom

Note: Lynda Haydney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith
United Kingdom

Note: Keith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alastair Campbell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alastair Campbell
United Kingdom

Note: Alastair Campbell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynn
United Kingdom

Note: Lynn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rodrigo Ferraz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rodrigo Ferraz
Portugal

Note: Rodrigo Ferraz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
Sweden

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: erazem lesar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

erazem lesar
Slovenia

Note: erazem lesar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Smith
Ireland

Note: Karen Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Bracken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Bracken
Ireland

Note: Angela Bracken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia
Germany

Note: Julia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leslie Angulo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leslie Angulo
France

Note: Leslie Angulo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham Cole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham Cole
United Kingdom

Note: Graham Cole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernard Vander Beken
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernard Vander Beken
Belgium

Note: Bernard Vander Beken sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine
Malta

—

Note: Christine sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Ferreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Ferreira
Portugal

Note: Miguel Ferreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Muriel Barr
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Muriel Barr
United Kingdom

Note: Muriel Barr sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Alexander
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:01:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Alexander
United Kingdom

Note: James Alexander sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrei Lobanov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrei Lobanov
Germany

Note: Andrei Lobanov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Evert Kok
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Evert Kok
Austria

Note: Evert Kok sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy Creeke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy Creeke
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy Creeke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvo Dahmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvo Dahmen
Netherlands

Note: Yvo Dahmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bri
Europe

Note: Brian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Spence
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Spence
United Kingdom

Note: Karl Spence sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pascalis Lakiotis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pascalis Lakiotis
Greece

Note: Pascalis Lakiotis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Hutchison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Hutchison
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Hutchison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Navid Momeni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Navid Momeni
Sweden

Note: Navid Momeni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Williamson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Williamson
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Williamson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ross Heenan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ross Heenan
United Kingdom

Note: Ross Heenan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Tyrrell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Tyrrell
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Tyrrell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: efi boulala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

efi boulala
Greece

—

Note: efi boulala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martina Roters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martina Roters
Germany

Note: Martina Roters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: L. Kersten
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

L. Kersten
Netherlands

Note: L. Kersten sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: suze Bellingham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

suze Bellingham
United Kingdom

Note: suze Bellingham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: romer mynne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

romer mynne
United Kingdom

Note: romer mynne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jenny robins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jenny robins
United Kingdom

Note: jenny robins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carmen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carmen
Romania

Note: carmen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Haberka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Haberka
Ireland

Note: Anna Haberka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Toni Glazzard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Toni Glazzard
United Kingdom

Note: Toni Glazzard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jen Hibbard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jen Hibbard
Canada

Note: Jen Hibbard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: claus ascher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

claus ascher
Austria

Note: claus ascher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barbara Eager
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barbara Eager
United Kingdom

Note: Barbara Eager sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reuben Sanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reuben Sanders
United Kingdom

Note: Reuben Sanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob Gibson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob Gibson
Canada

Note: Bob Gibson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Lawlor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Lawlor
Ireland

Note: Tony Lawlor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rhiannon Beattie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rhiannon Beattie
United Kingdom

Note: Rhiannon Beattie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Georg Christmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Georg Christmann
Germany

Note: Georg Christmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raven
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raven Greenstein
UK

—

Note: Raven sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Platts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Platts
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Platts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ROBERT LAW
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ROBERT LAW
United Kingdom

Note: ROBERT LAW sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Dash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Dash
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Dash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karin Olin Torres
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karin Olin Torres
Sweden

—

Note: Karin Olin Torres sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katrin Menzel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:00:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katrin Menzel
Germany

Note: Katrin Menzel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katarzyna Plezia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katarzyna Plezia
Ireland

Note: Katarzyna Plezia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ahalya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ahalya
United Kingdom

Note: ahalya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dianne Markham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dianne Markham
United Kingdom

Note: Dianne Markham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marina Koni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marina Koni
Cyprus

Note: Marina Koni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Price
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Price
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Price sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Callum Colson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Callum Colson
United Kingdom

Note: Callum Colson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacky
United Kingdom

Note: Jacky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Feuchtwanger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Feuchtwanger
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Feuchtwanger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dante
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dante
Sweden

From: Chloe Whipple
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chloe Whipple
United Kingdom

Note: Chloe Whipple sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Begent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I agree with the points below so I've left them but the point is that a system which ought to be a way for humans to communicate, which it's obvious we need to do more, shouldn't be hijacked by people with the money to pay for lawyers who can bully the regulator into agreeing with them.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Begent
United Kingdom

Note: James Begent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosie Baran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosie Baran
United Kingdom

Note: Rosie Baran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Mattsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Mattsson
Finland

Note: Peter Mattsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pirje Pappel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pirje Pappel
Estonia

Note: Pirje Pappel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Ainley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Ainley
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Ainley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eric Worrall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eric Worrall
United Kingdom

Note: Eric Worrall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Sanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yvonne Sanders
United Kingdom

Note: Yvonne Sanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Milena Ristic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Milena Ristic
Serbia

Note: Milena Ristic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luis Filipe Pereira Fernandes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luis Filipe Pereira Fernandes
Portugal

Note: Luis Filipe Pereira Fernandes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anton Gerzenberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anton Gerzenberg
Austria

Note: Anton Gerzenberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leon Swardt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leon Swardt
United Kingdom

Note: Leon Swardt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elle
Luxembourg

Note: Elle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GEMA MICO ECORO
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GEMA MICO ECORO
United Kingdom

Note: GEMA MICO ECORO sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anders Edenroth
Sweden

Note: Anders Edenroth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Comb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Comb
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Comb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Guillaume Boury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Guillaume Boury
France

Note: Guillaume Boury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pierre-Francois BAISNEE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pierre-Francois BAISNEE
France

Note: Pierre-Francois BAISNEE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kaupo Kuusk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kaupo Kuusk
Estonia

Note: Kaupo Kuusk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miriam van den Berg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miriam van den Berg
United Kingdom

Note: Miriam van den Berg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Cooper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Cooper
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Cooper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rupert Paier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rupert Paier
Austria

Note: Rupert Paier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Norbert Hinterberger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Norbert Hinterberger
Germany

Note: Norbert Hinterberger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marzec Anna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marzec Anna
Poland

Note: Marzec Anna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikko
Finland

Note: Mikko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B.katz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B katz
United Kingdom

Note: B katz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeremy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeremy
United Kingdom

Note: Jeremy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reinhilde Vandorpe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reinhilde Vandorpe
Belgium

Note: Reinhilde Vandorpe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Lindqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Lindqvist
Sweden

Note: Johan Lindqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Apostolos Sotiriadis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Apostolos Sotiriadis
Ελλάδα

—

Note: Apostolos Sotiriadis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Featherstone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Featherstone
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Featherstone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alin Badilita
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alin Badilita
Romania

Note: Alin Badilita sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mathilde
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mathilde
Denmark

Note: Mathilde sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: LARS NOHRSTEDT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

LARS NOHRSTEDT
Sweden

Note: LARS NOHRSTEDT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Char Bailey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Char Bailey
United Kingdom

Note: Char Bailey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian O'Leary
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian O'Leary
Ireland

Note: Marian O'Leary sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ANDREEA MOGOS
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ANDREEA MOGOS
Romania

Note: ANDREEA MOGOS sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Fan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

A free and open Internet is the hallmark of a modern, well connected society. It fosters innovation and allows independent companies and individuals to market their talents and services on an equal footing with large multi-nationals and corporations. Please do not give in to corporate lobbying and keep the Internet open for all.

--

Martin Fan
United Kingdom

—

Note: Martin Fan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ash
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ash
United Kingdom

Note: Ash sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sam
Netherlands

—

Note: Sam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annette Anderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annette Anderson
United Kingdom

Note: Annette Anderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: frank
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

frank
United Kingdom

Note: frank sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Watkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Watkins
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Watkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Crys Sinclair
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Crys Sinclair
United Kingdom

Note: Crys Sinclair sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah bowman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah bowman
United Kingdom

Note: sarah bowman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Cook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Cook
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Cook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lee Taul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lee Taul
Estonia

Note: Lee Taul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kevin craddock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kevin craddock
United Kingdom

Note: kevin craddock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Boyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

I voted to stay in the EU because I love it dearly but this sort of support for the big guys above the rest of us is one reason why so many people right across Europe feel a bit upset. Please don't let the 'big boys' ride rough shod over the citizens.

Many thanks

--

Richard Boyle
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Boyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marie Mc Hugh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marie Mc Hugh
United Kingdom

Note: marie Mc Hugh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johanna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johanna
Sweden

Note: Johanna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: june galligan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

june galligan
Ireland

Note: june galligan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annick Merlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annick Merlin
United Kingdom

Note: Annick Merlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jane burton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jane burton
United Kingdom

Note: jane burton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Cleave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Cleave
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Cleave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt Walker
United Kingdom

Note: Matt Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Otto-Ville Virkkunen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Otto-Ville Virkkunen
Finland

Note: Otto-Ville Virkkunen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Allison Steedman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Allison Steedman
United Kingdom

Note: Allison Steedman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jan.kriechel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jan kriechel
Germany

Note: jan kriechel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Trainor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Trainor
Spain

Note: Jim Trainor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: N molloy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

N molloy
Ireland

Note: N molloy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Danielle OShaughnessy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Danielle OShaughnessy
United Kingdom

Note: Danielle OShaughnessy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Schaechter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Schaechter
Austria

Note: Robert Schaechter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steve Millson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steve Millson
United Kingdom

Note: Steve Millson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eileen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eileen
United Kingdom

Note: Eileen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nadja Faltas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nadja Faltas
Germany

Note: Nadja Faltas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K Berry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K Berry
United Kingdom

Note: K Berry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Walter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Anne Walter]
[Germany]

—

Note: Anne Walter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jess Mortimer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration. EU regulators must close all loopholes that threaten to ruin the promise of a democratic, free Internet.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jess Mortimer
United Kingdom

Note: Jess Mortimer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lukas Thomsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lukas Thomsson
Sweden

—

Note: Lukas Thomsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bengt Carlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bengt Carlsson
Sweden

Note: Bengt Carlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Roxberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Roxberg
Sweden

Note: Johan Roxberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Schepelern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Schepelern
Denmark

Note: Anne Schepelern sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ugo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ugo
Portugal

Note: Ugo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Ryan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Ryan
Ireland

Note: Christine Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna
United Kingdom

Note: Anna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Taylor
Sweden

Note: Rebecca Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Germany

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine o'brien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine o'brien
Ireland

Note: Catherine o'brien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine McKay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine McKay
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine McKay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George Pisok
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George Pisok
Austria

Note: George Pisok sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: robin knowles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

robin knowles
United Kingdom

Note: robin knowles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary whitehead
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary whitehead
United Kingdom

Note: Mary whitehead sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bjarne Gumpel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bjarne Gumpel
Denmark

Note: Bjarne Gumpel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan L
Sweden

Note: Dan L sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fikentscher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fikentscher
Germany

—

Note: Fikentscher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Goldschmidt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Goldschmidt
Germany

Note: Thomas Goldschmidt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Floyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Floyd
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Floyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bzk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bzk
Slovenia

—

Note: bzk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: dale hewitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

dale hewitt
United Kingdom

Note: dale hewitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gillian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gillian
France

—

Note: Gillian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Peagam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Peagam
United Kingdom

Note: David Peagam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alejandro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alejandro
Spain

—

Note: Alejandro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Harding
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Harding
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Harding sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: orla.nugent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

orla.nugent
United Kingdom

Note: orla.nugent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zoltan Greguss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zoltan Greguss
United Kingdom

Note: Zoltan Greguss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G Watson
United Kingdom

Note: G Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J Bowen C.Eng.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Bowen C.Eng.
United Kingdom

Note: J Bowen C.Eng. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raul Gonzalez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raul Gonzalez
Ireland

Note: Raul Gonzalez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David frölund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David frölund
Sweden

Note: David frölund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cp
United Kingdom

Note: Cp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniele
Italy

—

Note: Daniele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ms Freda Ferguson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ms Freda Ferguson
United Kingdom

Note: Ms Freda Ferguson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: May McCann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

May McCann
United Kingdom

Note: May McCann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grigorij
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grigorij
Lithuania

Note: Grigorij sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harriet Bradnock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harriet Bradnock
United Kingdom

Note: Harriet Bradnock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Sykes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Sykes
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Sykes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gez Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gez Taylor
United Kingdom

Note: Gez Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stéphane Polny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stéphane Polny
France

Note: Stéphane Polny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan
Slovenia

Note: Jan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jorge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jorge
Spain

—

Note: Jorge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: loretta kenny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

loretta kenny
Ireland

Note: loretta kenny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Brian Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
Spain

—

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H Long
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H Long
Ireland

Note: H Long sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Rytterberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Rytterberg
Sweden

Note: Louise Rytterberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sara Boraie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sara Boraie
United Kingdom

Note: Sara Boraie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laoise
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laoise
Ireland

—

Note: Laoise sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clement
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clement
France

—

Note: Clement sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Browne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Browne
Ireland

Note: Karl Browne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Dobi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Dobi
Hungary

Note: Peter Dobi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Kavanagh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Kavanagh
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Kavanagh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ciaran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ciaran
Ireland

Note: Ciaran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Rodgerson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Rodgerson
United Kingdom

Note: Diane Rodgerson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pol
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pol
Spain

—

Note: Pol sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Swift
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Swift
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Swift sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Žiga
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--
Žiga
Slovenia

Note: Žiga sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary murray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary murray
United Kingdom

Note: Mary murray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fredrik Ed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fredrik Ed
Sweden

—

Note: Fredrik Ed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Κωνσταντίνος ΣΙΦΝΑΚΗΣ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Κωνσταντίνος ΣΙΦΝΑΚΗΣ
Greece

Note: Κωνσταντίνος ΣΙΦΝΑΚΗΣ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jamaal Hattan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jamaal Hattan
United Kingdom

Note: Jamaal Hattan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan
United Kingdom

Note: Alan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddy Van Brempt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddy Van Brempt
Belgium

Note: Eddy Van Brempt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kiss Viktor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kiss Viktor
Hungary

Note: Kiss Viktor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lozsi Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lozsi Peter
Slovakia

Note: Lozsi Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john frye
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john frye
United Kingdom

Note: john frye sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yordanka Stoyanova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Yordanka Stoyanova
Bulgaria

Note: Yordanka Stoyanova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S.

Germany

Note: S. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K.W.E. Kleist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K.W.E. Kleist
Ireland

Note: K.W.E. Kleist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew M Senior
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew M Senior
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew M Senior sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derrick Joad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derrick Joad
United Kingdom

Note: Derrick Joad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: steven walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

steven walker
United Kingdom

Note: steven walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis Nyström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis Nyström
Sweden

Note: Dennis Nyström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Avery
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Avery
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Avery sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josh
United States of America

Note: Josh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christina Ann Lee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christina Ann Lee
United Kingdom

Note: Christina Ann Lee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jure
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jure
Slovenia

Note: Jure sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Holton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Holton
United Kingdom

Note: R Holton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Ramsey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Ramsey
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Ramsey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Markus Kilian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Markus Kilian
Germany

Note: Markus Kilian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viji Hobbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viji Hobbs
United Kingdom

Note: Viji Hobbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicolas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicolas
France

—

Note: Nicolas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maggie Dench
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maggie Dench
France

Note: Maggie Dench sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben wrigley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben wrigley
United Kingdom

Note: Ben wrigley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Olbert
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Olbert
Germany

Note: Jan Olbert sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Audrey Litterick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Audrey Litterick
United Kingdom

Note: Audrey Litterick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheona Hamilton-Grant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheona Hamilton-Grant
Germany

Note: Sheona Hamilton-Grant sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Beal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Beal
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Beal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Boris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Boris
Germany

Note: Boris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ENault J F
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ENault J F
France

Note: ENault J F sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kealan Morrissey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kealan Morrissey
Ireland

Note: Kealan Morrissey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: zoe campbell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

zoe campbell
United Kingdom

Note: zoe campbell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
Austria

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kazimieras Radivilovicius
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kazimieras Radivilovicius
Netherlands

Note: Kazimieras Radivilovicius sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Scharnberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Scharnberg
Sweden

Note: Max Scharnberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary Saunders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[sender_Rosemary Saunders]
[sender_United Kingdom]

—

Note: Rosemary Saunders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carlo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carlo
Luxembourg

—

Note: carlo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john
Ireland

—

Note: john sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie Freeman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:51:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie Freeman
United Kingdom

Note: Julie Freeman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Øhrberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Øhrberg
Denmark

Note: Michael Øhrberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Celia Cliff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Celia Cliff
Australia

Note: Celia Cliff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Hambrook
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Hambrook
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Hambrook sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Miles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Miles
United Kingdom

Note: John Miles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oskar Heiße
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oskar Heiße
Germany

Note: Oskar Heiße sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phlyssa Koshland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

As resident of Australia and the United States and a frequent visitor to France, please join with those countries in keeping the Net neutral and democratic. Do not allow special treatment for those companies and users who have more money or clout.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phlyssa Koshland
United States of America

Note: Phlyssa Koshland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robin Jeffner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robin Jeffner
Sweden

Note: Robin Jeffner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: shane_murniun
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

shane murnion
Sweden

Note: shane murnion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Portman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Portman
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Portman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabrielle Ago
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabrielle Ago
France

Note: Gabrielle Ago sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zdravko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zdravko
Bulgaria

Note: Zdravko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Teepen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Teepen
Sweden

Note: Paul Teepen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reemt Ulrich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reemt Ulrich
Germany

Note: Reemt Ulrich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miranda Bakos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miranda Bakos
Sweden

Note: Miranda Bakos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Macdonald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Macdonald
United Kingdom

Note: Maria Macdonald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sheila Chambers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sheila Chambers
United Kingdom

Note: Sheila Chambers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giovanna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giovanna
Italy

—

Note: Giovanna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Maynard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Maynard
United Kingdom

Note: John Maynard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry Norman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barry Norman
United Kingdom

Note: Barry Norman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sunny
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sunny
United Kingdom

Note: sunny sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alja Bulic
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alja Bulic
Slovenia

Note: Alja Bulic sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Fish
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Fish
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Fish sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hester van Toorenborg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hester van Toorenborg
Netherlands

Note: Hester van Toorenborg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: José Basto
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

José Basto
Portugal

Note: José Basto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: KAREN DUFFY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

KAREN DUFFY
United Kingdom

Note: KAREN DUFFY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jeremy kiely
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jeremy kiely
United Kingdom

Note: jeremy kiely sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frederick Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frederick Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Frederick Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arie den Toom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arie den Toom
Netherlands

Note: Arie den Toom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tehseen Noorani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tehseen Noorani
Bahamas

—

Note: Tehseen Noorani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Woodling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Woodling
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Woodling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luka
Slovenia

Note: Luka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tessa Newman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tessa Newman
United Kingdom

Note: Tessa Newman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Will cooke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Will cooke
United Kingdom

Note: Will cooke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlo
United Kingdom

Note: Carlo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sue
United Kingdom

Note: Sue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jjha_sanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalyder_name [sender the netherlands.

—

Note: jha sanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Axel Broman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Axel Broman
Sweden

Note: Axel Broman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christian Sültrop
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christian Sültrop
Germany

Note: Christian Sültrop sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liesbet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liesbet
Belgium

Note: Liesbet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H. Gasgarth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H. Gasgarth
United Kingdom

Note: H. Gasgarth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Sanchez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Sanchez
United Kingdom

Note: Liz Sanchez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynette Hodson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynette Hodson
United Kingdom

Note: Lynette Hodson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annette Annette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annette Annette
Ireland

Note: Annette Annette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heidi Hartmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heidi Hartmann
Germany

Note: Heidi Hartmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Hope
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R Hope
United Kingdom

Note: R Hope sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Clinch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Christine Clinch
United Kingdom

Note: Christine Clinch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Parker
United Kingdom

Note: John Parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joana Oliveira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joana Oliveira
Portugal

Note: Joana Oliveira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Lockwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Lockwood
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Lockwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Swetal Dronsfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Swetal Dronsfield
United Kingdom

Note: Swetal Dronsfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Yvonne Schade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Yvonne Schade, Germany
Yvonne Schade
Germany

Note: Yvonne Schade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tuula Harju
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tuula Harju
Finland

Note: Tuula Harju sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Gooch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Gooch
United Kingdom

Note: Rebecca Gooch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Discobe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Discobe
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Discobe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alfred Layton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alfred Layton
United Kingdom

Note: Alfred Layton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: howard.shimmin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

howard shimmin
United Kingdom

Note: howard shimmin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tiina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:50:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tiina
Finland

—

Note: Tiina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Durrah Mahmood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Durrah Mahmood
United Kingdom

Note: Durrah Mahmood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jessie Rogers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jessie Rogers
United Kingdom

Note: jessie Rogers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerard Tattersfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerard Tattersfield
United Kingdom

Note: Gerard Tattersfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niamh M
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niamh M
Ireland

Note: Niamh M sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nikos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nikos
United Kingdom

Note: Nikos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Charleston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Charleston
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Charleston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrea Lungen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrea Lungen
Germany

Note: Andrea Lungen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: michael cosgrave
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

michael cosgrave
United Kingdom

Note: michael cosgrave sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mateusz Wronski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mateusz Wronski
Ireland

Note: Mateusz Wronski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gintautas Lietuvnikas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gintautas Lietuvnikas
Lithuania

Note: Gintautas Lietuvnikas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jože
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jože
Slovenia

Note: Jože sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gudrun Strömstedt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gudrun Strömstedt
Sweden

Note: Gudrun Strömstedt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lisa davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lisa davies
United Kingdom

Note: lisa davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hadar Holm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hadar Holm
Sweden

Note: Hadar Holm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Enrico Torre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Enrico Torre
United Kingdom

Note: Enrico Torre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Kaša
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Kaša
Czech Republic

Note: Martin Kaša sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stuart
United Kingdom

Note: Stuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Rendle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Rendle
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Rendle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Black
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Black
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Black sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephan Rinke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephan Rinke
Germany

Note: Stephan Rinke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Potter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Potter
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Potter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Boyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Boyle
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Boyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ruzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ruzi
Austria

Note: ruzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: António Bastos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

António Bastos
Portugal

Note: António Bastos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Trudi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Trudi
United Kingdom

Note: Trudi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalie Butler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalie Butler
Ireland

Note: Natalie Butler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Dyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Dyer
United Kingdom

Note: James Dyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesper Jansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesper Jansson
Sweden

Note: Jesper Jansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacqueline Hancher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacqueline Hancher
United Kingdom

Note: Jacqueline Hancher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Cunningham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Cunningham
Ireland

Note: Michael Cunningham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Michael Swarbrick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Michael Swarbrick
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Michael Swarbrick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacquie Grimmond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacquie Grimmond
United Kingdom

Note: Jacquie Grimmond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lizzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lizzi
Denmark

Note: Lizzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen Tebbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen Tebbs
United Kingdom

Note: Maureen Tebbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vlado Odar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vlado Odar
Slovenia

Note: Vlado Odar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Goodrum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Goodrum
U.K.

—

Note: Oliver Goodrum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jm georges
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jm georges
France

Note: jm georges sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Briscall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Personal addition. The internet works because it is free in exactly the ways that this plan, one of many attempts by big business, intends to erode. The internet is FAR more important than the interests of corporations and all would lose in the long term.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Briscall
United Kingdom

Note: Adrian Briscall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Tasker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Tasker
United Kingdom

Note: Josephine Tasker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathleen Walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathleen Walsh
United Kingdom

Note: Kathleen Walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Downing Warren
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Downing Warren
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Downing Warren sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john
United Kingdom

Note: john sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diana Boskma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diana Boskma
Netherlands

Note: Diana Boskma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nieuwland
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nieuwland
Netherlands

Note: Nieuwland sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Hornsby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Hornsby
United Kingdom

Note: David Hornsby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Mott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Mott
United Kingdom

Note: Geoff Mott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martina
Italy

Note: Martina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Wischhusen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Wischhusen
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Wischhusen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
Sweden

—

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

David Hollywood
Ireland

David Hollywood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Spooner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Spooner
United Kingdom

Note: David Spooner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antony Durose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antony Durose
United Kingdom

Note: Antony Durose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Shirley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Shirley
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Shirley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R.H Craig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R H Craig
United Kingdom

Note: R H Craig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A. Sen Gupta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A. Sen Gupta
United Kingdom

Note: A. Sen Gupta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Annika Carlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Annika Carlsson
Sweden

Note: Annika Carlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulrike Gamper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ulrike Gamper
Italy

—

Note: Ulrike Gamper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mikewalsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mikewalsh
United Kingdom

Note: mikewalsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Preben Ellebye
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Preben Ellebye
Denmark

Note: Preben Ellebye sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johanna Thimerdal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johanna Thimerdal
Sweden

Note: Johanna Thimerdal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Zalinska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Zalinska
Germany

Note: Maria Zalinska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

alex
United Kingdom

Note: alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Will Mephram
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Will Mephram
United Kingdom

Note: Will Mephram sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva E. Balkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva E. Balkin
Portugal

Note: Eva E. Balkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Parker
United Kingdom

Note: Nigel Parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian
Germany

Note: Julian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: PAUL ELLISTON
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

PAUL ELLISTON
United Kingdom

Note: PAUL ELLISTON sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: myrna_hilbert@yahoo.de
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

myrna_hilbert@yahoo.de Mexico

—

Note: myrna_hilbert@yahoo.de sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mr J M Warman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mr J M Warman
United Kingdom

Note: Mr J M Warman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Tall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Tall
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Tall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jens
Germany

—

Note: Jens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs L. Steuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs L. Steuart
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs L. Steuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Coote
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Coote
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Coote sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jagdip Singh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jagdip Singh
United Kingdom

Note: Jagdip Singh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet inglis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet inglis
Spain

Note: Janet inglis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Chappell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Chappell
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Chappell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kristjan Kalmus
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristjan Kalmus
Estonia

Note: Kristjan Kalmus sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Malone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Malone
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Malone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Beth Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Beth Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Beth Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Charlotte BRadford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Charlotte BRadford
United Kingdom

Note: Charlotte BRadford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Malcolm Yates
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Malcolm Yates
United Kingdom

Note: Malcolm Yates sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margriet Reinalda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margriet Reinalda
Netherlands

Note: Margriet Reinalda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: grandis.piero
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

grandis.piero
Italy

Note: grandis.piero sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Walton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Walton
United Kingdom

Note: Neil Walton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: EABevis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

EABevis
United Kingdom

Note: EABevis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pedro Moura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pedro Moura
Portugal

Note: Pedro Moura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Desodt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Desodt
United Kingdom

Note: Thomas Desodt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ron korpel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Yours sincerely,

Ron Korpel
The Netherlands

Note: Ron Korpel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Nelson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Nelson
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Nelson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tero Vaaja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tero Vaaja
Spain

Note: Tero Vaaja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Giblett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Giblett
Spain

Note: Denise Giblett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B. Mangin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B. Mangin
France

Note: B. Mangin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steffi Schramm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steffi Schramm
Germany

Note: Steffi Schramm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jay Fife
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jay Fife
United Kingdom

Note: Jay Fife sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Stentiford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Stentiford
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Stentiford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Ellis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Ellis
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Ellis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cameron Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cameron Smith
Ethiopia

Note: Cameron Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike eliot
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike eliot
United Kingdom

Note: Mike eliot sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tytiah Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tytiah Blake
United Kingdom

Note: Tytiah Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Désirée Hartman Bergqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Désirée Hartman Bergqvist
Sweden

Note: Désirée Hartman Bergqvist sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kasia Uscinska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kasia Uscinska
United Kingdom

Note: Kasia Uscinska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eleonora Encheva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eleonora Encheva
Bulgaria

Note: Eleonora Encheva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Jacob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Jacob
United Kingdom

Note: John Jacob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: susanne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

susanne
United Kingdom

Note: susanne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Goodyear
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Goodyear
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Goodyear sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe McGeady
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe McGeady
UK

—

Note: Joe McGeady sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Salvatore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Salvatore
Italy

Note: Salvatore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: elizabeth marsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

elizabeth marsh
United Kingdom

Note: elizabeth marsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Dodsworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Dodsworth
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Dodsworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Novák Béla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Novák Béla
Hungary

Note: Novák Béla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hamza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hamza
United Kingdom

Note: Hamza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kris boon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kris boon
Belgium

Note: kris boon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: linda hardy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

linda hardy
United Kingdom

Note: linda hardy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Arrowsuch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Arrowsuch
United Kingdom

Note: John Arrowsuch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: luraya lukas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

luraya lukas
Sweden

Note: luraya lukas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nate
Netherlands

Note: Nate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Sloan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Sloan
United Kingdom

Note: Rachel Sloan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: valentina.reina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

valentina.reina
Italy

Note: valentina.reina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Tibbles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Tibbles
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Tibbles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mario Xuereb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mario Xuereb
Malta

Note: Mario Xuereb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael
Netherlands

Note: Michael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel
Sweden

Note: Daniel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jason deane.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jason deane.
Ireland

Note: Jason deane. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Adair
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Adair
United Kingdom

Note: Marie Adair sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shelia Clegg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shelia Clegg
United Kingdom

Note: Shelia Clegg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emily jennings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emily jennings
United Kingdom

Note: Emily jennings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerja Lubbers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerja Lubbers
Netherlands

Note: Gerja Lubbers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sophie Schink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sophie Schink
Germany

Note: Sophie Schink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brenda Tucker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brenda Tucker
United Kingdom

Note: Brenda Tucker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tim
United Kingdom

Note: Tim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sergejs Broslavskis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sergejs Broslavskis
Latvia

Note: Sergejs Broslavskis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adriana Campillo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adriana Campillo
Spain

Note: Adriana Campillo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E. Shepherd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E Shepherd
United Kingdom

Note: E Shepherd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo McAllister
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo McAllister
United Kingdom

Note: Jo McAllister sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: A.M.T. Meevers Scholte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

A.M.T. Meevers Scholte
Netherlands

Note: A.M.T. Meevers Scholte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael John Rogers, B.Sc., B.A. \(hons. with Philosophy\)
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael John Rogers, B.Sc., B.A. (hons. with Philosophy)
United Kingdom

Note: Michael John Rogers, B.Sc., B.A. (hons. with Philosophy) sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Larmax
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Larmax
Belgium

Note: Larmax sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jon Poole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jon Poole
United Kingdom

Note: Jon Poole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Phillips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Phillips
United Kingdom

Note: Joe Phillips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miranda Achiotou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miranda Achiotou
Cyprus

Note: Miranda Achiotou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonia Mosetti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonia Mosetti
Italy

Note: Sonia Mosetti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Diane Farabolini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Diane Farabolini
Sweden

Note: Diane Farabolini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: chris hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

chris hughes
United Kingdom

Note: chris hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luana Jade
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luana Jade
Romania

Note: Luana Jade sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Cervantes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Cervantes
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Cervantes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patrick Stowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patrick Stowe
United Kingdom

Note: Patrick Stowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dieter Doum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dieter Doum
Poland

Note: Dieter Doum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Turnbull
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Turnbull
United Kingdom

Note: James Turnbull sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nigel Ashton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nigel Ashton
United Kingdom

Note: Nigel Ashton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Denise Robinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Denise Robinson
United Kingdom

Note: Denise Robinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: steen higham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

steen higham
Denmark

Note: steen higham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gagarin Miljkovich
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:41:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gagarin Miljkovich
Sweden, Stockholm

Note: Gagarin Miljkovich sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carlos Lopez-Barillas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carlos Lopez-Barillas Lopez-Barillas

United Kingdom

Note: Carlos Lopez-Barillas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R.Rogahn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

R.Rogahn
Germany

Note: R.Rogahn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jacquie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jacquie
United Kingdom

Note: jacquie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Barnes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Barnes
United Kingdom

Note: Fiona Barnes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat K
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat K
United Kingdom

Note: Pat K sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jocelyne Billy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jocelyne Billy
United Kingdom

Note: Jocelyne Billy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angie
United Kingdom

Note: Angie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jessica mackey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jessica mackey
United Kingdom

Note: jessica mackey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Reva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Reva
United Kingdom

Note: Reva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Felicity Cohen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Felicity Cohen
United Kingdom

Note: Felicity Cohen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leif Eriksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leif Eriksson
Sweden

Note: Leif Eriksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Armitage
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Armitage
United Kingdom

Note: Jim Armitage sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Kurra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The United Kingdom has just voted for Brexit because we want to take back control of our lives. Freedom is so important to all of us, and like it or not our lives increasingly revolve around new media.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Kurra
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Kurra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elena
Spain

—

Note: Elena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rebecca Germani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rebecca Germani
Germany

Note: Rebecca Germani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mark Minard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mark Minard
United Kingdom

Note: Mark Minard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Stewart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Stewart
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Stewart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lenters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lenters
Belgium

—

Note: lenters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Ansell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Ansell
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Ansell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Cone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Cone
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Cone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fernando Moreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fernando Moreira
United Kingdom

Note: Fernando Moreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lisa Sanderson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lisa Sanderson
United Kingdom

Note: Lisa Sanderson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Esther mcNeile Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Esther mcNeile Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Esther mcNeile Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john.machen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john machen
United Kingdom

Note: john machen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura
Sweden

—

Note: Laura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rupert Warne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rupert Warne
United Kingdom

Note: Rupert Warne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacob
Andorra

Note: Jacob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Orm Anders Åström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Orm Anders Åström
Sweden

Note: Orm Anders Åström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria
United Kingdom

Note: Maria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adam Urbanowicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adam Urbanowicz
Poland

Note: Adam Urbanowicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sky
United Kingdom

Note: Sky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michele Marziale
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michele Marziale
Italy

—

Note: Michele Marziale sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Welsby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Welsby
United Kingdom

Note: James Welsby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bachfischer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bachfischer
Germany

Note: Bachfischer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Roberts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Roberts
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Roberts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hugh Jordan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hugh Jordan
United Kingdom

Note: Hugh Jordan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernadette Jennings
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernadette Jennings
Ireland

Note: Bernadette Jennings sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luca De Matteis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luca De Matteis
United Kingdom

Note: Luca De Matteis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tommi Sinivaara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tommi Sinivaara
Finland

Note: Tommi Sinivaara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikael Gulliksson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikael Gulliksson
Sweden

Note: Mikael Gulliksson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Patterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Patterson
United Kingdom

Note: John Patterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy Goodwin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy Goodwin
Spain

Note: Kathy Goodwin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erna Holden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erna Holden
United Kingdom

Note: Erna Holden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P J Bacon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P J Bacon
United Kingdom

Note: P J Bacon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Duras
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Duras
France

Note: C. Duras sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian McGrady
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian McGrady
Northern Ireland.

Note: Brian McGrady sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicolai
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicolai
Denmark

Note: Nicolai sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rakinul Islam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rakinul Islam
United Kingdom

Note: Rakinul Islam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Ralph
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Ralph
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Ralph sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.robson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j.robson
United Kingdom

Note: j.robson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ailsa Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ailsa Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Ailsa Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Holmberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Holmberg
Sweden

Note: Jan Holmberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret King
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret King
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret King sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ceri
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ceri
United Kingdom

Note: Ceri sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Peckham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

It is vitally important that you read what we have to say as we live in a free world and if the Telecom giants have their way that will all be irrevocably ruined.

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Peckham
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Peckham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt
Ireland

Note: Matt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rosa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rosa
Spain

—

Note: rosa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irène de Lima Lages
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Irène de Lima Lages]
[Sweden]

—

Note: Irène de Lima Lages sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dee Hardy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:40:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dee Hardy
United Kingdom

Note: Dee Hardy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thera Criens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thera Criens
Netherlands

Note: Thera Criens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Schirle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Schirle
Germany

Note: Thomas Schirle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shaked
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

This is unbelievable!

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shaked
Denmark

Note: Shaked sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosey Sanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosey Sanders
United Kingdom

Note: Rosey Sanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: OLGA Golovanova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

OLGA Golovanova
Switzerland

Note: OLGA Golovanova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henry
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henry
United Kingdom

Note: Henry sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valerie Gregoire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valerie Gregoire
Belgium

Note: Valerie Gregoire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marcus Johansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marcus Johansson
Sweden

Note: Marcus Johansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: bafowke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

bafowke
United Kingdom

Note: bafowke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Vestergaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:41

Dearest Sir/Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Vestergaard
Denmark

Note: Peter Vestergaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maximilian Weltin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maximilian Weltin
Austria

Note: Maximilian Weltin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda Persdotter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amanda Persdotter
Sweden

Note: Amanda Persdotter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MJ Black
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MJ Black
United Kingdom

Note: MJ Black sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: João Lopes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

João Lopes
Portugal

Note: João Lopes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ciaran Patterson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ciaran Patterson
Ireland

Note: Ciaran Patterson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clive Aruede
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clive Aruede
United Kingdom

Note: Clive Aruede sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Black
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Black
United Kingdom

Note: Rob Black sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill
United Kingdom

Note: Bill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nina Lönn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nina Lönn
Sweden

Note: Nina Lönn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carole Fenwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carole Fenwick
United Kingdom

Note: Carole Fenwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Teresa Serrenho
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Teresa Serrenho
Portugal

Note: Maria Teresa Serrenho sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janice Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janice Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Janice Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John sewell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John sewell
United Kingdom

Note: John sewell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Lowe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Lowe
United Kingdom

Note: David Lowe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Prashanta Cameron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Prashanta Cameron
United Kingdom

Note: Prashanta Cameron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynne Williams
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynne Williams
United Kingdom

Note: Lynne Williams sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: roger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

roger
United Kingdom

Note: roger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michalet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michalet
France

Note: Michalet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Witt
UK]

Note: Kate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Hägglund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Hägglund
Sweden

Note: Daniel Hägglund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Stefan Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicholas Wall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicholas Wall
United Kingdom

Note: Nicholas Wall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zsolt Gal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zsolt Gal
Hungary

Note: Zsolt Gal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Camillo Boschetti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Camillo Boschetti
United Kingdom

Note: Camillo Boschetti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Derek Ashworth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Derek Ashworth
New Zealand

Note: Derek Ashworth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter
United Kingdom

Note: Peter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennie Geddes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennie Geddes
United Kingdom

Note: Jennie Geddes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Barrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Barrett
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Barrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marko Turk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marko Turk
Slovenia

Note: Marko Turk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Boris Šelih
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Boris Šelih
Slovenia

Note: Boris Šelih sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fatima
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fatima
Spain

—

Note: Fatima sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jayne De Sesa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jayne De Sesa
France

Note: Jayne De Sesa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Reynolds
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Reynolds
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Reynolds sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nikiforos Psalidopoulos
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nikiforos Psalidopoulos
Greece

Note: Nikiforos Psalidopoulos sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Turpin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Turpin
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Turpin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vivienne Luxton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vivienne Luxton
Netherlands

Note: Vivienne Luxton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jackie Saliba
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jackie Saliba
Malta

Note: Jackie Saliba sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Nuttall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Nuttall
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew Nuttall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nelly Hakkarainen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nelly Hakkarainen
Germany

Note: Nelly Hakkarainen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Ian Miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

A level 'playing field' is needed for all if the internet is to function fairly and freely.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritize certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

The public across Europe urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Ian Miller
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Ian Miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Syed Rafiul Islam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Syed Rafiul Islam
United Kingdom

Note: Syed Rafiul Islam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Debra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Debra
United Kingdom

Note: Debra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Harvey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Harvey
United Kingdom

Note: Harvey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Balint Sziki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Balint Sziki
Hungary

Note: Balint Sziki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jamil ahmed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jamil ahmed
United Kingdom

Note: Jamil ahmed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Haase-Derrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Haase-Derrett
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Haase-Derrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: antonia moskova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

antonia moskova
Slovakia

Note: antonia moskova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amir
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Amir
Germany

—

Note: Amir sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hannah Dunstan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hannah Dunstan
United Kingdom

Note: Hannah Dunstan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernard Lane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernard Lane
United Kingdom

Note: Bernard Lane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sandra Law
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sandra Law
United Kingdom

Note: Sandra Law sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Beaumont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Beaumont
United Kingdom

Note: Roger Beaumont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: julio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

julio
Spain

—

Note: julio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris H
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris H
United Kingdom

Note: Chris H sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James
Ireland

Note: James sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pernille Plantener Holst
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pernille Plantener Holst
Denmark

Note: Pernille Plantener Holst sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Koos Faber
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Koos Faber
Netherlands

Note: Koos Faber sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Imeldac
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Imeldac
Ireland

Note: Imeldac sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tyrone Ellul
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tyrone Ellul
Malta

Note: Tyrone Ellul sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olle Hagberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olle Hagberg
Sweden

Note: Olle Hagberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Brum
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Brum
United Kingdom

Note: Raymond Brum sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddie Violertte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddie Violertte
United Kingdom

Note: Eddie Violertte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jacqui Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jacqui Evans
United Kingdom

Note: jacqui Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Håkan Carlsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Håkan Carlsson
Sweden

Note: Håkan Carlsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oliver Fokerd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oliver Fokerd
United Kingdom

Note: Oliver Fokerd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sabine Tenge-Heslop
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sabine Tenge-Heslop
United Kingdom

Note: Sabine Tenge-Heslop sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Petter Larsson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Petter Larsson
Norway

Note: Petter Larsson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: C Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

C Morgan
United Kingdom

Note: C Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Storey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Storey
United Kingdom

Note: David Storey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Vallance
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

The freedom

--

Peter Vallance
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Vallance sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paula O'Keefe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paula O'Keefe
United Kingdom

Note: Paula O'Keefe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Parkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Parkin
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Parkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Johnston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Johnston
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Johnston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicolò Gueli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicolò Gueli
Italy

Note: Nicolò Gueli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grega Podlesek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grega Podlesek
Slovenia

Note: Grega Podlesek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoffrey O'Connell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey O'Connell
United Kingdom

Note: Geoffrey O'Connell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Vandervelden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Vandervelden
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Vandervelden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen
Belgium

Note: Karen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bridgit Beynon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bridgit Beynon
United Kingdom

Note: Bridgit Beynon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Neil Munro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Neil Munro
Portugal

Note: Neil Munro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bob
United Kingdom

Note: Bob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elaine Hall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elaine Hall
United Kingdom

Note: Elaine Hall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Coleman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Coleman
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Coleman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martha Maguire
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martha Maguire
United Kingdom

Note: Martha Maguire sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Antonio Couto]
[Portugal]

Note: Antonio Couto sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arnoud van Thiel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take my Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation. You will have to choose between these and investor protection.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.
- Remember Murphy's Law: if something bad can happen, it will happen. Or in this case: if it can be misused, it will be misused!

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arnoud van Thiel
Netherlands

Note: Arnoud van Thiel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lindsay Deighton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lindsay Deighton
United Kingdom

Note: Lindsay Deighton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miro Lange
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miro Lange
Germany

Note: Miro Lange sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kozlowski, Charlotte
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kozlowski, Charlotte
Germany

Note: Kozlowski, Charlotte sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Roland Gatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Roland Gatt
Malta

Note: John Roland Gatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erwin Labijt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erwin Labijt
Netherlands

Note: Erwin Labijt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: graeme warner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

graeme warner
United Kingdom

Note: graeme warner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Hardy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Hardy
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Hardy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maarten Sierens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maarten Sierens
Belgium

Note: Maarten Sierens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna blatchford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Blatchford
UK

Note: ANNA BLATCHFORD sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Restorick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Restorick
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Restorick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marian Pollzien
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marian Pollzien
Germany

Note: Marian Pollzien sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaus Seidenfaden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaus Seidenfaden
Denmark

Note: Klaus Seidenfaden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: D.willard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

D.willard
United Kingdom

Note: D.willard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: thomas kelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

thomas kelly
United Kingdom

Note: thomas kelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrei Mircea POPESCU
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrei Mircea POPESCU
Romania

Note: Andrei Mircea POPESCU sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate Clark
UK

Note: Kate Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ryan Terris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ryan Terris

United Kingdom

Note: Ryan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonella Celi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonella Celi
Italy

Note: Antonella Celi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: yani
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

yani
Greece

—

Note: yani sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: andrea manzotti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

andrea manzotti
Italy

—

Note: andrea manzotti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Russell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Russell
United Kingdom

Note: Russell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.archer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j archer
United Kingdom

Note: j archer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Craig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Craig
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Craig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Jensen
Denmark

Note: Thomas Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond Eadie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond Eadie
United Kingdom

Note: Raymond Eadie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacqueline Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacqueline Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Jacqueline Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marquita Flanders
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marquita Flanders
United Kingdom

Note: Marquita Flanders sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susana Caravatti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susana Caravatti
Denmark

Note: Susana Caravatti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John
United Kingdom

Note: John sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matt
United Kingdom

Note: Matt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hilde De Groof
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hilde De Groof
Belgium

Note: Hilde De Groof sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: margaret brookes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

margaret brookes
United Kingdom

Note: margaret brookes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerry Hodgkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerry Hodgkin
United Kingdom

Note: Kerry Hodgkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Cobbin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Cobbin
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Cobbin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniela Anceschi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniela Anceschi
Italy

Note: Daniela Anceschi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anette Møller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anette Møller
Denmark

Note: Anette Møller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Moreira
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Moreira
Portugal

Note: Maria Moreira sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marek Domanski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marek Domanski
United Kingdom

Note: Marek Domanski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne MacFarlane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne MacFarlane
France

Note: Marianne MacFarlane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ICE - Siobhan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ICE - Siobhan
United Kingdom

Note: ICE - Siobhan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Leginowicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Leginowicz
Poland

Note: Anna Leginowicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ingrid Molitor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ingrid Molitor
Sweden

Note: Ingrid Molitor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Johnston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Johnston
UK

Note: Alison Johnston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: József Fidlóczy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

József Fidlóczy
Hungary

Note: József Fidlóczy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo Poole
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo Poole
United Kingdom

Note: Jo Poole sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julia Seidl
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julia Seidl
Germany

Note: Julia Seidl sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jose Manuel Linares Felipe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jose Manuel Linares Felipe
Italy

Note: Jose Manuel Linares Felipe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill
Gibraltar

Note: Jill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Read
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Read
United Kingdom

Note: Jim Read sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ralph Yarrow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ralph Yarrow
United Kingdom

Note: Ralph Yarrow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marie
United Kingdom

Note: marie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: GRAINNE JORDAN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

GRAINNE JORDAN
United Kingdom

Note: GRAINNE JORDAN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: George
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect equal rights for all of us to access and create content on the Internet, as individuals and small businesses right up to big business, fostering diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

George
United Kingdom

Note: George sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nicola Meneghini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nicola Meneghini
Italy

Note: Nicola Meneghini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anke Thoss
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anke Thoss
Sweden

Note: Anke Thoss sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:31:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Hillier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Hillier
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Hillier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Hammer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Hammer
Germany

Note: Paul Hammer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kenneth Danielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kenneth Danielsen
Denmark

Note: Kenneth Danielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carla Buil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carla Buil
Netherlands

Note: Carla Buil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Broadbent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Broadbent
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Broadbent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shirley Penn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shirley Penn
United Kingdom

Note: Shirley Penn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl Nunweiler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl Nunweiler
United Kingdom

Note: Karl Nunweiler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tarcisio Gatt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tarcisio Gatt
Malta

Note: Tarcisio Gatt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Benjamin Byrne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Benjamin Byrne
United Kingdom

Note: Benjamin Byrne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Viira Kiviranta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Viira Kiviranta
Finland

Note: Viira Kiviranta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Shapiro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Shapiro
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Shapiro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Becca weijnen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Becca weijnen
Netherlands

Note: Becca weijnen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr. Petko Serbezov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr. Petko Serbezov
Bulgaria

Note: Dr. Petko Serbezov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison Keefe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison Keefe
United Kingdom

Note: Alison Keefe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Cuka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Cuka
United Kingdom

Note: Frances Cuka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Campbell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Campbell
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Campbell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hanne Michaelsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hanne Michaelsen
Denmark

Note: Hanne Michaelsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

richard
Slovakia

Note: richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kate.danziger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kate danziger
United Kingdom

Note: kate danziger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Porali
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Porali
Sweden

Note: Linda Porali sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Louise Corker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Louise Corker
United Kingdom

Note: Louise Corker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tricia Edwards
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tricia Edwards
United Kingdom

Note: Tricia Edwards sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eva just
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eva just
Denmark

Note: eva just sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Hare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Hare
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Hare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Clare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Clare
United Kingdom

Note: Marianne Clare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Goode
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Goode
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Goode sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krysia Domaszewicz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krysia Domaszewicz
United Kingdom

Note: Krysia Domaszewicz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Rahenbrock
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Rahenbrock
Germany

Note: David Rahenbrock sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ana Tola
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ana Tola
Germany

Note: Ana Tola sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sarah clayton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sarah clayton
United Kingdom

Note: sarah clayton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dorothy Allard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dorothy Allard
United Kingdom

Note: Dorothy Allard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tobias Widman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tobias Widman
Sweden

Note: Tobias Widman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Felgate
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Felgate
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Felgate sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Verena Sixt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Verena Sixt
United Kingdom

Note: Verena Sixt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jenny Bingham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jenny Bingham
United Kingdom

Note: Jenny Bingham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Jackson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Jackson
Germany

Note: Ben Jackson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Judith Simpson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Judith Simpson
United Kingdom

Note: Judith Simpson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David cox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David cox
Australia

Note: David cox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew Morgan
Sweden

Note: Andrew Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jose cabezas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jose cabezas
Spain

—

Note: jose cabezas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stephen Dark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stephen Dark
United Kingdom

Note: Stephen Dark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Philipp Koch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philipp Koch
Germany

Note: Philipp Koch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johanna Eronen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johanna Eronen
Finland

Note: Johanna Eronen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pat
United Kingdom

Note: pat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raul Garcês
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raul Garcês
Germany

Note: Raul Garcês sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jim.tevlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jim tevlin
Ireland

—

Note: jim tevlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gill Stone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

[Gill Stone
England

Note: Gill Stone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Morris Drever
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Morris Drever
United Kingdom

Note: Morris Drever sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Watson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Watson
United Kingdom

Note: Karen Watson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: brenon Ford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

brenon Ford
United Kingdom

Note: brenon Ford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: marie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

marie
United Kingdom

Note: marie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Suzy Eastwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Suzy Eastwood
United Kingdom

Note: Suzy Eastwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Veronica Marett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Veronica Marett
United Kingdom

Note: Veronica Marett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jill O'Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- Please close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jill O'Sullivan
United Kingdom

Note: Jill O'Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rowan Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rowan Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Rowan Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ed
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ed
Netherlands

—

Note: Ed sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemary McGruther
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

-our family business relies on net neutrality for its continuation. We will not be able to compete with large corporations in an internet that favours those able to pay.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups, small business and citizen movements to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemary McGruther
United Kingdom

Note: Rosemary McGruther sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Holger Nordström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Holger Nordström
Finland

Note: Holger Nordström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leonor Berdichevsky
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leonor Berdichevsky
United Kingdom

Note: Leonor Berdichevsky sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Uta Clay
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Uta Clay
United Kingdom

Note: Uta Clay sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Om Sharma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Om Sharma
Belgium

Note: Om Sharma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kristin Dimitrova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kristin Dimitrova
Bulgaria

Note: Kristin Dimitrova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian Rafferty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

brian Rafferty
Ireland

Note: Brian Rafferty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Holloway
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Holloway
United Kingdom

Note: James Holloway sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Val
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Val
United Kingdom

Note: Val sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Lidstone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Lidstone
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Lidstone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Heino Vander Sanden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take these comments regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Heino Vander Sanden
Belgium, Herk-deStad

—

Note: I sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cindy Boden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cindy Boden
Germany

Note: Cindy Boden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joe Tully
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joe Tully
Ireland

Note: Joe Tully sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans Maarten van der Ben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans Maarten van der Ben
Netherlands

Note: Hans Maarten van der Ben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: de Liedekerke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

de Liedekerke
Belgium

Note: de Liedekerke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Shakti Malan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Shakti Malan
South Africa

Note: Shakti Malan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katie Vallance
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katie Vallance
United Kingdom

Note: Katie Vallance sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthijs Knegt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthijs Knegt
Netherlands

Note: Matthijs Knegt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anja
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anja
Netherlands

Note: Anja sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lauren Powell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:30:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lauren Powell
United Kingdom

Note: Lauren Powell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoffrey Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoffrey Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Geoffrey Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janne Vainio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janne Vainio
Finland

Note: Janne Vainio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janet Livesey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janet Livesey
United Kingdom

Note: Janet Livesey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: kevin wilkinson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

kevin wilkinson
United Kingdom

Note: kevin wilkinson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Oldfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Oldfield
United Kingdom

Note: John Oldfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Renee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Renee
Netherlands

Note: Renee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline prime
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline prime
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline prime sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan J. Zijlstra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan J. Zijlstra
The Netherlands

Note: Jan J. Zijlstra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edward Egan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edward Egan
United Kingdom

Note: Edward Egan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Jordebrandt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Jordebrandt
Sweden

Note: Martin Jordebrandt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jim Porter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
 - If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
 - I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
 - In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.
- Also, if you slow down or hamper normal connection, people might get fed up waiting for shopping sites to load and go to local shops to spend their money.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jim Porter
United Kingdom

Note: Jim Porter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tomasz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tomasz
Poland

—

Note: Tomasz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tzvetalina Stavreva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tzvetalina Stavreva
Bulgaria

Note: Tzvetalina Stavreva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Stevens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Stevens
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Stevens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pedro Costa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pedro Costa
Portugal

Note: Pedro Costa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerrit Bruggeman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerrit Bruggeman
Netherlands

Note: Gerrit Bruggeman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M. Hoeing
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M. Hoeing
Netherlands

Note: M. Hoeing sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah White
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah White
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah White sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Niklas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Niklas
Sweden

—

Note: Niklas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Jewell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Jewell
United Kingdom

Note: Anna Jewell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: megaechad MJ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

megaechad MJ
Brazil

Note: megaechad MJ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leon Guilfoyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leon Guilfoyle
Ireland

Note: Leon Guilfoyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David howard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David howard
United Kingdom

Note: David howard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: phillippa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

phillippa
United Kingdom

Note: phillippa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gunnar Engström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gunnar Engström
Sweden

—

Note: Gunnar Engström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: clare rome
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

clare rome
United Kingdom

Note: clare rome sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ellis Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ellis Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Ellis Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Coats
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Coats
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Coats sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mariëlle Biggar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mariëlle Biggar
United Kingdom

Note: Mariëlle Biggar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesús Elorza
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jesús Elorza
Spain

Note: Jesús Elorza sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Hill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Hill
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Hill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: aidan thomas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

You saw how this panned out in America. The internet must be for the people by the people. Companies and corporations are not people and the provision of fast lanes would hurt us all.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

aidan thomas
United Kingdom

Note: aidan thomas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Odrowaz de Lorenzzi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Odrowaz de Lorenzzi
United Kingdom

Note: James Odrowaz de Lorenzzi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: nigel.gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

nigel gray
United Kingdom

Note: nigel gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arjan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arjan
Netherlands

Note: Arjan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: france
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

france
France

—

Note: france sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalie Bartlová
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalie Bartlová
Czech Republic

Note: Natalie Bartlová sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Shaw Champion
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Shaw Champion
United Kingdom

Note: Geoff Shaw Champion sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christina Economou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christina Economou
Greece

Note: Christina Economou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joke Maes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joke Maes
Belgium

Note: Joke Maes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Turok
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Turok
United Kingdom

Note: Stefan Turok sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chloe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chloe
United Kingdom

Note: Chloe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jojo Tuulikki Oinonen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jojo Tuulikki Oinonen
Sweden

Note: Jojo Tuulikki Oinonen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kirill Stytsenko
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kirill Stytsenko
Austria

Note: Kirill Stytsenko sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Linda Kerner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Linda Kerner
United Kingdom

Note: Linda Kerner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antoon Gijsens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antoon Gijsens
Luxembourg

Note: Antoon Gijsens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick crossling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick crossling
United Kingdom

Note: Nick crossling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Onni Kojo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Onni Kojo
Australia

Note: Onni Kojo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eva Rucki
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eva Rucki
United Kingdom

Note: Eva Rucki sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hendrik Mertens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hendrik Mertens
Belgium

Note: Hendrik Mertens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gonzalo Azcoitia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gonzalo Azcoitia
Spain

Note: Gonzalo Azcoitia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: ingrid.huebenthal@t-online.de
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

ingrid.huebenthal@t-online.de
Germany

Note: ingrid.huebenthal@t-online.de sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clare
United Kingdom

Note: Clare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Imran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Imran
Germany

Note: Imran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anna Maria Mordenti
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anna Maria Mordenti
Italy

Note: Anna Maria Mordenti sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johannes Werner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johannes Werner
Germany

Note: Johannes Werner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lone Klitgaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lone Klitgaard
Danmark

Note: Lone Klitgaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Davies
United Kingdom

Note: John Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Born
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Born
Finland

Note: Martin Born sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rita harris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rita harris
United Kingdom

Note: rita harris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nuno Vidal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nuno Vidal
Portugal

Note: Nuno Vidal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kamila
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kamila
United Kingdom

Note: Kamila sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jo
United Kingdom

Note: Jo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin
Slovakia

Note: Martin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Iris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Iris
Portugal

Note: Iris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronny Vanbaelen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronny Vanbaelen
Belgium

Note: Ronny Vanbaelen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andreas T
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andreas T
Sweden

Note: Andreas T sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynfa Dabrowska
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynfa Dabrowska
United Kingdom

Note: Lynfa Dabrowska sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Schilz Gaby
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Schilz Gaby
Luxembourg

Note: Schilz Gaby sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Kew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Kew
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Kew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sean van der Loo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sean van der Loo
Netherlands

Note: Sean van der Loo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tim
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tim

United Kingdom

Note: tim sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roelien Gorter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roelien Gorter
France

Note: Roelien Gorter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulick O'Beirne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ulick O'Beirne
Ireland

Note: Ulick O'Beirne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frances Purdue
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frances Purdue
United Kingdom

Note: Frances Purdue sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joni
Finland

—

Note: Joni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: aljoska cebron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

aljoska cebron
Slovenia

Note: aljoska cebron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Barry Pollard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barry Pollard
United Kingdom

Note: Barry Pollard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian Osman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian Osman
United Kingdom

Note: Adrian Osman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tommyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tommyd
Ireland

Note: Tommyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Hough
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon Hough
Ireland

Note: Sharon Hough sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bill Stoddart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bill Stoddart
United Kingdom

Note: Bill Stoddart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mel
United Kingdom

Note: Mel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulla Birkved Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ulla Birkved Jensen
Denmark

Note: Ulla Birkved Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Linck
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Linck
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Linck sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rien Brand
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rien Brand
Netherlands

Note: Rien Brand sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bronwen Rees
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bronwen Rees
United Kingdom

Note: Bronwen Rees sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mario
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mario
Slovenia

Note: Mario sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jacques ROBERT
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jacques ROBERT
France

Note: Jacques ROBERT sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gillian Clark
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gillian Clark
United Kingdom

Note: Gillian Clark sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen van Leeuwen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen van Leeuwen
Netherlands

Note: Karen van Leeuwen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wester Stephanie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wester Stephanie
Luxembourg

Note: Wester Stephanie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sibylle Sterzer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sibylle Sterzer
Germany

Note: Sibylle Sterzer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kim Brian Jensen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kim Brian Jensen
Denmark

Note: Kim Brian Jensen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sasi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oli Jackson
Greece

—

Note: Sasi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B.Tenger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B.Tenger
Netherlands Antilles

Note: B.Tenger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Svetozar Zhekov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Svetozar Zhekov
Bulgaria

Note: Svetozar Zhekov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P. Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Scott
United Kingdom

Note: P Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Lawson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Lawson
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Lawson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Artemis Toouli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Artemis Toouli
United Kingdom

Note: Artemis Toouli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorraine Surringer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorraine Surringer
United Kingdom

Note: Lorraine Surringer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marc Denis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marc Denis
Belgium

Note: Marc Denis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Su Hughes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Su Hughes
United Kingdom

Note: Su Hughes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antoinette
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antoinette
France

Note: Antoinette sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jitka slavik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jitka slavik
Sweden

Note: jitka slavik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: rosamund bance
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

rosamund bance
United Kingdom

Note: rosamund bance sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosemma Mortara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosemma Mortara
ITALY____

Note: Rosemma Mortara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inês Alves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inês Alves
Portugal

Note: Inês Alves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pupak Navabpour
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pupak Navabpour
United Kingdom

Note: Pupak Navabpour sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Welsher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Welsher
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Welsher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Astrid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Astrid
Belarus

Note: Astrid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adolfo Alegre Izquierdo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

Es necesario mantener la neutralidad en la Red y que Internet no sea rápida para los de pago y lennnntttaaaaa muuuuyyyyy leennntttaaaa para el resto de los mrtales. Una de las grandes ventajas de Internet es que iguala a todas las personas empresas y medios que la usan.

Comprometanse a mantener esta características inicial e imprescindible de la Red

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adolfo Alegre Izquierdo
Spain

—

Note: Adolfo Alegre Izquierdo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eddie cairney
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eddie cairney
New Zealand

Note: eddie cairney sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mihai Lazar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mihai Lazar
Romania

Note: Mihai Lazar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuel Goncalves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuel Gonçalves
Portugal

Note: Manuel Gonçalves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hattie Naylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hattie Naylor
United Kingdom

Note: hattie Naylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Broad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Broad
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Broad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Björn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Björn
Sweden

—

Note: Björn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hollie Dawson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hollie Dawson
United Kingdom

Note: Hollie Dawson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hessel Bouman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hessel Bouman
Netherlands

Note: Hessel Bouman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CM Davies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CM Davies
United Kingdom

Note: CM Davies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans
Sweden

—

Note: Hans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Esteban Pérez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Esteban Pérez
Spain

—

Note: Esteban Pérez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalia Daalmans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalia Daalmans
Sweden

Note: Natalia Daalmans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan Vasile
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan Vasile
Romania

Note: Dan Vasile sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phillip Anderton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phillip Anderton
United Kingdom

Note: Phillip Anderton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jouni Nissinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jouni Nissinen
Finland

Note: Jouni Nissinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doke ostle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Doke ostle
United Kingdom

Note: Doke ostle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jeff Bowles
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jeff Bowles
United Kingdom

Note: Jeff Bowles sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Maxwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Maxwell
United Kingdom

Note: John Maxwell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eszter Fenlon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eszter Fenlon
Hungary

Note: Eszter Fenlon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bart Smink
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bart Smink
Netherlands

Note: Bart Smink sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alet de Jonge
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alet de Jonge
Netherlands

Note: Alet de Jonge sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Siegfried Moser
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritize certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Siegfried Moser
Austria

Note: Siegfried Moser sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Bergling
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Bergling
Sweden

Note: David Bergling sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Claus Derenda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Claus Derenda
Ireland

Note: Claus Derenda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Smith
United Kingdom

Note: James Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Terence Ronald Turner
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Terence Ronald Turner
Spain

Note: Terence Ronald Turner sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Bennet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Bennet
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Bennet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: fiona Hebben
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

fiona Hebben
United Kingdom

Note: fiona Hebben sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: J.Cleare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

J Cleare
United Kingdom

Note: J Cleare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Watkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Watkins
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Watkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: liz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

liz
France

—

Note: liz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Dore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Dore
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Dore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sofie de Stigter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sofie de Stigter
Netherlands

Note: Sofie de Stigter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david mussell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david mussell
United Kingdom

Note: david mussell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bram van Popering
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bram van Popering
Netherlands

Note: Bram van Popering sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy Lloyd
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy Lloyd
United Kingdom

Note: Andy Lloyd sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: saravana maruthamuthu
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

saravana maruthamuthu
Germany

Note: saravana maruthamuthu sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Steven Blanchard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Steven Blanchard
United Kingdom

Note: Steven Blanchard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Simon Barrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Keep the internet free and equal

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Simon Barrett
United Kingdom

Note: Simon Barrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nimit Jethwa
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nimit Jethwa
United Kingdom

Note: Nimit Jethwa sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michel Åsén
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Michel Åsén]
[Sweden]

—

Note: [Michel Åsén] sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Federico
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Federico
South Korea

Note: Federico sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M McPhail
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M McPhail
United Kingdom

Note: M McPhail sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Frank Folan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Frank Folan
Ireland

Note: Frank Folan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stefanie sleep
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stefanie sleep
United Kingdom

Note: stefanie sleep sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura Dean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura Dean
United Kingdom

Note: Laura Dean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Flannelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Flannelly
United Kingdom

Note: Matthew Flannelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Lumb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Lumb
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Lumb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
United Kingdom

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fiona Katsanas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fiona Katsanas
Greece

Note: Fiona Katsanas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz
United Kingdom

Note: Liz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Farago
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Farago
Hungary

Note: Daniel Farago sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gwyneth.gallen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gwyneth.gallen
Morocco

Note: gwyneth.gallen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Janis Baumanis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Janis Baumanis
Riga, Latvia

Note: Janis Baumanis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rune Baastrup
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rune Baastrup
Denmark

Note: Rune Baastrup sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pernilla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pernilla
Sweden

Note: Pernilla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David de Gorter
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David de Gorter
Netherlands

Note: David de Gorter sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: stephen banks
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

stephen banks
United Kingdom

Note: stephen banks sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marietta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marietta
France

Note: Marietta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elena
United Kingdom

Note: Elena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lars Bramekamp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lars Bramekamp
Germany

Note: Lars Bramekamp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Blake
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Blake
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Blake sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Raymond
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Raymond
Belgium

Note: Raymond sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christoph von Gagern
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christoph von Gagern
Germany

Note: Christoph von Gagern sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Douglas McKee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Douglas McKee
United Kingdom

Note: Douglas McKee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CMA Termeer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CMA Termeer
Netherlands

Note: CMA Termeer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ogi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ogi
United Kingdom

Note: Ogi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cristina
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cristina
United Kingdom

Note: Cristina sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Puskas Istvan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:21:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Puskas Istvan
Romania

Note: Puskas Istvan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henna
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henna
United Kingdom

Note: Henna sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Libor Juricek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Libor Juricek
Czech Republic

Note: Libor Juricek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wael Rahmouni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wael Rahmouni
France

Note: Wael Rahmouni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Gibbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Martin Gibbs
UK

Note: Martin Gibbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Armstrong
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Armstrong
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Armstrong sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emmanuella Contopoulou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emmanuella Contopoulou
United Kingdom

Note: Emmanuella Contopoulou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sally.guyer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sally.guyer
United Kingdom

Note: sally.guyer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott Marshall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott Marshall
United Kingdom

Note: Scott Marshall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hussain ali
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hussain ali
United Kingdom

Note: Hussain ali sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabor Kovacs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabor Kovacs
Hungary

Note: Gabor Kovacs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: liz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

liz

United Kingdom

Note: liz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dean Steadman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dean Steadman
United Kingdom

Note: Dean Steadman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: CARMEN
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

CARMEN
Spain

—

Note: CARMEN sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Devitt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Devitt
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Devitt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mario Juric
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mario Juric
Slovenia

Note: Mario Juric sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Orlando Blanco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Orlando Blanco
Ireland

Note: Orlando Blanco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Polia Valkova
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Polia Valkova
Bulgaria

Note: Polia Valkova sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cochintu Rodica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cochintu Rodica
Romania

Note: Cochintu Rodica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Piper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Piper
United Kingdom

Note: Rob Piper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jarmo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jarmo
Finland

—

Note: Jarmo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bridget
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bridget
United Kingdom

Note: Bridget sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Neville
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Neville
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Neville sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexander Robbie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexander Robbie
United Kingdom

Note: Alexander Robbie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inês Dias
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inês Dias
Portugal

Note: Inês Dias sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Clothier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Clothier
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Clothier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Thompson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Thompson
Germany

Note: Ian Thompson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mary lalor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mary lalor
Ireland

Note: mary lalor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Izzy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Izzy
United Kingdom

Note: Izzy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luka Kovac
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luka Kovac
Slovenia

Note: Luka Kovac sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jackie Fildes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jackie Fildes
United Kingdom

Note: Jackie Fildes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pavel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pavel
Bulgaria

Note: Pavel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Grace Stimpson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Grace Stimpson
Ireland

Note: Grace Stimpson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maurice Halder
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maurice Halder
France

Note: Maurice Halder sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrés
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrés
Spain

—

Note: Andrés sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tony dean
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tony dean
United Kingdom

Note: tony dean sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John H. Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John H. Wright
United Kingdom

Note: John H. Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julian Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julian Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Julian Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jo orgill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jo orgill
United Kingdom

Note: jo orgill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin RC McGowan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin RC McGowan
United Kingdom

Note: Martin RC McGowan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris Jefferies
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris Jefferies
United Kingdom

Note: Chris Jefferies sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Robert Nichols
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Robert Nichols
United Kingdom

Note: Robert Nichols sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: soula christou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

soula christou
Cyprus

Note: soula christou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: TONI MORA NÚÑEZ
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

TONI MORA NÚÑEZ
Spain

Note: TONI MORA NÚÑEZ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gloria
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gloria
Italy

—

Note: Gloria sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rutger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rutger
Netherlands

Note: Rutger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: fried didden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

fried didden
Netherlands

Note: fried didden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andreas Sundberg
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andreas Sundberg
Sweden

—

Note: Andreas Sundberg sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Chamberlin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

I understand you have a say in the decisions around Net Neutrality rules to be implemented in the EU, and that there is a risk of these rules being suborned to the wishes of large ISPs and other commercial interests. This will make it hard for all others - smaller corporations, startups, charities and campaigning groups, and private individuals. All of us will become less influential if our traffic is effectively controlled by third parties whose interests may well conflict with ours.

I deplore this prospect and urge you to prevent Europe's networks becoming less open and democratic than those in places like the USA and India. Please amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Chamberlin
United Kingdom

Note: David Chamberlin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Don Bryant
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Don Bryant
United KingdomUK

Note: [Don Bryant_UK sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Des Bourke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Des Bourke
United Kingdom

Note: Des Bourke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Walker
Czech Republic

Note: John Walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dan
United Kingdom

Note: Dan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Demeter Kraaij
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Demeter Kraaij
United Kingdom

Note: Demeter Kraaij sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Maragakis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Maragakis
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Maragakis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddie
Ireland

—

Note: Eddie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ben Davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ben Davis
United Kingdom

Note: Ben Davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alison
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alison
United Kingdom

Note: Alison sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: m.momma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

m.momma
United Kingdom

Note: m.momma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah
Netherlands

Note: Deborah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andre
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andre
South Africa

Note: Andre sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marianne Toperczer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marianne Toperczer
United Kingdom

Note: Marianne Toperczer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mia Beaumont
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mia Beaumont
United Kingdom

Note: Mia Beaumont sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: r.meier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

r.meier
Netherlands

Note: r.meier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Kritzinger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:20:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

The first point I would like to make is that despite corporations saying that it is them who will be investing in the infrastructure, it is at the end of the day the consumers (households, mobile phone users and businesses) who pay for line rental and ISP charges thus it is the consumers who fund the investment. It is fundamentally unfair for the big mutli-national companies to prioritise their own services at the expense of the consumer. The consumer should have the right to prioritise whichever services and content they wish to access.

Additionally:

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Kritzinger
United Kingdom

Note: Max Kritzinger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Philips
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Philips
Belgium

Note: Peter Philips sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Celia Tordoff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Celia Tordoff
United Kingdom

Note: Celia Tordoff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susan Wood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susan Wood
United Kingdom

Note: Susan Wood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: andy ballard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

andy ballard
United Kingdom

Note: andy ballard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Ružicka
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Ružicka
Czech Republic

Note: Jan Ružicka sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anan davis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anan davis
United Kingdom

Note: Anan davis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: wilf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

wilf
United Kingdom

Note: wilf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: protest22
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

protest22
United States of America

Note: protest22 sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K J Bellenger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K J Bellenger
United Kingdom

Note: K J Bellenger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Matthew Long
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Matthew Long
UK

Note: Matthew Long sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ms S Morris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ms S Morris
United Kingdom

Note: Ms S Morris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chapman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chapman
United Kingdom

Note: Chapman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: susan vincent
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

susan vincent
United Kingdom

Note: susan vincent sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miguel Garcia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miguel Garcia
Portugal

Note: Miguel Garcia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: tom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

tom
United Kingdom

Note: tom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Goff
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Goff
United Kingdom

Note: M Goff sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dennis Stephens
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dennis Stephens
United Kingdom

Note: Dennis Stephens sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leanne Likaj
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leanne Likaj
United Kingdom

Note: Leanne Likaj sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mic bullet
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mic bullet
Netherlands

Note: mic bullet sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jan Jaap van den Hurk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jan Jaap van den Hurk
Netherlands

Note: Jan Jaap van den Hurk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rickard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Pleeeeeease!

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rickard
Gothenburg sweden

Note: Rickard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eimear Montague
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eimear Montague
United Kingdom

Note: Eimear Montague sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Goldfinch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Goldfinch
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Goldfinch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Sheen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Sheen
UK

Note: John Sheen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Klaus-Marco Koppenhagen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Klaus-Marco Koppenhagen
United Kingdom

Note: Klaus-Marco Koppenhagen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mait Raag
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mait Raag
Estonia

Note: Mait Raag sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret MacMillan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret MacMillan
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret MacMillan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosaleen Crossan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosaleen Crossan
Ireland

Note: Rosaleen Crossan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Niesen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Finally, I ask that you don't give in to pressure from multinationals, regardless of how positive a picture they paint of the changes they advocate, or how much they portray these as being in the interest of Europe and its citizens. It should not be forgotten that they always act in their own interest. Moreover, succumbing to their lobbying would surely only add to the impression of an "undemocratic" European Union, out of touch with its citizens.

Thank you for taking the time to read this message.

--

Christopher Niesen
France

—

Note: Christopher Niesen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Storey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Storey
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Storey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kamen Kalchev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kamen Kalchev
Bulgaria

Note: Kamen Kalchev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Deborah Sheare
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Deborah Sheare
United Kingdom

Note: Deborah Sheare sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sven Wolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sven Wolf
Germany

Note: Sven Wolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pablo Valarcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pablo Valarcher
France

Note: Pablo Valarcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Oiva Nuutinen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Oiva Nuutinen
Finland

Note: Oiva Nuutinen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonya
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonya
Spain

—

Note: Sonya sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paz Lucio
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Thank you very much for your attention.

--

Paz Lucio
Paraguay

—

Note: Paz Lucio sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: David Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Manuel Marques
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Manuel Marques
United Kingdom

Note: Manuel Marques sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike Woulfe
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike Woulfe
United Kingdom

Note: Mike Woulfe sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mike
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mike
United Kingdom

Note: mike sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Farah Ali
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Farah Ali
United Kingdom

Note: Farah Ali sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M Hardy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M Hardy
United Kingdom

Note: M Hardy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosanna Molloy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosanna Molloy
Ireland

Note: Rosanna Molloy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Willy Berger
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:33

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Willy Berger
Belgium

Note: Willy Berger sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brianna Summers
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brianna Summers
Germany

Note: Brianna Summers sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caspar van der Hoek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caspar van der Hoek
Germany

Note: Caspar van der Hoek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Leonardo Chi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Leonardo Chi
Germany

Note: Leonardo Chi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thijs Vermeulen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thijs Vermeulen
Netherlands

Note: Thijs Vermeulen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: david curtis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

david curtis
United Kingdom

Note: david curtis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: H.B. Hooghiemstra
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

H.B. Hooghiemstra
Netherlands

Note: H.B. Hooghiemstra sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Laura
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Laura
Netherlands

Note: Laura sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz Kirsopp
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz Kirsopp
United Kingdom

Note: Liz Kirsopp sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Gustafson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Gustafson
Sweden

Note: Peter Gustafson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joshua Gallagher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joshua Gallagher
United Kingdom

Note: Joshua Gallagher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margaret Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margaret Jones
United Kingdom

Note: Margaret Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela
Germany

Note: Angela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Allen Swindells
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Allen Swindells
France

Note: Allen Swindells sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eleanore Barlow
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eleanore Barlow
United Kingdom

Note: Eleanore Barlow sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: gordon bennett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

gordon bennett
United Kingdom

Note: gordon bennett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: c.dowden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

c dowden
United Kingdom

Note: c dowden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mari
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mari
Sweden

Note: Mari sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nagraj Kini
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nagraj Kini
Belgium

Note: Nagraj Kini sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SYLVIA HALL
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SYLVIA HALL
United Kingdom

Note: SYLVIA HALL sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lena
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lena
Sweden

—

Note: Lena sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ferdinand Goldmann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ferdinand Goldmann
Austria

Note: Ferdinand Goldmann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joana Silva
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joana Silva
Portugal

Note: Joana Silva sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob hervij
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob hervij
Netherlands

Note: Rob hervij sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: SERGIO BURINI
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

SERGIO BURINI

Italy

—

Note: SERGIO BURINI sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: pj_horn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

pj horn
Netherlands

Note: pj horn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mrs Jane Maxwell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mrs Jane Maxwell
United Kingdom

Note: Mrs Jane Maxwell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kerstin Skov-Hansen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kerstin Skov-Hansen
Denmark

Note: Kerstin Skov-Hansen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rajiv Kapdee
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rajiv Kapdee
United Kingdom

Note: Rajiv Kapdee sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Geoff Taylor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Geoff Taylor
United States of America

Note: Geoff Taylor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: anne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

anne
United Kingdom

Note: anne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M.m.Scharloo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M.m.Scharloo
Netherlands

Note: M.m.Scharloo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathy Ter Veen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathy Ter Veen
Netherlands

Note: Kathy Ter Veen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carina aka Caren Grogan Doyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carina aka Caren Grogan Doyle
United Kingdom

Note: Carina aka Caren Grogan Doyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Katherine Harington
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Katherine Harington
United Kingdom

Note: Katherine Harington sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eleanor Andrews
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eleanor Andrews
United Kingdom

Note: Eleanor Andrews sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Cecilia Betts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Cecilia Betts
United Kingdom

Note: Cecilia Betts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Andersson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Andersson
Sweden

Note: David Andersson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: eric davidson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

eric davidson
United Kingdom

Note: eric davidson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Moffat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Moffat
Cyprus

Note: John Moffat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Menno van Opbroek
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Menno van Opbroek
Netherlands

Note: Menno van Opbroek sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kathleen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kathleen
United Kingdom

Note: Kathleen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Brian
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Brian
Sweden

Note: Brian sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Boris Banas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Boris Banas
Slovakia

Note: Boris Banas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Keith Johnston
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Keith Johnston
United Kingdom

Note: Keith Johnston sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bojan Scheurer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bojan Scheurer
France

Note: Bojan Scheurer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Age Kat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Age Kat
Netherlands

Note: Age Kat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K. Best
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K. Best
United Kingdom

Note: K. Best sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gabriel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gabriel
United Kingdom

Note: Gabriel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nick Rushton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nick Rushton
United Kingdom

Note: Nick Rushton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ken Hodgins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ken Hodgins
Ireland

Note: Ken Hodgins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kay Simon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kay Simon
United Kingdom

Note: Kay Simon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jane
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jane
United Kingdom

Note: Jane sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: howard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

howard
United Kingdom

Note: howard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Margot Walford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Margot Walford
United Kingdom

Note: Margot Walford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Stanley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Stanley
United Kingdom

Note: David Stanley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernie Leadbeater
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernie Leadbeater
United Kingdom

Note: Bernie Leadbeater sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Mari Hjorth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Mari Hjorth
Sweden

Note: Ann Mari Hjorth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alistair Rose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alistair Rose
United Kingdom

Note: Alistair Rose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elvis THENAISIE
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elvis THENAISIE
France

Note: Elvis THENAISIE sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Antonio Puch
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Antonio Puch
Spain

Note: Antonio Puch sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christopher Rootes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:18

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christopher Rootes
United Kingdom

Note: Christopher Rootes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tomislav Podlogar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tomislav Podlogar
Slovenia

Note: Tomislav Podlogar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: sue knight
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

sue knight
United Kingdom

Note: sue knight sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: linda
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

linda
United Kingdom

Note: linda sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Liz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Liz
Ireland

—

Note: Liz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniele Reggi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniele Reggi
Italy

Note: Daniele Reggi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ashley Barker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ashley Barker
United Kingdom

Note: Ashley Barker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Joy Compton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:17

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Joy Compton
United Kingdom

Note: Joy Compton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Moon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Moon
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Moon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony McCaffrey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony McCaffrey
Ireland

Note: Anthony McCaffrey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wouters L.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wouters L.
Belgium

Note: Wouters L. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Donna Barnes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Barnes]
[U.K.]

—

Note: Donna Barnes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alexandra Morgan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alexandra Morgan
Ireland

Note: Alexandra Morgan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roger Nordin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roger Nordin
Sweden

Note: Roger Nordin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Luis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:13

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Luis
Spain

—

Note: Luis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Wheeler
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Wheeler
United Kingdom

Note: David Wheeler sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Lewis
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Lewis
United Kingdom

Note: Tony Lewis sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Jones
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:12

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Many thanks.

--

Emma Jones
Germany

Note: Emma Jones sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jacqueline.smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jacqueline smith
Norway

Note: jacqueline smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Alves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Alves
Portugal

Note: John Alves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Atkins
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:11

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Atkins
United Kingdom

Note: Michael Atkins sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: john smits
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

john smits
Ireland

Note: john smits sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wolfgang Klausing
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wolfgang Klausing
Germany

Note: Wolfgang Klausing sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Izabela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Izabela
Belgium

Note: Izabela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Krystelle Bamford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Krystelle Bamford
United Kingdom

Note: Krystelle Bamford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jón
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jón
Denmark

Note: Jón sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Amanda Moat
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:09

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

[Amanda Moat]
[ireland]

Note: Amanda Moat sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: K. Sarsfield
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:08

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

K. Sarsfield
United Kingdom

Note: K. Sarsfield sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerald Clarke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerald Clarke
United Kingdom

Note: Gerald Clarke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Per Hedlund
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Per Hedlund
Sweden

Note: Per Hedlund sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Phil
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Phil
Ireland

Note: Phil sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Land
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:07

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Land
Portugal

Note: John Land sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Patricia Malcolm
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Patricia Malcolm
United Kingdom

Note: Patricia Malcolm sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Stanley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Stanley
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Stanley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Caroline Penn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Caroline Penn
United Kingdom

Note: Caroline Penn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ivan Lebar
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:06

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ivan Lebar
Czech Republic

Note: Ivan Lebar sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Elf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Elf
Netherlands

—

Note: Elf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alfons Fehrenbacher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:05

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alfons Fehrenbacher
Germany

Note: Alfons Fehrenbacher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ann Reeves
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ann Reeves
United Kingdom

Note: Ann Reeves sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:04

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andy
United Kingdom

Note: Andy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: charles dearman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:03

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

charles dearman
Portugal

Note: charles dearman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sebastian Laufer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:02

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sebastian Laufer
Germany

Note: Sebastian Laufer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Thomell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Thomell
Greece

—

Note: Thomas Thomell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bouke Becker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bouke Becker
Spain

Note: Bouke Becker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Wright
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Wright
United Kingdom

Note: David Wright sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dympna Traynor
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dympna Traynor
Ireland

Note: Dympna Traynor sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fons Brandsma
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fons Brandsma
Netherlands

Note: Fons Brandsma sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Emma Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:01

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Emma Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Emma Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ria Byford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ria Byford
United Kingdom

Note: Ria Byford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Josephine Marsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Josephine Marsh
United Kingdom

Note: Josephine Marsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Roy Wurlitzer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Roy Wurlitzer
United Kingdom

Note: Roy Wurlitzer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Edwin Henshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Edwin Henshaw
UK

Note: Edwin Henshaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Huet-Gundill
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:11:00

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Huet-Gundill
France

Note: Huet-Gundill sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonatan Carl Thorén
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonatan Carl Thorén
Sweden

Note: Jonatan Carl Thorén sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Garth Jory
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Garth Jory
Germany

Note: Garth Jory sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christine Noisternig
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:59

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christine Noisternig
Austria

Note: Christine Noisternig sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MIKE MAUNDER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

People like Branson and others think they have the right, due to wealth, to have more say in the matter of Brexit than the rest of us. WRONG ! They have the same one vote as all the rest of us, and they should know that this referendum has unlocked real passion for Democracy with the British people, so if they continue to act like rich fools, there may be down-ternes in all their businesses.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MIKE MAUNDER
United Kingdom

Note: MIKE MAUNDER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: carl miller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

carl miller
United Kingdom

Note: carl miller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: lee hearson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

lee hearson
United Kingdom

Note: lee hearson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jennifer Mainstone
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jennifer Mainstone
United Kingdom

Note: Jennifer Mainstone sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Korinna Karkanidou
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Korinna Karkanidou
Greece

Note: Korinna Karkanidou sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dave Pearce
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dave Pearce
United Kingdom

Note: Dave Pearce sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen Brennan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen Brennan
United Kingdom

Note: Maureen Brennan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Wilshaw
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

I have read the model letter provided by Avaaz and am pleased to support the view expressed therein. In the interests of the ordinary citizens it is important that their views are seen to be taken into consideration. We see with Brexit what happens when governments continually ignore their constituents.

Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.

- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'.

This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.

- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.

- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Ian Wilshaw
UK

—

Note: Ian Wilshaw sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard
United Kingdom

Note: Richard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: E.F. Hemelt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

E.F. Hemelt
Netherlands

Note: E.F. Hemelt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Xavier Gironés
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Xavier Gironés
Spain

—

Note: Xavier Gironés sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Aspinall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Aspinall
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Aspinall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: michael bleach
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

Please help keep the internet free and equal to use for everyone. The internet is one of the greatest chances we have to move towards fairer more equal and understanding world. But to do this it needs to remain equally accessible for everyone the world over.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Bleach
UK

Note: Michael Bleach sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paola Lippi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paola Lippi
Italy

Note: Paola Lippi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: R Fitz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:55

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

Thank you

R Fitz

UK

Note: R Fitz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alyson Pendlebury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alyson Pendlebury
United Kingdom

Note: Alyson Pendlebury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Martin Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Martin Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Martin Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Szekely
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Szekely
United Kingdom

Note: Peter Szekely sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: penny graham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

penny graham
United Kingdom

Note: penny graham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sharon Rhode
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sharon Rhode
Germany

Note: Sharon Rhode sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lesley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lesley
United Kingdom

Note: Lesley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sarah Winkler Reid
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sarah Winkler Reid
United Kingdom

Note: Sarah Winkler Reid sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Henning Egholk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Henning Egholk
Denmark

Note: Henning Egholk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Max Storz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Max Storz
Germany

Note: Max Storz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Amundsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Amundsen
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Amundsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Lafferty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Lafferty
Spain

Note: Angela Lafferty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Albert Joseph Caruana
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Albert Joseph Caruana
Malta

—

Note: Albert Joseph Caruana sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carina Ahlström
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carina Ahlström
Sweden

Note: Carina Ahlström sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: B-M G
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

B-M G
Finland

—

Note: B-M G sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: IRENE CRETCHLEY
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

IRENE CRETCHLEY
United Kingdom

Note: IRENE CRETCHLEY sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Peter Fitzgerald
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Peter Fitzgerald
Ireland

Note: Peter Fitzgerald sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Schall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Schall
Germany

Note: Schall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andrew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andrew
United Kingdom

Note: Andrew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maureen Doyle
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maureen Doyle
Ireland

Note: Maureen Doyle sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miri Felix
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miri Felix
United Kingdom

Note: Miri Felix sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: P Har
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

P Har
United Kingdom

Note: P Har sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tony Cuckson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tony Cuckson
Ireland

Note: Tony Cuckson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Neumann
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Neumann
United States of America

Note: Daniel Neumann sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Aleksandra Domke
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Aleksandra Domke
France

Note: Aleksandra Domke sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Glauco Pacioni
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Glauco Pacioni
ITALY____

Note: Glauco Pacioni sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rolf
Sweden

—

Note: Rolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: deborah
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

deborah
United Kingdom

Note: deborah sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anthony Corcoran
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anthony Corcoran
United Kingdom

Note: Anthony Corcoran sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Clement Brookes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Clement Brookes
United Kingdom

Note: Clement Brookes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eric Van Campenhout
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eric Van Campenhout
Belgium

Note: Eric Van Campenhout sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott Munn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott Munn
United Kingdom

Note: Scott Munn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ronan Heenan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ronan Heenan
United Kingdom

Note: Ronan Heenan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lynette Douglas
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lynette Douglas
United Kingdom

Note: Lynette Douglas sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Francoise Freedman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Francoise Freedman
United Kingdom

Note: Francoise Freedman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jafari Brookes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jafari Brookes
United Kingdom

Note: Jafari Brookes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex
Greece

—

Note: Alex sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Richard Wall
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Richard Wall
United Kingdom

Note: Richard Wall sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mike
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mike
Slovenia

Note: Mike sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen Coutts
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen Coutts
United Kingdom

Note: Helen Coutts sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Johnson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Johnson
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Johnson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sonia Nardi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sonia Nardi
ITALY____

Note: Sonia Nardi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michel
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michel
Greece

Note: Michel sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alex Siddy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alex Siddy
United Kingdom

Note: Alex Siddy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rosa Bellesi
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rosa Bellesi
ITALY____

Note: Rosa Bellesi sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Radoslav Petkov
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:19

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Radoslav Petkov
Bulgaria

Note: Radoslav Petkov sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fulvia Galliano
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:16

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fulvia Galliano
ITALY____

Note: Fulvia Galliano sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maria Teresa Scocco
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:15

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maria Teresa Scocco
ITALY____

Note: Maria Teresa Scocco sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jesper Nordqvist
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritize certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

As it is, a free and open internet is an important tool to empower the basic human rights of free expression, regardless of nationality, gender, race and social status. Don't sell it out to the corporations!

--

Jesper Nordqvist
Sweden

From: Catherine Smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:10:10

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Smith
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Maira Gommon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:58

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Maira Gommon
United Kingdom

Note: Maira Gommon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ilona Muller
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:57

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ilona Muller
United Kingdom

Note: Ilona Muller sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pat Homer
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pat Homer
United Kingdom

Note: Pat Homer sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karl-Kristian Bjerregaard
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:56

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karl-Kristian Bjerregaard
Denmark

Note: Karl-Kristian Bjerregaard sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catriona Kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality is necessary for democracy
- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catriona Kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Catriona Kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Miranda Cox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Miranda Cox
United Kingdom

Note: Miranda Cox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jerry Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:54

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jerry Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Jerry Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: S.Walsh
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

S.Walsh
Ireland

Note: S.Walsh sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anindita Balslev
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:53

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anindita Balslev
Denmark

Note: Anindita Balslev sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Andri Aasala
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:52

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Andri Aasala
Estonia

Note: Andri Aasala sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Castro
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or classified traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysis1.pdf>

--

Castro
United Kingdom

Note: Castro sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Giacomo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:51

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Giacomo
Italy

Note: Giacomo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carol Rifkin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carol Rifkin
United Kingdom

Note: Carol Rifkin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marita Jaschob
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:50

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marita Jaschob
United Kingdom

Note: Marita Jaschob sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: MS PATRICIA M CLOTHIER
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BA1 6RPEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In BA1 6RPrazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

MS PATRICIA M CLOTHIER
United Kingdom

Note: MS PATRICIA M CLOTHIER sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: TORI MARINA
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

TORI MARINA
Greece

Note: TORI MARINA sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ulrik Nielsen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ulrik Nielsen
Denmark

Note: Ulrik Nielsen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Robb
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:49

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Robb
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Robb sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Valentina Recla
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Valentina Recla
United Kingdom

Note: Valentina Recla sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nici Lilley
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nici Lilley
United Kingdom

Note: Nici Lilley sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j gray
United Kingdom

Note: j gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sally Scruton
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sally Scruton
United Kingdom

Note: Sally Scruton sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Nuño jimenez
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:48

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Nuño jimenez
Guatemala

Note: Nuño jimenez sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: David Cox
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

David Cox
United Kingdom

Note: David Cox sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Freda McCart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Freda McCart
United Kingdom

Note: Freda McCart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:47

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
United Kingdom

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Graham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Graham
United Kingdom

Note: Graham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: G.M.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:46

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

G.M.
United Kingdom

Note: G.M. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Fred
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Fred
United Kingdom

Note: Fred sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Bernie Perrett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Bernie Perrett
United Kingdom

Note: Bernie Perrett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olga Núñez Miret
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olga Núñez Miret
United Kingdom

Note: Olga Núñez Miret sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Marie Collett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:45

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Marie Collett
United Kingdom

Note: Marie Collett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rob Vanotterloo
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rob Vanotterloo
Netherlands

Note: Rob Vanotterloo sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: hugh walker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

hugh walker
United Kingdom

Note: hugh walker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kevin Sullivan
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kevin Sullivan
Ireland

Note: Kevin Sullivan sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jutta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:44

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jutta
The Netherlands

Note: Jutta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: teresa.nakes
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:43

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

teresa.nakes
United Kingdom

Note: teresa.nakes sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Catherine Wilson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Catherine Wilson
United Kingdom

Note: Catherine Wilson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Barritt
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Barritt
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Barritt sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dr Pete Sudbury
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dr Pete Sudbury
United Kingdom

Note: Dr Pete Sudbury sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kate McBride
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kate McBride
United Kingdom

Note: Kate McBride sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Burnett-Stuart
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Burnett-Stuart
United Kingdom

Note: James Burnett-Stuart sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Erik Johansson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Erik Johansson
Sweden

—

Note: Erik Johansson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mikael
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:42

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mikael
Denmark

Note: Mikael sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Irene Gray
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Irene Gray
United Kingdom

Note: Irene Gray sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jojo Ilewellyn
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jojo Ilewellyn
United Kingdom

Note: Jojo Ilewellyn sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: syd harrod
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

syd harrod
United Kingdom

Note: syd harrod sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Mary Lattimore
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Mary Lattimore
United Kingdom

Note: Mary Lattimore sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Paul Cooper
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Paul Cooper
United Kingdom

Note: Paul Cooper sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Waasifah Islam
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Waasifah Islam
United Kingdom

Note: Waasifah Islam sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Carpentier
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:41

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Carpentier
Belgium

Note: Carpentier sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rambling Rose
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rambling Rose
United Kingdom

Note: Rambling Rose sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Angela Horne
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Angela Horne
United Kingdom

Note: Angela Horne sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Olaf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Olaf
Germany

Note: Olaf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: james brown
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

james brown
United Kingdom

—

Note: james brown sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Par Svensson
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:40

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Par Svensson
Sweden

Note: Par Svensson sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Wendy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Wendy
United Kingdom

Note: Wendy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Pavel Martof
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:39

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Pavel Martof
Czech Republic

Note: Pavel Martof sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: James Parker
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

James Parker
Netherlands

Note: James Parker sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: John Goodman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:38

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

John Goodman
United Kingdom

Note: John Goodman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Sander Aavik
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Sander Aavik
Estonia

Note: Sander Aavik sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ed Fletcher
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ed Fletcher
United Kingdom

Note: Ed Fletcher sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Tina Le Breuilly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:37

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Tina Le Breuilly
United Kingdom

Note: Tina Le Breuilly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gareth
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gareth
United Kingdom

Note: Gareth sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrian McAlinden
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrian McAlinden
United Kingdom

Note: Adrian McAlinden sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Graham
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:36

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Graham
Ireland

Note: Ian Graham sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: weisz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Philippe Weisz
France

Note: Philippe WEISZ sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Stefan Kasprzyk
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Stefan Kasprzyk
United Kingdom

Note: Stefan Kasprzyk sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eoin kelly
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:35

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eoin kelly
Ireland

Note: Eoin kelly sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Julie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Julie
United Kingdom

Note: Julie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Susanne Hedman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Susanne Hedman
Sweden

—

Note: Susanne Hedman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Rachel Lovie
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Rachel Lovie
UK

—

Note: Rachel Lovie sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Stubbs
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:34

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Stubbs
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Stubbs sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Johan Ekblom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Johan Ekblom
Sweden

Note: Johan Ekblom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ian Humphrey
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ian Humphrey
United Kingdom

Note: Ian Humphrey sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: De Boer, N.
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

De Boer, N.
Netherlands

Note: De Boer, N. sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Saranon
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:32

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Saranon
Sweden

Note: Saranon sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Arjen de Vries
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Arjen de Vries
Netherlands

Note: Arjen de Vries sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Adrienne Young
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Adrienne Young
United Kingdom

Note: Adrienne Young sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Chris
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Chris
Germany

Note: Chris sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jonathan Caddy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:31

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jonathan Caddy
United Kingdom

Note: Jonathan Caddy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Isabel Cameron
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Isabel Cameron
United Kingdom

Note: Isabel Cameron sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eddie H Allen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eddie H Allen
United Kingdom

Note: Eddie H Allen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Lewin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Lewin
United Kingdom

to respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Dalia
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:30

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Dalia
Lithuania

Note: Dalia sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Alan Constable
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Alan Constable
United Kingdom

Note: Alan Constable sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Christian Åkerblad
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Christian Åkerblad
Sweden

Note: Christian Åkerblad sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Inger Nyman
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:29

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Inger Nyman
Sweden

Note: Inger Nyman sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lorenz Pauli
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:28

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lorenz Pauli
Germany

Note: Lorenz Pauli sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Zulphia Ginty
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:27

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Zulphia Ginty
United Kingdom

Note: Zulphia Ginty sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Doug
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Doug
United Kingdom

Note: Doug sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Michael Drew
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:26

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Michael Drew
New Zealand

Note: Michael Drew sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Hans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Hans
Netherlands

Note: Hans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Ivan A Derzhanski
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:25

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Ivan A Derzhanski
Bulgaria

Note: Ivan A Derzhanski sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jehan Master
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jehan Master
United Kingdom

Note: Jehan Master sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Karen Steele
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Karen Steele
Ireland

Note: Karen Steele sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: j.g.teunissen
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:24

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

j.g.teunissen
Netherlands

Note: j.g.teunissen sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Magnus Kennedal
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Magnus Kennedal
Sweden

Note: Magnus Kennedal sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Natalie Evans
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Natalie Evans
United Kingdom

Note: Natalie Evans sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: jessica
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

jessica
Germany

—

Note: jessica sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: M.Ludolf
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:23

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

M.Ludolf
United Kingdom

Note: M.Ludolf sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: mihaela
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

mihaela
Slovenia

Note: mihaela sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Markus Schlenz
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Markus Schlenz
Germany

Note: Markus Schlenz sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Kjell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Kjell
Sweden

Note: Kjell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: p.gifford
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

p gifford
United Kingdom

Note: p gifford sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Vitor Quinta
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:22

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Vitor Quinta
Portugal

Note: Vitor Quinta sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Thomas Wikstrom
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Thomas Wikstrom
Luxembourg

—

Note: Thomas Wikstrom sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Daniel Bem
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Daniel Bem
United Kingdom

Note: Daniel Bem sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Jen peters
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Jen peters
United States of America

Note: Jen peters sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anne Emmett
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anne Emmett
United Kingdom

Note: Anne Emmett sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gerhard Mara
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gerhard Mara
Austria

Note: Gerhard Mara sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Lora
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Lora
Sweden

Note: Lora sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Anita Bergin
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:21

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Anita Bergin
Ireland

Note: Anita Bergin sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Eamon O'Donnell
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Eamon O'Donnell
United Kingdom

Note: Eamon O'Donnell sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Scott
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Scott
United Kingdom

Note: Scott sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Gary smith
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Gary smith
United Kingdom

Note: Gary smith sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Helen kennedy
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Helen kennedy
United Kingdom

Note: Helen kennedy sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Colin Sherwood
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 21:01:20

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Colin Sherwood
United Kingdom

Note: Colin Sherwood sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org

From: Victoria Chadwick
To: NN-Consultation
Subject: Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation
Date: 15 July 2016 22:51:14

Dear Sir / Madam,

Please take this Stakeholder comment regarding the BEREC net neutrality guidelines creation into consideration.

- Net neutrality rules protect all of us from a corporate takeover of the Internet, as they foster diversity, equality, competition and innovation.
- If we allow 'fast lanes' for the highest bidder, everyone else will end up in a 'slow lane'. This discrimination would make it harder for independent media, start-ups and citizen movements like us to survive next to dominant players like Google and Facebook.
- I urge you to close all loopholes in the current proposals that would allow service providers to prioritise certain content and act as gatekeepers, through preferential treatment, "zero-rating" or class-based traffic management.
- In Brazil, the US and India, regulators have adopted strong net neutrality rules after an overwhelming response from ordinary citizens to their consultations. Now it's Europe's turn to protect an open and democratic Internet.

For this reason, I urge you to amend the current draft guidelines according to the following policy analysis:

<https://avaazimages.avaaz.org/GuidelinePolicyAnalysisPdf.pdf>

--

Victoria Chadwick
United Kingdom

Note: Victoria Chadwick sent you this message as part of an Avaaz campaign to keep the Internet free and open at <https://secure.avaaz.org/netneutrality>. To respond, please e-mail reply+netneutrality@Avaaz.org